THIS is the largest county in Scotland, though far from having the largest population; it extends from the MorayFirth to Loch Linnhe, at the head of the Firth of Lorn, a distance of nearly 80 miles, and from the borders of Banffshire, about 50 miles west of the North Sea, to the Atlantic Ocean, a distance, including Skye, of about 120 miles, and also includes parts of the Outer Hebrides. The whole surface comprises 4,090 square miles of land and 192 of lakes, or 2,784,884 acres, of which only about one eighteenth part is cultivated, and the moor and heath lands cover 1,636,325 acres. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badenoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Glengany in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glengary, Glenmorison, Glenshiel, &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Eigg, Muck, Rum and Canna; besides a number of small islands. The Caledonian Canal intersects the county from south-west to north-east, running through the chain of lochs which lie along the Great Glen of Albion. The population in 1891 consisted of 43,154 males, 46,163 females, total, 89,317, and in 1881 of 90,454; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 18,497, and in 1881, 17,215. This county is the first in Scotland in extent, though only ranking the eleventh in population.

Ancient History.—This shire was held by the Picts, and Saint Columba is said to have visited their king. The Romans penetrated thus far and had a camp (Banatia) 8 miles from Inverness; for many years the county was the field of constant encounters between rival clans, the successful chief generally obtaining from the king the keepership of the city castle. Edward I. of England captured this fortress in 1303, but was retaken by Bruce: from 1508 the Earls of Huntly held Inverness Castle until the year 1562. Montrose fought several battles here, and Cromwell erected (1657) a strong fort in its capital city. Prince Charles Edward landed at Arisaig, in the south-west angle of the county, in 1745, and left the same port next year on his return to France; Culloden having been fought on the north-east border in April of that year.

Surface, Soil, Produce, &c.—The greater part of the county is of a mountainous nature, especially on the western side; the most remarkable mountain being Ben Nevis, which rises 4,406 feet above sea level. This eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea, and from the summit in clear weather a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain; it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. One of its precipices is nearly 500 feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name, and at the opening of this valley the Marquess of Montrose achieved the brilliant victory of Inverlochy. On the summit is an Observatory, erected by the Scottish Meteorological Society, and about a hundred yards to the south of this is an hotel, which was opened in July, 1885. The other eminences in the county of considerable height are—Melfourvonie, 3,600; Scarsough, 3,412; and Craig Padrig, 1,150 feet respectively. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts, by a valley running from south-west to north-east, called Glen-more-na h' Alabin, or the "Great Glen of Albion;" through the greater part of its length are a connected succession of lakes. On the eastern side of the county agriculture is carried on more successfully than in the interior and on the western coast. Along the whole of the western division the climate is more humid than on the eastern side. On account of these characteristics, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the breeding of black cattle and sheep, especially the former. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer; the alpine and common hare and other species of game are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers, and additional roads were formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of large forests; the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey are supposed to be more than all the other natural woods of Scotland if summed together. The indigenous trees are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, sycamore, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry, are in the north-east, or Lowland quarter, yielding good crops. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, an improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. For some years past, great disaffection has existed among the small farmers, or crofters, as they are termed, by reason of inability to subsist on the production of their small holdings, and for their relief the "Crofters Acts, 1886-7-8," have been passed. The exports of the county are cattle, wool and corn; the skins of goats, deer, foxes, hares and rabbits; salmon, herrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hempen and thread manufactures. The spinning of flax and wool is the home occupation of the females over the whole county. Limestone is everywhere abundant; and in many parts are to be found marble, slate and granite, the latter said to be the most beautiful in the world. The chief crops are oats, 30,865 acres; turnips, 10,870; barley, 6,871; potatoes, 6,329 and hay, 17,746; the total corn crops being 38,414, and green crops, 17,389 acres; land under grass, 31,184 acres and permanent pasture, 62,921 acres. Total area of land and water is 2,784,884 acres The live stock in 1894 comprised 8,948 horses, 52,829 cattle, 643,097 sheep and 3,147 pigs. There are no minerals worked. Fishing is a staple industry of the county and the largest number of boats registered at any one port in Scotland in 1894 was that of Inverness, where 1,650 boats, aggregating a tonnage of 11,491, were registered, and employed 4,880 men and boys besides 1,800 extra hands, and there were also 70 boats, aggregating 281 tons and employing 209 hands, registered at Broadforth, Isle of Skye; 57 other vessels, equal 4,554 tons, were registered at Inverness.

Rivers and Lakes, Canals and Railways.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Firth; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire; the smaller rivers are the Beauly, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coiltrie, the Glass, the Morriston, the Enneric, the Kinnie, with others of still minor note; the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in one leap to the depth of 200 feet; a dense mist is continually seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The Caledonian Canal is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with each other and with the North Sea on one side, and the Atlantic on the other, by artificial watercourses and lochs, and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerly direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Firth, to Loch Eil; it was constructed at the expense of Government on a survey made in 1803-4, by Messrs. Telford and Jessop, engineers, showing the length of the combined lochs to be 37 miles 41 chains, and the requisite canals to be 21 miles 55 chains; it was finally opened in 1822; the highest level is between Lochs Orch and Lochy, 94 feet above high water at Inverness, and 90 above that at Fort William; the cost was close on £1,000,000, but it is only available for vessels of light draft. The county possesses several other lochs, the largest of which are Laggan, Arkaig, Garry, Treig and Eright and some sea lochs on the west coast, besides that of Beauly, at the end of the Moray Firth. The railways are the Highland line, from Grantown through the eastern part of the county by Boat of Garten, where it is joined by a branch running up the bank of the Spey, Kingussie and Dalwhinnie to Blair Athole and Perth; another branch coming in from Nairn enters the county near Fort George, runs to Inverness, where it crosses the canal and leaves at Beauly, and in the south the newly opened West Highland railway enters the county a little south of Loch Treig, and passing by Loch Loggan, Spean Bridge and Roy Bridge, trends south to Fort William and Banavie.

Division, Representation, &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends 26 parishes, and 10 parts of parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being Inverness, which is a royal burgh; it joins with Fortrose (in Ross-shire), Nairn (in the county of that name), and Forres (in Morayshire), in sending one member to Parliament; and the county of Inverness returns another representative. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 numbered 8,229. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (exclusive of railways, which amount to £22,091), £302,384.

ABERARDER, see DAVIOT WITH DUNLICHTY.

ABERNETHY is a parish in the north-east angle of the county, in Nairn poor combination, the kirktown of Abernethy being 5 miles east of Duthil and about 2 miles north of Nethy Bridge station on the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the North of Scotland railway, which joins the Highland railway at the latter station, giving communication with Perth and the south. The parish extends16miles from north to south by 11 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Elginshire, east by Banffshire and north and west by Duthil parish; the southern portion is mountainous and contains many of the Grampian hills, the largest of which, Cairngorm, is 4,084 feet above sea level; there are several lochs, Loch Morlich being the principal; the river Nethy, which gives the name to the parish (mouth of the Nethy), runs from the south through the parish to the Spey. Close to the church are the remains of Castle Roy, an old fortress of the Comyns, and there is a good hotel. The area comprises 78,058 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 1,354 and in 1881, 1,540.

Kincardine, in this parish, is 6 miles to the south-west.

Nethy Bridge is a small village in this parish, near which are the ruins of the old church of Inverallan, which is known to have been in existence as far back as 1230. There is a station here on the Strathspey line. Population returned with the parish.

ALVIE is a parish in the east of the county, very mountainous and of an irregular shape, intersected at its narrowest part by the river Spey and the Highland railway, the latter having a station at Kincraig in the parish and one at Aviemore, on its northern border; the extent of the parish from north-west to south is about 23 miles, and its breadth varies from 4 to 8 miles; the kirktown lies near the Spey, 10 miles south of Duthil, and there is a Mission church at Kincraig, 3 miles farther south-by-west. The principal inhabited portions lie along the rivers Spey and Feshie. On the right bank of the Spey stands Kinrara, a residence of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., P.C. In an old graveyard, close to the Spey, and not far from the house, are interred the remains of Jane, Duchess of Gordon, and on a rock in the same vale is a monument of granite, 90 feet high, to the late duke; this was raised by subscription, amounting to about £1,200, and near by is a cairn, in memory of highlanders who fell at Waterloo. Loch Alvie lies a little north of the kirktown. Three miles east of the village of Kingussie is Balavil, the seat of C. J. B. M'Pherson esq. D.L., J.P. and built by James M'Pherson esq. translator of some of Ossian s poems &c. Near to the house and roadside is a monument to the "bard of Morven;" and half-way between it and the village, a little off the road, is to be seen a cave of great antiquity and curiosity. Alexander Mackintosh esq. of Moy Hall; Sir John W. Ramsden bart. of Ardverikie; Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. of Ballandalloch; C. J. B. Macpherson esq. of Balavil and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon are the principal landowners. Lynwilg is a village in this parish, 2 miles south-west from Aviemore station. The area comprises 86,613 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 656, and in 1881, 707.

ARDERSIER is a parish on Inverness Firth, in the north of the county, its kirktown being about 12 miles north of Inverness, and it is in the poor combination of Nairn and small debt court district of Inverness; its extent is only 4 miles by 2½, and its boundaries are the parish of Petty on the south, Nairnshire on the east, Moray Firth on the north and Inverness Firth on the west; it contains part of the village of Campbeltown (which see) and on a spit of land projecting from the north-west angle of the parish into the Moray Firth stands Fort George, a regular fortification now disarmed, but mounting when erected between 70 and 80 guns and completely commanding the entrance to Inverness and the line of lochs below it. It was built in 1746 to overawe the highland clans, and is an irregular shaped polygon, having 6 bastions on the sea fronts with casemated curtains connecting them; the land front is covered by a ditch and glacis and has two lunettes and a ravelin, and it contains besides magazines and storehouses, quarters for a governor and about 90 other officers and 2,100 men. It has a fine entrance in the land front. The Fort George Railway station on the Highland line is 2½ miles south-east of the fort. There is a ferry below the fort with a small pier. Sir William Orr Ewing bart. of Gollanfield, the Earl of Cawdor and the Crown are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 3,824 acres; rateable value, £3,780; the population in 1891 was 1,914 and in 1881, 2,086; the numbers contained in Campbeltown and included in the above being 748 and 831 in the respective years.

BEAULY is a large village, in the parish of Kilmorack, and small debt court district of Inverness, at the mouth of the Beauly river, where it debouches into the basin of the same name, which forms the head of Inverness Firth, is 10 miles direct west from Inverness, on the edge of an extensive plain backed by hills, in the centre of which are the fine falls of Kilmorack. There is a small harbour, to which vessels of 150 tons can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consist of timber, grain and wool; the imports being principally coal and lime. There are branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, established here; and 3 miles north-east of the town is the Ord distillery. The Priory here, founded in 1230 by Sir John Bissett, of Lovat, stands close to the edge of the river: the first monks were reformed Cistercians brought from France by Bishop Malvoisin, of St. Andrew's, who planted them here, at Ardchattan and at Pluscardine; the last prior resigned the lands and buildings to Hugh, Lord Lovat, and little now remains but the church, which is ruinous, and used as a burial-place for the Frasers, Chisholms and Mackenzies, of Gairloch. At Wellhouse, near the village, is a mineral spring. Fairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they generally occur on the second or third Wednesday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trysts. There is good salmon fishing in the Beauly, in the vicinity of the Kilmorack Falls, which are noted for the breadth of water falling over. The population of the village in 1891 was 879, and in 1881, 915.

BOLESKINE with ABERTARFF form a united parish 24 miles in length, and from 10 to 12 in breadth, stretching along from the Pass of Inverfarigaig on the south side of Loch Ness to the east end of Loch Oich, embracing the great glen of Stratherrick, Foyers, the famed falls of Foyers, and the village of Fort Augustus (which see). White Bridge is a small village in this parish, 12 miles north-east of Fort Augustus. The kirktown of Boleskine, on the east bank of the river Foyers, is 20 miles south-west from Inverness. There is a pier at Foyers, on Loch Ness, at which David MacBrayne's steamers from Glasgow call three times a week, except from June to October, when there is a daily service. The pass of Inverfarigaig is about two miles long, and at some parts is so narrow as to barely permit of the construction of a road. About a mile up the pass is a monument to Dr. Bryce, a noted geologist, who was killed whilst in pursuit of his studies. The Falls of Foyers are about 3 miles from Inverfarigaig, on the road passing along the shores of Loch Ness, and the Falls of Cullachy and Garry are distant 2 and 8 miles respectively from Fort Augustus. Near the lower Falls of Foyers is the General's Hut (now the Lovat Arms Hotel), called after General Wade, who constructed most of the roads in the Highlands. The principal landowners are John Charles Cunninghame esq. D.L., J.P. Captain James Fraser, Lord Lovat, of Beaufort Castle, and William Sopper esq. The area comprises 110,047 acres; the population in 1891 was 1,438, and in 1881, 1,448.

CAMPBELTOWN is a large village, 11 miles north-east of Inverness city and composed of two portions; the Campbeltown, situated in the parish of Ardersier and the Stuartown in that of Petty; it is in the poor combination of Nairn and small debt court district of Inverness: the nearest railway station is that of Fort George, on the Highland line, about 2 miles distant, in the parish of Petty; the kirktown of Ardersier is about a mile north of this village, and Fort George barracks, 2 miles distant. Campbeltown is situated on the coast of Loch Beauly in a picturesque bay, and at the foot of an eminence called Cromwell's mount, on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification, and behind the view is very extensive, embracing parts of eight or nine counties. This place, which originated only from the residences of those connected with the garrison, is now a village of some pretensions, possesses many facilities for improvement, and has a strong chalybeate spring, which is much frequented by invalids. A public school is in the village. A fair is held annually on the 12th of August. The population in 1891 was 748, and in 1881, 831.

DUTHIL is a village and parish, near the eastern extremity of the county, and the latter extending from Aberdeenshire, its southern boundary, about 20 miles northward to the counties of Elgin and Nairn; the parish of Moy and Dalarossie lies on the west, and Abernethy on the east; a part of the parish of Cromdale was transferred by Boundary Order No. 112, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, to Duthil parish, which is in Nairn poor combination, and has three stations, viz.:—Aviemore, Carr Bridge and Boat of Garten on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway; the Great North of Scotland also run to Boat of Garten. The river Dulnan traverses the heart of the parish for nearly 12 miles, and the Spey flows along a considerable portion of the eastern border. The village, near the north bank of the Dulnan, and on the Inverness road, is about 4 miles north-west from Carr Bridge railway station.

Rothiemurchus is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Duthil, situated between the Cairngorm mountain and the river Spey.

Aviemore, a district near the south-western border of the parish, and a railway station, is 12½ miles south-west from Grantown.

Boat of Garten is a small village on the river Spey; it has a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the Great North of Scotland railway.

Carr Bridge, or "Bridge of Carr," is a small village in Duthil parish, and has the terminal station of a short branch from Aviemore on the Highland railway, 20 miles north-north-east from Kingussie, and 25 south-east from Inverness.

The principal landowners are the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the Dowager Countess Seafield, and John Peter Grant esq. D.L., J.P. of Doune of Rothiemurchus. The area comprises 71,927 acres; the population in 1891, including 437 from Cromdale, was 2,431, and in 1881, 1,664; in 1891 the ecclesiastical parish of Rothiemurchus had a population of 266.

FORT AUGUSTUS is a village and quoad sacra parish in the united parish of Boleskine and Abertarff, 30 miles north-east of Fort William, and 33 south-west of Inverness, and is situated at the foot of Loch Ness, just where the Caledonian Canal enters that fine sheet of water; the fort from which it took its name was built in 1729 by General Wade, as the centre of three forts constructed along the line of lakes extending from Loch Linnhe to Inverness; the southern one, Fort William, having been constructed some years before by General Monk, and intended to control the Highland clans, and prevent a renewal of the outbreak of 1715; in 1745, Prince Charles Edward's forces took Fort Augustus, but in the succeeding year it was recovered by the Duke of Cumberland, and continued to be a military station until 1867, when it was sold to Lord Lovat, and shortly afterwards the extensive Benedictine monastery was erected on its site; the moat and two of the bastions being left. The monastic buildings, which include a good Early English cloister, were designed by Mr. P. P. Pugin, and when complete will have attached to them a large church. The population in 1891 was 611, and in 1881, 530.

FORT GEORGE, see ARDERSIER.

FORT GEORGE STATION, see PETTY.

FORT WILLIAM is a town, port and police burgh in the parish of Kilmallie, in the Lorn poor combination, and is the head of a small debt court; it lies a little south of the entrance to the Caledonian Canal, at the head of Loch Linnhe, 65 miles south-west from Inverness. The fort from which it takes its name, standing at the east end of the town, was originally constructed by Cromwell, 1655, and rebuilt by William III.; it stood two sieges in 1715 and 1745, and is now dismantled. This place has been successively known by the names of Gordonsburgh, Duncansburgh and Maryburgh. The West Highland railway from Helensburgh has a station here, and a steamer plies daily to Oban, connecting with the railway there. Communication is maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Crinan canals daily during the summer, and twice a week in winter. The chief industry is that of distilling, but the town is also the centre of a large sheep farming district. Fishing is carried on to a small extent, and it is a place of considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. In the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, is a long established and sometimes very productive salmon fishery. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834 by the Society for Promoting the British Fisheries, and by subscriptions, at an expense of about £1,500. A suspension bridge of 250 feet span has been erected over the river Lochy by Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000. The town consists of a main street, which contains some good buildings, and the branches of the British Linen Co. Bank, the Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A number of substantial houses have been erected on the hill above the town, and some villas at the west end. Fort William is governed by Police Commissioners. The sheriff substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session, and a justice of the peace court is held on the third Tuesday in April and the fourth Tuesday in October. St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, begun and finished during the incumbency of the Rev. Canon Hugh MacColl, the present rector, was begun in 1879, opened in September, 1880, and completed in 1883-4, and is built on the site of the old church erected in 1817, and the cost has been met by local and outside aid, G. B. Davy esq. Spean Lodge, having been one of its most munificent benefactors; the style of architecture is Early French Gothic, and the building consists of chancel and nave with a tower and spire containing a peal of four bells, on the north side of the chancel, and a spacious sacristy on the south. The windows throughout are of stained glass, and the church affords 250 sittings; there is an excellent organ. In the baptistery there are memorial windows to Bishops Low, Ewing and Mackarness, of the diocese of Argyll and the Isles, and of Dr. Pusey, of Oxford. The carving of the south and west doors is very striking. There is also a very fine school in connection with this church. In 1847 an obelisk of granite, 30 feet high, was set up by Sir Duncan Cameron bart. In 1852 a monument was erected in High street, to the late William Kennedy esq. M.D. in commemoration of his professional skill and unwearied benevolence. The Belford Hospital, erected and endowed in 1865, by the late Andrew Belford, of Glenfintaig, for the inhabitants of Lochaber, is a plain but substantial building at the east end of the town, for 30 patients. A Fever Hospital, for 8 patients, connected with this institution, was erected in 1894. Half a mile from the town is a distillery, belonging to Messrs. D. P. M'Donald and Sons, another one belonging to the same firm being situated about two miles from Fort William. They manufacture the "Long John" whisky, and give employment to upwards of 200 hands. At the west end of the town Messrs. M'Donald have a pier for their own use. The principal hotels are the Chevalier, Caledonian, Imperial, Ben Nevis, Alexandra and West End. Fairs are held on the second Wednesdays in March, June, July and November. Donald Cameron J.P. of Lochiel, Sir John Stirling Maxwell bart. Corour, and Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Callart, are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 1,870, and in 1881, 1,594.

GLENELG is an extensive parish on the coast, at the western extremity of the mainland, about 20 miles in length from north to south by a breadth of 10 to 15; it is divided into three districts, viz.:—Glenelg, Knoydart and Morar by Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and is bounded on the north and north-west by the Sound of Sleat, on the north-east by the county of Ross, east by the parishes of Kilmonivaig and Kilmallie, and south by Ardnamurchan, and is in Lorn poor combination, and small debt court district of Fort William. The village is on Glenelg Bay, about 18 miles south-west from Strome Ferry terminal station of the Dingwall and Strome Ferry section of the Highland railway. The parish is hilly and mountainous, the most prominent heights are Ben Serial (3,196 feet), The Saddle (3,317 feet), Druim Cosaidh (2,558 feet) and Daorben (3,341 feet).

Knoydart is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Glenelg; it lies between Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and contains the village of Inverie on Inverie Bay, 10 miles south-east of the Isle of Ornsay.

Arnisdale is a village in the parish of Glenelg, situated about 13 miles south from the village of that name, on the northern shore of Loch Hourn.

Morar is a district on the southern border of the parish; it lies between Loch Nevis and Loch Morar.

The principal landowners are E. D. Bowlby esq. of Knoydart, James Evan Bruce Baillie esq. M.P., J.P., D.L. of Dochfour, Lord Lovat, of Beaufort Castle, Beauly, and Robert Birkbeck esq. of Loch Hourn Head, Glenelg. The soil is various, some portions fertile, and agriculture and fishing are the chief occupations of the inhabitants. The area of the entire parish comprises 134,778 acres; rateable value, £6,919; the population in 1891 was 1,503, and in 1881, 1,601; the ecclesiastical parish of Knoydart in 1891 had a population of 383.

INVERNESS.

INVERNESS, the capital of the Highlands, and of the large county of its name, and the head of a poor combination, is situated on the banks of the river Ness, near to its confluence with the Beauly Firth, and commands the eastern approach to the Great Glen of Scotland (Glen-more-na-h'-Albyn). The distance by rail from Edinburgh is 195 miles N.N.W., via Fife, and 213, via Stirling; 108½ N. by W. from Aberdeen; 208 N. from Glasgow; 199½ N.W. from Dundee; 168 S. from Thurso; 144 N.N.W. from Perth; 25 S.W. from Forres; and 37 S.W. from Elgin. We learn from Richard's "Itinerary" (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170) that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the "Jus Latinitatis;" only two others in Scotland are mentioned—Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Boethius assigns as the scene of Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect. Shakspere's play of "Macbeth" has served to make the place historically famous. It is supposed to have stood a short distance east of the town, upon an eminence called the "Crown," at the north-east corner of which there are still extensive remains. After the fall of Macbeth, Malcolm Canmore destroyed it, and erected a new castle, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up during the rebellion. The County Buildings now stand upon its site.

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, and in its great charter "its good and pleasant situation" is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh. Inverness is a royal burgh of great antiquity, having, it is said, received a charter in 1067 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. Its great, or, as it is called, "golden" charter, is that which was granted by James VI. in 1591, and which confirms previous grants. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one, who have the management of considerable charitable funds. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Nairn, Forres, and Fortrose, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail, with magnificence as a whole, uniting the characters of a rich, open, lowland country, with those of the wildest Alpine scenery, while to all is added a series of maritime views; the walks in the neighbourhood are picturesque, whether along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, or along the sea shore, or by the margin of the canal; or to the singularly-shaped hill of Tomnahurich, or "hill of the fairies" (which, with singular appropriateness has been converted into a cemetery), or to the summit of Craig Phadric (the vitrification of which affords matter of speculation to the antiquarian); to the Druidical circles in the "Leys;" to Clava, a literal "City of Tombs," or to Drumossie Moor, where the last of the Stuarts, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," sustained his final defeat, and "the clans of Culloden were scattered in flight;" in each and all of these directions there is much to please and interest. A large part of its population consists of retired gentlemen, and the aristocracy of the neighbourhood is numerous. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern part of the Ness—a broad, clear, and equably flowing stream—which is here crossed by a suspension bridge erected at the expense of the Government, and maintained by an annual assessment levied over the northern counties; this structure, costing £26,000, takes the place of the old stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1688, which, on the 25th of Jan. 1849, was carried away by the overflowing of the river. There are in addition two suspension bridges for foot passengers, the lower of which was opened on the 2nd of May, 1882: the stout wooden traffic bridge, erected in 1807 at the lower part of the town, which had done duty for nearly 100 years, was replaced at the end of the year 1895 by a modern lattice girder one, 28 feet wide, the entire length being 350 feet, and costing about £7,000.

The principal streets in the business parts of the town are Union street, immediately opposite the railway station, High street, Church street, Academy street, Castle street, and Bridge street, which contain many fine public buildings and places of business. The Castle of Inverness is pre-eminent as much for its architectural beauty as for its commanding position. This modern edifice was built in 1836 upon the site of the old castle erected by Malcolm Canmore, as before mentioned, at a cost of £10,000, for the accommodation of the county courts and the courts of justiciary in the northern circuit, and for the preservation of the records and transactions of the judicial business of the county: it is built from the design of Mr. Burn, architect, Edinburgh, after the old English castellated style. It contains a courtroom, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business. In the court house is a painting, by Raeburn, of the late Charles Grant, of Glenelg, long M.P. for the county; and in a niche of the staircase is a bust, by the late Patrick Park, R.S.A., of the late William Fraser-Tytler, of Aldourie, many years sheriff and convener of the county. Being the seat of the sheriff of the county, the courts of that functionary are held here. The sheriff's ordinary court is held every Thursday and the small debt court every Friday during session time, for the recovery of sums not exceeding £12; and a justice of peace court is held monthly for adjudicating claims not exceeding £5 in amount. Her Majesty's Prison adjoins the court house buildings, and is in the castellated style.

The Town Hall, which occupies the site of the old structure facing the Exchange, owes its origin in 1873, when Mr. Grant bequeathed £5,000 for the purpose of aiding in its erection, and the foundation stone was laid in 1878, by Mr. Alexander Simpson, then provost. The style of architecture is Early Decorated Gothic, with details of a French character, and the building occupies an area of about 700 square yards, with a frontage of 73 feet to High street. It is mainly two storeys in height, the different floors being well marked by base and string courses, and the wall head finished at a height of 47 feet by an ornamental parapet. The centre portion has a richly ornamented gable flanked by round towers, and an oak spirelet surmounts the whole, and the town's arms occupy the middle of the portion over the centre window. In front is the main staircase, which is lighted by three windows, the rear filled with stained glass containing the town's arms, the royal arms, and the Scottish arms respectively, and on either side of the staircase on the ground floor are the offices of the town clerk and town chamberlain. The Town Hall is 66 feet long, 35 feet broad and 33 feet high; the ceiling is of pitch pine panelled and richly decorated with heraldic emblems, and above the centre of the three doorways is the orchestral gallery with musicians' room behind. The hall is lighted by fourteen windows filled with stained glass bearing the arms of the Highland clans. The central stained window was the gift of Mrs. Warrand, of Bught. The end windows show subjects representing Arts, Science, Law, Agriculture, Education, Literature, Arms of the Corporate Trades of the burgh, and the Royal and Scottish Arms. The hall contains portraits of Prince Consort, and Duncan Forbes, of Culloden, James Robertson of Aultnaskiach, and Sir Henry C. Macandrew, former provosts; a fine copy of Ramsay's original portrait of Flora Macdonald, President Forbes, Hector Munro, of Fowlis, some time M.P. for the burgh, and a bust of the late Rev. Dr. Macdonald of the High Church, by A. Davidson, an Inverness sculptor of more than local fame, and also a bust of the late Dr. Carruthers, by Alexander Munro. A residence for the janitor occupies the top of the building, the council chamber the west end of the Castle wynd elevation, and the provost's room the east end or Castle street elevation. The building was formally opened by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh on the 19th January, 1882, and cost about £15,000. A fountain, the gift of Dr. George Forbes, occupies the front of the Exchange. Underneath the fountain rests the time honoured palladium of the burgh—Clachnacuddin. Sir Walter Scott calls this stone the Charter Stone of the Burgh, and in "Anderson's Guide" it is said "natives of Inverness in all parts of the world turn with fond affection to friends round the Clachnacuddin." The word is Celtic and means the "stone of the tubs," for it was here the young women used to rest their tubs when coming from the river Ness, and around it the old burghers gathered for their social talk.

The Highland Club House, in High street, a substantial structure, was originally an hotel. The Young Men's Christian Association, at the corner of High street and Castle street is an ornamental building, costing about £3,500, and consists of library, hall, and class rooms. A fine theatre has been erected on the east side of the river in Bank street, the architects being Messrs. Matthews and Lawrie, late of Inverness. The Free Library, Museum, and School of Science and Art, in Castle wynd, completed at a cost of £3,800, and opened on the 14th October, 1881, by Joseph Mitchell esq. of Viewhill, consists of library, museum, class rooms, and curator's house. The library contains 7,000 volumes, and is supported by a small rate levied on the owners and occupiers of property in the town. At the head of Bridge street is a spire on the site of the former gaol, which it originally surmounted, rising to a height of 130 feet, and erected in 1701. This town is the favourite head-quarters of the Northern Meeting held annually in Sept. composed of noblemen and gentlemen in the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands. They have large and elegant rooms in Church street, and a pavilion and park. The Inverness Farmers' Society, and numerous other institutions, hold their meetings in the town at stated periods.

The extensive range of military barracks, completed in 1884, erected by Government on the Hut of Health, are about a mile to the north-east of the town. These cost about £50,000. Inverness being the head-quarters of its territorial regimental district No. 79, and is the head-quarters of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders. The town is also the head-quarters of two battalions of infantry (militia and volunteers), and a brigade of volunteer artillery, the town contributing 800 volunteers between artillery and infantry. The Working Men's Club, in Bridge street, is a building which owes its origin and present position to the liberality of the late Donald M'Dougall esq. Dunolly Cottage. It possesses an extensive library, inclusive of a contribution of books received from H.M. the Queen; and it also contains a reading room, billiard room and lecture hall, and is held in trust by the Town Council. The suburbs of the town—Millburn, Midmills, The Crown, Drummond, Lower Drummond, and Ballifeary—have extended very much during the past few years and contain many handsome villas.

The Northern Infirmary, erected in 1803, and situated on the west bank of the river, between the Ness Islands and the town, is a large and well-constructed building, with an imposing exterior. The Inverness Forbes Dispensary for the sick poor, in Huntly street, is also a good building, supported by voluntary contributions. The Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, on Hill terrace, is an old school building, purchased from the School Board, and converted into a commodious home for blind persons in the northern counties: it contains dining hall, class rooms, workshop, dormitories, and matron's and servants' rooms, and was opened in March, 1881. The cost of the building and re-construction would be about £2,000, and it has accommodation for 18 blind persons. In it the blind are taught to read and write, and do various descriptions of fancy and other work. Four educational institutions must be noticed as highly efficient. The College, situated on the west side of the town, founded in 1873, originally cost over £9,000, and was designed by Mr. Alexander Ross, of Inverness. The Royal Academy, a liberally-endowed institution, in Midmills road, was established in 1792, for the purpose of supplying a higher education: the building, erected in 1894 at a cost of over £8,000, is of red sandstone, in the Elizabethan style. The Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's School, was established in 1842, by bequest of the late Dr. Bell LL.D. of Madras, for the benefit of the middle and humbler class of children, who are instructed in all the useful branches of an English education. The school was in 1888 transferred to the School Board. The premises form an elegant building, in an open and airy situation on the east side of the town in Margaret street, off Academy street. The front is embellished by a beautiful row of fluted columns. The High Public School, on Kingsmills road, and erected at a cost of about £8,000, is managed by the local School Board. The other board schools are complete and commodious structures.

The religious edifices comprise the High Parish church, Church street, an ancient structure with tower and spire; and the Gaelic Parish church, also in the same street; West Parish church, Huntly street; Free High church, Bank street, a modern erection, with an imposing spire; North Free church, in Bank street, erected in 1893, a substantial stone building in the Classic style, designed by Mr. John Pond-Macdonald, of Inverness; East Free church, Academy street; West Free church, Upper Kessock street; United Presbyterian church, Union street; Wesleyan Methodist chapel, Inglis street; Roman Catholic chapel, Huntly street; St. John's Episcopal chapel, Church street and the Episcopal cathedral in Ardross street. The county of Inverness was anciently divided between the sees of Moray and Ross, but is now included in the united diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness, and the Episcopal cathedral of St. Andrew at Inverness has been constituted the head of the see. The cathedral, finely situated on the west bank of the river Ness, was erected at a cost of over £20,000, the foundation stone being laid 17 Oct. 1866, by the late Dr. Longley, then Archbishop of Canterbury, and the edifice opened for divine service in Sept. 1869: it is built of light red sandstone from Conon quarry, near Dingwall, with dressings of Covesea freestone, in the Early Decorated style, from designs by Mr. Alex. Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of apsidal choir, transepts, clerestoried nave, aisles, octagonal chapter house and western towers; the length of the nave is 90 feet and of the choir and apse 60 feet; the width across the nave and aisles is also 60 feet, and the total length, measured externally, 166 feet; the towers, each 100 feet high, are arranged in four stages, with double buttresses at the angles, and the belfry storeys have a triplet of lights in each face; it was originally intended to add spires, but the towers are at present finished with a simple arcaded parapet; in the north tower is a fine peal, provided and hung by subscription, as a memorial to the Most Rev. Robert Eden D.D. Bishop of Moray, Ross and Caithness, 1851-86, and Primus of Scotland: there is a fine western doorway under a lofty triangular head, filled with open tracery and enriched with crocketing; the pinnacled buttresses on either side, as well as those of the tower, are ornamented with canopied niches, and some of these contain statues; the lower stage of the north tower forms a porch and has an elegant arched entrance, and the corresponding stage of the south tower serves as a baptistery: the west end of the nave, between the towers, is enclosed by a stone screen, and above the crossing rises a graceful open lantern with crocketed spirelet.

Commerce, Trade, &c.—At the town harbour and Thornbush quay, and also at the Caledonian Canal wharves, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, potatoes, wool, timber, salmon, &c. The imports comprise timber, Archangel tar, guano, and wheat. There are ship and boat building yards, three manufactories for woollen cloths, a tobacco manufactory, two breweries, several aerated water manufactories, two iron foundries, and three distilleries. The Canal basin has every facility for carrying on an extensive trade. There are no fewer than nine banking companies established in Inverness, and a savings bank. The premises of the Caledonian Bank, erected in 1849, form a handsome building on the north side of High street; it is of freestone, having a row of elegant Corinthian columns in front. The following newspapers are issued from the press of Inverness:—The "Courier," on Tuesday and Friday; the "Northern Chronicle" on Wednesday, the "Highland News" on Saturday, and the "Scottish Highlander" on Thursday. During the summer months large numbers of visitors come to the town, accommodation for whom can be found in the hotels which Inverness is noted to contain. Principal among these are the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station; the Royal, opposite the railway station; the Caledonian, in Church street; the Waverley Temperance Hotel, in Union street; the Imperial, in Academy street, and the Palace Hotel and the Victoria, on Ness walk. Inverness being the centre to which the principal lines of road in the Highlands converge—having the Caledonian Canal on the one hand, and the Moray Firth on the other—maintains a rapid, frequent, and easy intercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom. It is also the head-quarters of the Highland Railway, whose large works afford employment to about a thousand artisans, besides numerous officials. It is in regular communication by rail with Wick and Thurso in the north; with Strome Ferry, the terminus of the Dingwall and Skye railway on the west coast (from which the company's steamers sail to Portree in Skye, and MacBrayne's steamers to Stornoway, Glasgow, &c.), and with Aberdeen, Perth, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the rest of the kingdom.

Markets and Fairs.—The Beauly, or Muir of Ord, are the most important cattle fairs, and are held on the Muir of Ord, on the third Thursday of January; on the third Thursday of February; the third Wednesday and Thursday of March; the third Wednesday and Thursday of April; the second Wednesday and Thursday of May; the third Wed. and Thursday of June; the second Thursday of July, for half bred sheep; and the third Wednesday and Thursday for sheep and cattle; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in August; the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in September; the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in October; the Wednesday and Thursday before Edinburgh Hollow fair in November; and the Thursday after the third Wednesday in December. At all the markets, Wednesday is the principal day for the sale of sheep and lambs, and is held exclusively for that purpose; and Thursday for the sale of cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, &c. The Inverness markets are held on Friday following the Muir of Ord markets.

We have extracted, with a few alterations, from "Anderson's Guide to the Highlands" (an able, scientific, and well got up work), the following list of objects in and about Inverness worthy of being visited by strangers:—

CONVEYANCE BY WATER.

Inverness, the Western Isles & Glasgow.

The Steamers of David MacBrayne (Glasgow) ply regularly during the year between Inverness & Glasgow, via Caledonian & Crinan Canals. A steamer leaves Inverness daily (sunday excepted), carrying H.M. mails to Lochness & Fort Augustus at 3 p.m., & leaves Fort Augustus every morning (sunday excepted), at six. This service is in connection with the limited mail trains to & from the South. In the summer months there is additional communication each way by swift steamers, viz. during May & June, from Inverness & Glasgow, on Monday, Wednesday & Friday, at 7 a.m. & daily during July, August & September. In connection with these, from Oban, the company's steamers ply to Staffa & Iona, Glencoe, Skye & Gairloch, Stornoway, &c. Steamers carrying goods as well as passengers leave Inverness & Glasgow twice a week (monday & thursday) during the whole year. Steamers likewise ply regularly (twice a week in summer & once a week in winter) from Glasgow to Oban, Tobermory, Portree & Stornoway, calling at the various intermediate ports in Mull & Skye; also fortnightly at Gairloch, Ullapool, Lochinver, Lochmaddy & Tarbert (Harris). Passengers & goods from Inverness for these places change steamers at Oban. There is also a daily mail steamer between Oban & Tobermory, & Oban & Fort William; also daily between Strome & Portree & Strome & Stornoway, three times weekly from Portree, Tarbert (Harris), Rodel, Lochmaddy & Dunvegan.

ISLE OF ORNSAY, see SLEAT (ISLE OF SKYE).

KILMALIE is a parish, partly in this county and partly in Argyllshire (which see); the portion in this county lying in two parts, one on the east of Loch Linnhe, from Fort William south to Ballachulish, and the other westward of the Caledonian canal, from Achnacarry to Loch Quoich, the boundary parishes being Lismore and Appin on the south, Kilmonivaig on the north and Glenelg on the west; it is in the Lorn poor combination, and contains the burgh of Fort William (which see) and the villages of Ballachulish North and Onich. The parish church of Kilmalie is in Corpach village, in the Argyllshire portion of the parish. The newly-opened West Highland railway, connecting at Helensburgh with the North British railway, has its terminus at Fort William.

Ben Nevis, the chief object of attraction in this district is the highest attainable point in the British Isles, being 4,406 feet above the level of the sea. This mountain is visited annually by upwards of 5,000 people, and upon the summit the Scottish Meteorological Society have erected a permanent Observatory, opened in November, 1883, and cost nearly £6,000, raised mainly by public subscription. The ascent to the summit is now rendered comparatively easy by a winding path or bridle road from the county road at Achintee, which has been constructed and is kept in repair at a great expense by the directors of the Observatory. A charge of one shilling is made for each person who makes use of this path in ascending the mountain, and three shillings for each person on horseback. Those who wish to use the path are supposed to provide themselves with the necessary road-permits before starting, and to show them to the caretaker of the road. These road-permits give the purchaser the privilege of using the visitors' room at the Observatory, which is connected with the post office by telegraph, and visitors can send telegrams from the summit to any part of the world. Many tourists ascend Ben Nevis at evening, in order to see the sun rising in the German Ocean. Should they be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region when it is fine, and unobscured by clouds or mist, the view will amply compensate for the toil. There are now upon the summit refreshment rooms, with sleeping accommodation, open during the tourist season. At the Observatory, observations are recorded every hour of the day and night, and copies of the daily records are sent to the Meteorological offices at Edinburgh and London, and a summary of the weather is telegraphed daily to the leading newspapers. In 1890 the Society established a low level station at Fort William, where a continuous record of the weather is made by self-recording apparatus, provided by the London Meteorological Council, who also give £250 annually towards its support, the remainder being met by contributions of members or by public subscriptions, which are received through Mr. R. T. Omond, the superintendent, or the honorary treasurer, Mr. James Sorley.

Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel; Sir John Stirling Maxwell bart. of Covour and Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Callart, are the principal landowners. The area of the portion in Inverness-shire comprises 169,641 acres; the population in 1891 was 2,908, of whom 1,870 were in Fort William, and in 1881, 2,716, with 1,594 in that town. The area in the entire parish comprises 273,816 acres; rateable value, £20,303, and the population in 1891 was 4,205 and 1881, 4,157.

Ballachulish North is a village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Kilmalie, on the north shore of Loch Leven, about 12 miles south from Fort William. This place has a small church of the Establishment, and also Free and Episcopalian churches. The Bishop of Argyle and the Isles has his seat here.

Onich is a village in this parish, one mile westward from Ballachulish North, at the entrance of Loch Leven, and contains several handsome residences. A steamer calls here daily.

Achnacarry is a hamlet on the west shore of Loch Lochy in this parish, and has a Mission church of the Establishment.

KILMONIVAIG is an extensive parish in the south-western part of the county, about 45 miles in length and varies in breadth from 5 to 25 miles; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ross and the parish of Glenmoriston and Urquhart, on the north-east by Boleskin and Abertarff, on the east by Laggan, south-east by Argyllshire, south-west by the parish of Kilmallie and east by Glenelg, and is in the Lorn poor combination. The kirktown is on the north bank of the river Spean, 9½ miles north-east from Fort William and close to Spean Bridge station on the West Highland railway. Loch Lochy and Loch Oich form part of the Caledonian canal, which crosses the parish from Inverlochy on the south-west border to Invergarry, at the mouth of Glen Garry, in the north-east. The parish is mountainous, the most prominent heights being Ceanna Mhaim, 2,203 feet, in the north; Ben Tue, 2,956 feet, and Ben Choire, 3,066 feet, below Glen Garry; Creag Meaghaiah, 3,700 feet, in the east; Agnach Beag, 4,060 feet; Stob Ben, 3,237 feet; Benna Lap, 3,066 feet, and Carn Dearg, 3,084 feet, in the north. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Inverlochy Castle, rebuilt by order of the Scottish Government in the reign of Edward I. of England, by one of the Cumyn family; the western tower being still called Cumyn tower. It consists of four large round towers, 30 feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, 20 feet high and 10 feet thick, forming a quadrangle of large dimensions; the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed. Adjoining the ruins is Inverlochy House, the seat of Lord Abinger. On the west bank of the river Lochy and east of the canal are the ruins of Tor Castle.

Glengarry (which see) is a quoad sacra parish partly in this parish and partly in Glenelg and Boleskin and Abertarff.

The principal landowners are Lord Abinger J.P. and Sir John Stirling-Maxwell bart. The area comprises 267,071 acres; rateable value, £24,920; the population in 1891 was 2,205, and in 1881, 1,928.

KILMUIR, see ISLE OF SKYE.

KILTARLITY and CONVINTH, originally separate parishes, now form a united parish in the north-western part of the county, about 30 miles in length; it is bounded on the north-west by the parish of Kilmorack, on the east by Kirkhill and Inverness and on the south-east by Urquhart and Glenmoriston and is in the small debt court district of Inverness. The village is on Belladrum burn, about 5 miles south from Beauly station on the Thurso and Wick section of the Highland railway. Under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, boundary order 63, the parish now contains a part of Kilmorack. Beaufort Castle is the seat of Lord Lovat, chief of the clan Fraser; and Ballindown is the residence of Mrs. Clarke. Agriculture is the chief industry.

Erchless is a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parishes of Kilmorack and Kiltarlity in this county and Kintail in Ross and Cromarty.

Struy, Hughton, Glackbea and Tomich are hamlets.

The principal landowners are Lord Lovat, Lord Tweedmouth, Mrs. Chisholm, of Erchless, and Archibald William Merry esq. D.L. of Belladrum. The area comprises 61,896 acres; rateable value, £11,659; the population in 1891 was 1,878, and in 1881, 2,134. In 1891 the ecclesiastical parish of Erchless had a population of 598.

KINCRAIG, see ALVIE.

KINGUSSIE and INSH form a united parish in the south-east of the county, at the head of Strathspey, and the first name, which means end of the pine wood, is given to a large village and police burgh on the banks of the Spey, with a station on the Forres and Perth section of the Highland railway, 44 miles south-east by road, but 73 by rail, from Inverness, and 25 south-west of Grantown. The parish extends 20 miles from north to south by about 3 to 10 in breadth; some miles to the south-west is the station of Talloch, on the new West Highland railway, which is to serve Loch Laggan and Kingussie, and will to some extent supersede the old coach road by Loch Laggan to Fort William. An iron bridge over the Spey, erected by the third or Badenoch District Committee of the County Council, was opened for traffic December, 1894. The Police Act was adopted by the burgh in 1867. Water has been introduced by gravitation, at a considerable cost. Several fairs are held at Kingussie during the year, but the days for holding are for the most part regulated by those at Beauly and Falkirk. The County Building is for the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch, and a sheriff small debt court is held in January, May and September. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the places of worship being still visible. One of the cemeteries is named after St. Columbus. On the south bank of the river, opposite the village, stand the ruins of Ruthven Castle, burnt down in 1745, after being captured by Prince Charles Edward's forces. It was a place of great antiquity and note, having been the residence of Walter Cumming, Lord of Badenoch, and his ancestors, who at one period held sway over almost all the Highlands of Scotland, but his oppression and tyranny became so intolerable that the Clan Chattan (M'Pherson) threw off the yoke, and expelled him from the country. Here the clans, dispersed at Culloden, reassembled to the number of about 8,000 under Lord George Gordon, but Prince Charles ordered them to break up. About five miles from Kingussie, on the Perth road, is Invernahavon Moor, celebrated for a hard-fought battle between the clans Macintosh and Cameron, and in which Cluny and the M'Phersons ultimately interfered, the consequences of which gave occasion, 16 years afterwards, for the bloody contest between 30 M'Phersons and the same number of Davidsons, on the North Inch of Perth, in presence of King Robert III. of Scotland and his court, from which eleven of the former and only one of the latter returned alive, and all seriously wounded. James E. B. Baillie esq. M.P. of Dochfour, owns the whole of the village of Kingussie.

Newtonmore is a village in this parish, 3 miles south of Kingussie, and a station on the Highland line. There is an Established Mission church. The principal landowner is Charles J. B. Macpherson esq. D.L., J.P. of Balavie. Population in 1891 was 364, and in 1881, 306.

Dalwhinnie, also in the parish, and 10 miles further south near the head of Loch Ericht, is situated on the heights of the forest of Badenoch, on the Highland road to Inverness from the south, 56½ miles from Inverness. There is a station here on the Highland line. The principal landowner is Sir John W. Ramsden bart. of Ardverikie Lodge, Laggan.

The area of the parish comprises 116,182 acres; rateable value, £17,793; the population in 1891 was 1,948, including 740 in the police burgh, and in 1881 was 1,987, with 645 in the burgh.

LAGGAN is a village and extensive parish in the district of Badenoch, extending from east to west, a distance of 18 miles and north to south about 22, bounded by the parish of Boleskine on the north, Kingussie on the east, by the mountains of Perthshire on the south, and by Kilmonivaig on the west. The village is on the river Spey, 10 miles south-west from Kingussie, about 23 south-east from Fort Augustus, and 7 south-west from Newtonmore station on the Perth, Forres and Inverness section of the Highland railway. The river Spey, which takes its rise from a small lake of the same name in the western part of the parish, runs through in an easterly direction, receiving in its course the waters of the Mashie and Trium, both of which have their rise in the Grampians. Loch Laggan, a beautiful lake, extending about 8 miles in length by one in breadth, lies on the south-west extremity of the parish. Ben Alder, 3,757 feet, Ben Eiblaun, 3,611 feet, and Beinn a' Chlachain, 3,569 feet above sea level, are peaks in the Grampian Mountains. Ardverikie Lodge, a shooting establishment on the south-eastern bank of Loch Laggan, is the property of Sir John W. Ramsden bart. D.L.; the lodge was erected by the late Duke of Abercorn, and Her Majesty resided here for about six weeks in the year 1846. Eight miles south-west of Kingussie, on the Fort William road, stands Cluny Castle, the seat of Brigadier-General Ewen H. D. Macpherson D.L., J.P. the chief of the Clan Chattan. The principal landowners are Brigadier-Gen. Macpherson, Lieut.-Col. Lachlan Macpherson J.P., D.L. of Glentruim, and Sir John W. Ramsden bart. D.L., J.P. of Ardverikie. The area comprises 150,106 acres; the population in 1891 was 857, and in 1881, 917.

ISLE OF SKYE.

THE Isle of Skye is a large island off the north-western coast of the mainland of this county, from which it is separated by Sleat Sound and Kyle Rhea; Loch Alsh, Kyle Akin and the Inner Sound dividing its northern portion from Ross-shire. It comprises the parishes of Bracadale, Duirinish, Kilmuir, Portree, Sleat, Snizort and Strath and the quoad sacra parish of Stenchol. The village of Portree, on the east side of the island, is the capital and contains the sheriff's court, while the seven parishes form the poor combination of Skye. Its length from north to south is 45 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; its shape is very irregular and its coast is deeply indented by sea lochs, the largest being Loch Snizort on the north, running about 8 miles into the land, Loch Eishart on the south-west, about 7 miles and Loch Follart on the north, about 6 miles; the first and last of these lochs divide the northern head of the island into 3 promontories, Duirinish, Vaternish and Trotternish, the latter and eastern being the district which is connected with the wanderings of Prince Charles Edward in 1746, and it also contains the two remarkable groups of mountains known as the Quiraing and the Storr Rock. The principal mountainous district in the island lies between Loch Eishart on the south of Broadford and a line drawn from Portree to Struan Inn, a little east of Loch Bracadale, and including in its south-eastern corner the Cachullin Hills, which rise to 3,260 feet above sea level, and contain the celebrated weird fresh water loch of Coruisk, a sheet of water about 2½ miles long, entirely inclosed by lofty hills. There are many small rivers falling into the different bays and sea lochs (which latter number at least 16 large lochs). At Loch Slappin is a celebrated spar cave. The island was celebrated for its race of pipers, and a sort of college for pipers existed at Bororaig. There are several forts and castles along the coast, some ruined and a few still occupied and kept up, the principal being Armadale, Duntulm and Dunvegan (inhabited), Knock, Castle Moil and Eilean Donan, while near the head of Loch Snizort stands the house of Kingsburgh, on the site of the old house to which Flora Macdonald, by the advice of Lady Margaret Macdonald, guided Prince Charlie when they landed from South Uist. The seven parishes (which include some smaller neighbouring islands) comprise an area of 428,966 acres and the island is mostly in the hands of three large proprietors, who between them own about 300,000 acres. In 1891 the population of the seven parishes was 16,573. The island is principally occupied as grazing farms, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle and some small horses, but a large portion of the land is rented by what are termed crofters, who combine farming and fishing for a livelihood. In 1884 an agitation arose amongst them for a thorough revision of the terms on which they hold the land, the crofters going to the extreme measure of defying the law officers, supported by the military, who were enforcing the demands of the landowners. The agitation caused such a popular feeling on their behalf that a land bill, considerably in their favour, was passed by Parliament. Formerly great quantities of kelp were produced here. The fisheries off this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the mainland, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the Isle of Ornsay on the south, and Dunvegan and Stein on the north. At Broadford a stone pier, 700 feet long, was completed in 1892, at a cost of £10,000, and affords good accommodation; it was erected by the Fishery Board, through the aid of a loan from Lord Macdonald. There is a steamer pier at Kyle Aikin and a ferry to the mainland, and a small harbour at Uig in Loch Snizort. The fairs in Skye are held as follow:—May, Broadford cattle, Thursday after last Tuesday; Portree cattle, last Tuesday. August, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday; Sligichan, Monday before Portree. September, Broadford cattle; Thursday after third Tuesday; Sligichan cattle, third Tuesday.

BRACADALE is a parish, occupying the west side of the centre of this island, bounded west by the Little Minch, south by Loch Scavaig, east by Portree parish and north by Snizort and Duirinish; it extends 20 miles from north to south by 10 in breadth and includes the islands of Soay and Wiay. Steamers from Oban call at Loch Scavaig with visitors for Loch Coruisk and Airds Cave. This parish is in the small debt court district of Portree and the Skye poor combination; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Struan; 6 miles north-west from Portree; in the parish are also the hamlets of Talisker, Drynock, and Carbost, at which latter place there is a distillery, but the principal occupation of the inhabitants is agriculture. The southern portion of the parish is occupied by the Cuchallin Hills, a group of mountains which rise to a height of 3,261 feet above the sea level, and enclosed in the irregular square formed by the inner sides of these hills, and about a mile from the head of Loch Scavaig, lies a sheet of water about 3 miles in length and half that in breadth, the hills surrounding which come down to the water's edge and show no signs of verdure or life, while an almost perpetual mist hangs over the tops and sweeps over the water, giving the whole a gloomy deserted look; the surplus waters fall over the edge of the hill into Loch Scavaig. Sole proprietor of the parish is Norman Macleod esq. The area comprises 93,140 acres; rateable value, £4,503; the population in 1891 was 920, and in 1881, 929.

DUIRINISH is a parish, in the north-west angle of this island, bounded south-west, west and north-west by the Little Minch, east by Loch Snizort and south by the parish of Bracadale; it extends 18 miles from north to south and its extreme breadth is 15 miles, but in the northern part it is cut into 3 headlands by the Lochs Follart (or Dunvegan) and Bay. It is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree. The western portion of the parish is known as Duirinish and that to the east of Loch Follart as Waternish; the former has some singular hills 1,500 feet high called McLeods' Tables and M'Leods' Maidens. Edinbane and Dunvegan are villages in this parish, and near the latter, which is 22 miles north-west from Portree, stands Dunvegan Castle, the seat of Norman Macleod esq. D.L., J.P.; it is on the shore of Loch Follart and is said to date from the 9th century, and was added to by Rory Mor in the reign of James VI.; it contains some antiquities connected with the family; about a mile south of this is the parish church. This parish was celebrated for its pipers, and young pipers were sent to study music under them. Kenneth Robertson Macleod esq. of Greenhornish; Norman Macleod esq. J.P., D.L. of Dunvegan Castle; the Rev. Hugh A. Macpherson, of Glendale, and Captain Allan Macdonald J.P., D.L. of Waternish, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 80,042 acres; rateable value, £6,153; the population in 1891 was 3,933; and in 1881, 4,319.

KILMUIR is a parish, forming the north-eastern point of this island and the northern extremity of the district of Trotternish; its kirktown is 18 miles north-by-east from Portree. The parish, which extends 12 miles from north to south, by a breadth of 4 to 7, is in the poor combination of Skye and the small debt court district of Portree and is bounded south by the parish of Snizort and on the other three sides by Loch Snizort and the Minch; there is a chain of hills running down the centre of the parish, the northern ones being known as the Quiraing and remarkable for a collection of singular shaped peaks surrounding a turf platform, the entrance being marked by a tall needle-shaped rock; these hills lie 16 miles north of Portree and 5 miles to the north-west is Duntulm Castle, the old residence of the Macdonalds, situated on a rock jutting out into the Minch and occupying, it is believed, the site of an old Viking fort. The trustees of the late George A. Baird esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 34,225 acres; rateable value, £3,795; the population in 1891 was 2,394, and in 1881, 2,562.

PORTREE is a village, seaport and parish, in the east centre of this island, and the head of a sheriff court and of the poor combination of Skye; it is the capital of the island and lies about 109 miles (via Invermoriston) west from Inverness, and 74 north from Tobermory; it is reached by steamer from Oban, or from Strome Ferry by railway steamer. The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep acclivity, thickly planted with trees. It has three banking establishments, a woollen factory in the vicinity, and two good hotels and posting houses, the Portree hotel and the Royal. In the mill, erected in 1850, are manufactured tweeds, plaids, yarns and carpets. The quay, erected in 1819, has been much improved by Lord Macdonald (who owns this part of the town), at a cost of £3,000, and is available for trading steamers and ships at all states of the tide, which rises from 12 to 16 feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth of from 5 to 12 fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. The exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt herrings, salmon (chiefly for London), and cod and ling, both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool. A sheriff court is held every Thursday during the session. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, at the base of which is the quay, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander M'Leod, from which there is a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. On the west of the village, amidst some thriving plantations, stands Portree House, belonging to Lord Macdonald, and now occupied by John Macdonald esq. The Episcopal church of St. Columba is a building of stone, with rectory attached, erected in 1884 as a memorial to the late Right Rev. J. G. R. Mackarness, Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, at a cost of about £2,500; the rectory was added in 1893 at an additional cost of £800, the whole amount being raised by public subscription. The church is partly Early English and partly in the Decorated style of architecture, and consists of chancel, nave and organ chamber, with a tower in the south-west corner containing one bell, and surmounted by a saddleback roof. The Ross Memorial Cottage Hospital, a substantial stone building, was erected in 1893 at a cost of about £700, by subscription, in memory of David Ross, surgeon, and a native of Portree; the hospital contains 5 wards with 4 beds in each ward and 2 single wards. Lord Macdonald, of Armadale Castle, and Mrs. Evelyn A. Wood, of Raasay, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 56,909 acres; rateable value, £8,797; the population of the parish in 1891 was 3,176, of whom 1,003 were in the village, and in 1881, 3,191, with 893 in the village.

The islands of Flodda, Raasay and Rona form part of this parish.

Raasay Island is about 13 miles long and 2 to 4 broad, lying to the east of Skye, opposite Portree, separated from it by the sound of Raasay, about 4 miles wide. It is the property of Mrs. Wood, of Raasay, who has a fine mansion in a bay near the south-western extremity of the island, and to the north of a hill, called Duncan, are the ruins of Brochel Castle. The area is about 18,000 acres; the population in 1891 was 438, and in 1881, 478.

Rona Island lies off the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait passable for small vessels. It is about 4 miles in length by 1 in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona surrounds the scattered village which lies at the bottom of the bay, and contains nearly all the population of the island. Mrs. Evelyn Wood, of Raasay, is sole proprietor of the island. There is a very fine lighthouse here. The population in 1891 was 181, and in 1881 was 176.

Flodda is a small island about 1½ miles long, lying off the north-west angle of Raasay, having a population in 1891 of 51 persons.

SLEAT is a parish forming the south-eastern end of the island, and divided from the district of Moidart on the mainland by the Sound of Sleat and Kyle Rhea; its kirktown is about 10 miles south of Broadford; the parish, which is in the poor combination of Skye and the small debt court district of Portree, extends 21 miles from north-east to south-west by 5 in breadth, is bounded on the north by Loch Slapin and the parish of Strath. The small Island of Ornsay, on the west side of the Sound of Sleat, is included in this parish. About 4 miles south of the village of Sleat, and half a mile from the shore, is the Castle of Armadale, the seat of Lord Macdonald, a large modern house standing in fine grounds, with a pier for steamers close to, and in a bay a little north of the village are the ruins of Knock Castle. Lord Macdonald is the principal landowner. The area comprises 39,959 acres; rateable value, £3,516; the population in 1891 was 1,850.

SNIZORT is a parish on the east side of the island, bounded east by Raasy Sound, south by Braeadale and Portree parishes, west by Loch Snizort (a considerable arm of the sea to the west of the district of Trotternish), and north by Kilmuir parish; it is in the poor combination of Skye, and small debt court district of Portree; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Snizort, 7 miles north-west from Portree. The Storr Rock, a remarkable pinnacle of rock about 3 miles from the east coast of the parish, standing 2,350 feet above sea level, can be visited either from Portree (7 miles) or Uig. On the west side of the parish, close to the shore of Loch Snizort, stood the old house of Kingsburgh, where Prince Charles Edward found shelter on his way from South Uist to Raasy. Lauchlin Macdonald esq. J.P., D.L. of Skeabost, Lord Macdonald, of Armadale Castle, and the trustees of the late George A. Baird esq. of Kilmuir, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 53,280 acres; rateable value, £4,429; the population in 1891 was 1,908, and in 1881, 2,120.

STRATH (or Strathswordle) is a parish in the south-east portion of the island and contains the villages of Broadford, Kyle Akin and Forrin, the former being 16 miles south-east of Portree, at the head of Small bay, where the steamers call as well as at Kyle Akin; the parish is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree and extends 16 or 17 miles from east to west by 10 from north to south; it includes Pabbay and Sculpay Islands, and is bounded south by the parish of Sleat and north by Portree, the Inner and Cuchullin sounds forming the boundaries east and west. A little east of Kyle Akin are the ruins of Castle Moil; the kirktown is 2 miles north-west of Broadford, and there is a ferry from here to Kyle Inn, in the district of Loch Alsh, on the mainland. Lord Macdonald, of Armadale, and the trustees of the late Sir William Mackinnon, of Balnakill, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 71,411 acres; rateable value, £4,593; the population in 1891 was 2,392 and in 1881, 2,616, of whom Sculpay Island had a population of 49 in 1891 and 37 in 1881.

THE SMALL ISLES.

THESE isles, forming a parish, consist of the islands of Canna, Eigg, Muck, Rum and Sandy; of these Eigg only was originally in this county, the other four having been transferred from Argyllshire by Boundary Order No. 91, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889;" these five islands lie off the coasts of Moidart and Skye in a curved line extending from north-west to south, and are divided from the large island of Skye by the Cuchullin sound. Rum and Eigg can only be approached by boat from the eastern side, the heavy swell from the Atlantic rendering the western coasts inaccessible. The parish church is on Rum Island, and there is another Established church on Eigg, where is also the post office.

CANNA lies 5 miles to the north-west of Rum, and is 18 miles in circumference; at the east end rises Compass hill, a bold headland with perpendicular cliffs. The population in 1891 was 40 and in 1881, 57.

EIGG is an island lying 4 miles south-east of Rum and 7 south-west of the Promontory of Sleat, in the Isle of Skye; the island consists of a mass of trap rock, slightly higher at the northern extremity and sloping to the south, where there is a singular columnar rock of porphyry, about 1½ miles long, running east and west, rising about 470 feet in height and narrowing at the top to 10 feet in width. There is also in this part of the island a cave, 225 feet long, in which in the 16th century the MacDonalds, who then inhabited the island, took refuge when it was invaded by the Laird of Macleod, who by lighting fires at the entrance suffocated the whole 200 to death; there are remains of an old Culdee monastery here. The area comprises 7,275 acres; the population in 1891 was 233, and in 1881, 291.

MUCK is a small island lying 4 miles south-west from Eigg and 15 miles north from Ardnamurchan point, and is about 3 miles long by 1 in breadth, and is more level than the other islands and affords pasture for cattle; the principal occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. There are remains of a small monastery, planted by St. Columba early in the 7th century. The population in 1891 was 48, and in 1881, 51.

RUM island, the largest of the group, lies about 9 miles west of Sleat point and 15 north of Ardnamurchan point, and is mountainous, the two principal peaks being Haskeval, 2,667 feet above sea level and Benmore, 2,300 feet: the landing place is in Loch Scresort on the eastern coast and in the northern part of the island is the Small Isles parish kirk. The population in 1891 was 53, and in 1881, 89.

SANDY is a small island lying to the south of Canna, close under Compass hill; the population in 1891 was 62, and in 1881, 62.

The area of the whole islands comprises 37,752 acres; rateable value, £812; the population in 1891 was 436, and in 1881, 550.

URQUHART and GLENMORISTON form a united parish, on the western side of Loch Ness, about 28 miles in length by a breadth of 5 to 9, bounded on the north by the parish of Inverness, north and north-west by Kiltarlity, south-west by the county of Ross, south by Kilmonivaig parish and east by Boleskine and Abertarff and Loch Ness.

Drumnadrochit is a village in the parish, near the mouth of Glen Urquhart, 14 miles south-west from Inverness and near to Temple pier, at which David MacBrayne's Royal Mail steamers, plying between Inverness, Fort William, Oban and Glasgow, call three times a week between October and June and daily during the season. The ruins of Urquhart Castle stand on a low rock projecting into Loch Ness, and Glen Urquhart, containing the estate of Balmacaan and its extensive deer forest, opens above the ruins; the mansion is now occupied by Bradley Martin esq. The falls of Divach are about 2 miles south from Drumnadrochit.

Milton and Lewiston are also villages in this parish, the former situated one mile west, and the latter one mile south from Drumnadrochit.

Balnain is a hamlet in the parish.

GLENMORISTON (or Invermoriston) is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Urquhart and Glenmoriston, 13 miles south-west from Drumnadrochit and 27 from Inverness.

The principal landowner is the Dowager Countess of Seafield. The area of the entire parish comprises 122,705 acres; rateable value, £12,010: the population in 1891 was 2,040, and in 1881, 2,438; the ecclesiastical parish of Glenmoriston, in 1891, had a population of 377.

KINCARDINESHIRE,

Occasionally called the Mearns (and improperly Mearn-shire) is a small county on the eastern coast, bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having its base resting on Forfarshire, with the apex at Girdleness, on the south side of the Bay of Aberdeen, from which to the mouth of the North Esk river is its longest side, being about 30 miles, while its greatest breadth (which it is at the base) is 22 miles, narrowing to 1 mile at Girdleness; the north-west boundary line shows a projection occupying the middle third of the distance, and about 7 miles at its widest part. The area of the county comprises 383 square miles, or 245,347 acres, of which about 5 square miles are foreshore and 3 lake and water. In size Kincardine is the twenty-first of the Scottish counties, and in population the twenty-fifth; its population in 1891 being 17,604 males and 18,043 females, or a total of 35,647 against 34,464 in 1881. The inhabited houses in 1891 were 7,306 and 1881, 6,748.

Name and Early History.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts &c. until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled to a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundation of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns, before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother called Angus conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the North of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless the great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men; and the "men of the Mearns" is a proverbial expression of old date, implying trustworthyness and integrity.

Soil, Surface, Produce &c.—The county is almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland. The crops raised are oats, barley and turnips, and small fields of rye are to be met with. Attention is also devoted to the feeding of cattle, and on the hills numbers of black-faced sheep are reared. The chief crops are oats, 30,934 acres; barley, 10,938; potatoes, 2,536; turnips, 18,265, and hay 13,003 acres, the total corn crop being 42,959, and green crops, 21,311; land under grass, 43,568; permanent pasture, 9,220. Total area of land and water, 245,715 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised 5,364 horses, 28,484 cattle, 39,534 sheep and 2,767 pigs. The salmon fisheries yield a valuable rental, the fish being packed in ice and sent to the southern markets. The white or sea fishing employs many of the inhabitants, the species caught comprising whiting, cod, ling, halibut, turbot, soles &c. Herring fishing is prosecuted during July and August, and is a source of much profit, many persons being employed in the curing of the fish. There are no fishing boats registered in the county, but those used would come under the head of Aberdeen or Montrose. Manufactures as yet have not made much progress in this county, the principal being the making of woollens, flax and tow spinning, and net rope and twine manufacturing. There are also one or two tanneries, breweries and distilleries. The county is destitute of both coal and marl, and there is very little limestone, all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Firth of Forth. The limestone of the county obtained near the coast is burnt with coal, in the more inland parts with peat or wood; but from the scarcity of fuel, there is much more lime imported into than is wrought in the shire. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful pebbles and jaspers are found. The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdleness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from 60 to 80 feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battock, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabane, 2,370; Clairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfanella, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the country seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

Rivers and Railways.—In the south portion of the county, the Luther water and other smaller streams fed from the Grampians empty themselves into the North Esk, which debouches into the bay south of St. Cyrus; next come the Bervie, which has almost the nature of a loch and reaches the sea at Bervie town; then the Cowie, just north of Stonehaven, and the Carron issues at the same town; the Dee flows through the north-west corner of the county; and along the north boundary to Girdleness; the Dye water flows north to the Feugh at Strachan, and thus joins the Dee, and the Aven skirts the south-west border. There are no large lochs. The railways are two in number, both converging at Aberdeen, and passing through the county from south to north, and from west to north. The first is the Caledonian railway, which entering the county at Marykirk runs north-east to Stonehaven, and thence along the coast to the Dee, opposite Aberdeen. The second is the Deeside railway, which leaving Aberdeen, skirts the north border and passes through the north-west corner, by Banchory on to Ballater.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Kincardineshire comprises 17 parishes and four parts of parishes; it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie, and a burgh of barony—Stonehaven, besides many other smaller towns and villages. Bervie, in conjunction with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament, and the county one member. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 is 5,897. The lord-lieutenant of the shire is Alexander Baird esq. of Urie. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was £214,671; railways &c. £26,589; total, £241,260.

ARBUTHNOTT parish is of an irregular triangular form, nearly 5 miles in length, 3 miles north-west of Bervie, bounded on the west by Fordoun, or the great hollow of the Mearns, the streams of Bervie and Forthy forming this line of division, and on the north-west by Glenbervie and Kinneff. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination. The present church of the Establishment was founded as early as the 13th century and consecrated on the 3rd day of August, 1242, by Bishop de Bernham, and the part in use at the present time formed the nave of the old church: the chancel of the old building was for many years used as the place of sepulture of the Allardyce family, but now forms part of the church; and a small chapel adjoining, originally dedicated to the Virgin Mary, forms the burial place of the Arbuthnott family. The modern woodwork, with its galleries, was consumed by fire in 1889, but it has since been restored more in keeping with its ancient foundation. The celebrated Dr. Arbuthnott, the intimate friend of Pope and Swift, was the son of the minister and a native of this parish. Arbuthnott gives the title of viscount to a family of the same name, which became distinguished in the 12th century, Sir Robert Arbuthnott, for loyalty to Charles II., being created a baron and viscount by that monarch. Acreage of the parish, 9,585; rateable value, £7,333 10s.; population in 1881, 809, and in 1891, 795.

Sub-Post Office, Arbuthnott; Joseph Simon, postmaster. Arrivals, 5.50 a.m. & 2.30 p.m.; dispatches, 12.40 & 8.30 p.m. Letters for Arbuthnott should be addressed "near Fordoun"

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN.

AUCHINBLAE, the capital of the parish of Fordoun, is a thriving inland market town, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luther water, 26 miles south-by-west from Aberdeen, 16 north from Montrose, 11 south-west from Stonehaven, 6 north-east from Fettercairn, 5 north from Laurencekirk and 2½ west from the Fordoun station on the Caledonian railway, and is in Kincardineshire poor combination. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air, and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea-coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen. The town was lighted by gas in 1840, but the use of this is discontinued and paraffin oil substituted. A public hall was erected in 1870 by subscription, at a cost of £500. The principal trade of the place is flax spinning, by power, commenced so early as 1795, being the second attempt in Scotland. Branches of the North of Scotland Bank Limited and the Town and County Bank Limited are established here. There is a park of 5 acres, on the Drumtochty estate close to the village, open to the public. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn, is a small assemblage of tenements, being all that remains of the former county town, Kincardine, and among these, or in the vicinity, stood the court house. It ceased to be the chief town in the reign of James VI., when Stonehaven, as a more convenient situation for holding the county courts, obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the castle or royal palace of Kincardine. There are no records stating when this castle was built, or when it was last inhabited, but it appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III. in 994, for it was occupied by that monarch at the time of his murder by Finella: it stands on the termination of a small ridge at an elevation of about 60 or 80 feet above the adjoining plain, and has a very commanding view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. It was in this palace, as Lord Hailes writes, that John Baliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296, and he quotes the record of this in Rhymer's "Fœdera." As this is the last event of importance on record connected with this palace, it is not improbable that it was destroyed in the wars between the Scotch and English which followed that event. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment; and on the hill above Newlands there are the remains of a Druidical temple. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the foundations of a small friary; and near to that is a fine spring (Brightwell), considered to be among the most copious flowing in Scotland. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and placed on a high rock in one of the most beautiful parts of the parish, is a large handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a tower on the west end rising to about 100 feet in height; and in a valley between where it stands and the town of Auchinblae, is the Free church, a well-finished building. The parish extends from east to west about 10 miles, and in breadth about 7. The southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil and inferior in fertility to the lower part. Paddy fair, for cattle and horses, is held third Friday in July. The population of the parish of Fordoun was in 1881, 1,992, and in 1891, 2,004; of the latter number 432 were returned for Auchinblae.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish on the banks of the Dee, in Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district. It is bounded by Durris on the east, Kincardine O'Neil on the west, Midmar on the north and Strachan on the south. The river Dee is here crossed by an iron truss bridge (1789-1829) of 175 feet span, and three stone arches. The village of Banchory, which was founded in 1805, stands on the north side of the Dee, 18 miles south-west of Aberdeen. In 1885 it became a burgh by adopting the Police Act of 1862, and is governed by nine commissioners, with the usual officials under the Act. The Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway runs through the parish and has a station about half-a-mile from the town. The parish church, which stands at the east end of the burgh, erected in 1824, is in the Gothic style, with a tower and clock, and is seated for 1,250 persons. The Free church, in the High street, erected in 1880, at a cost of £3,000, upon land given by the late Sir Robert Burnett bart. is an imposing edifice of pink and white granite, in the Early English style, with a tower 100 feet high, and an illuminated clock and is seated for 700 persons. The Town hall, a building erected in 1873, contains a large hall for entertainments. The Banchory Club and Library, held in the Town hall, was opened January, 1893; it contains over 1,000 volumes: a small annual subscription fee is charged to members. A public park of about 16 acres was opened on the 3rd of August, 1887, the land for which was presented by the late Sir Robert Burnett bart.: it has been beautifully laid out, at a cost of about £800, and there is a large sheet of water, which in winter time is resorted to for skating and curling. On the road from the village to the railway station is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1870 to the memory of Col. William Burnett Ramsay, of Banchory Lodge. The parish is finely wooded and contains several gentlemen's seats and residences. In the parish are two or three lochs, one of which was some time ago drained and brought under cultivation. The supply of water to the city of Aberdeen is taken from the Dee at the western boundary of this parish, about 3½ miles above the village of Banchory. Inchmarlo is the seat of Mrs. Davidson; Inchmarlo House, of Duncan Davidson esq. J.P., D.L. and Blackhall Castle, of James Toner Hay esq. J.P. About half-a-mile south of Banchory is the Bridge of Feugh, a place much frequented by visitors. Here the bed of the Feugh is very rocky, forming the water into a picturesque cascade, which afterwards falls into the Dee. The cattle shows of the Deeside Agricultural Society are held at Banchory in July of each year. Auction sales for horses, cattle, sheep, pigs &c. are held fortnightly on Wednesdays. The parish contains an area of 20,079 statute acres; rateable value, £19,352; and in 1881 had a population numbering 3,066, and in 1891, 3,193, the burgh containing 1,450.

Crathes, 3½ miles east, is in Banchory parish and a station on the Deeside railway. Crathes Castle is the seat of Sir Thomas Burnett bart. J.P.

Bridge of Canny is 3 miles west.

BERVIE.

BERVIE (or Inverbervie, as it is frequently written) is a royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and chief town for many miles, in Kincardineshire poor combination, and is a railway station on the Montrose and Bervie section of the North British line (there is also a station on the same line in the village of Gourdon); it is 13miles north-by-east from Montrose, 10 south-by-west from Stonehaven and 25 south-by-west from Aberdeen, on the coast road from the last named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, here crossed by a bridge of a single span of 103 feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for vessels almost at any time. The principal trade of the town is the spinning of flax. The river is a fine stream, and in the driest season it has always abundance of water; it runs through a large valley, in which the first mill that was ever erected for spinning flax in Scotland stands. The town is well lighted with gas, and the electric light has also been introduced into several of the public works. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter from King David II. as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather, and where he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by David. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nine councillors. It joins with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, styled the Montrose burghs, in returning one member to Parliament. The sheriff small debt court, which used to be held in Bervie, is now removed to Stonehaven. Registration courts are still held once a year. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment and a Free church, which has lately been rebuilt and much improved. The first mentioned is a handsome modern building of Gothic architecture, and is the principal ornament of the town. The weekly market for grain is held on Wednesday, and the annual fair on the Thursday before the 19th of May. Gourdon fishing village is one mile from Bervie, and contains a population of 1,091. The parish of Bervie comprises an area of 2,332 statute acres; rateable value: landward, £4,094; burgh, £3,964; and its population was in 1891, 2,387; of this number 1,195 were returned for the parliamentary burgh.

COOKNEY, including Netherley and Muchalls, was created a quoad sacra parish and registration district in 1859, taken from the northern side of Fetteresso. The parish church, which is about central, is 5 miles north-north-west from Stonehaven and about 2 miles from the village of Skatero. Cookney is bounded on the east by the German Ocean and on the south by Fetteresso; it is about 6 miles long from west to east and 4 miles broad, the soil along the coast being well cultivated and fertile, but there is much barren land to the west. Most of this was at one time common, but it was divided among the neighbouring heritors, and is now under cultivation and much improved. At Muchalls is a coastguard station and a station on the Caledonian railway. Blackhills Cave here was in 1896 explored and discovered to consist of two large chambers. Muchalls Castle, formerly a residence of the Burnett family, but now the seat of The Right Hon. James P. Robertson, lord justice general, was built in the 17th century and is beautifully decorated. There are two fishing villages, Skatero and Stranathro, in the parish. Population in 1881, 1,076; in 1891, 1,984.

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE.

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 23 miles south-west of Aberdeen, 18 north from Montrose, 7 north-by-west from Bervie and about 6½ south-west from Stonehaven, on the road to Laurencekirk, situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, and is a station on the Caledonian railway. The village is an assemblage of houses, so perplexingly arranged as to constitute a bewildering labyrinth. The parish of Glenbervie, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, extends upwards of 6 miles in length, by a breadth of 3 in some parts and 5 at others; bounded on the west by the Water of Bervie and Fordoun, on the east by Dunnottar and Fetteresso, on the south and south-east by Arbuthnott and on the north by the hills of Strachan and Durris. The soil of the upper part of the district is of bluish clay, and in the lower a dry fertile loam. The northern portion of the parish lies partly among the Grampian Hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the west, and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of Glenbervie, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family. In the churchyard of the Established church are interred some of the ancestors of the poet Robert Burns. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the second Tuesday in October. The parish of Glenbervie contains 15,041 statute acres; rateable value, £8,888 3s. 11d. and in 1891 had a population of 887.

DRUMOAK, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Aberdeenshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

DUNNOTTAR, anciently spelt Dunoyter, is a parish of an irregular form, the eastern side running from Stonehaven to the south, a distance of 5 miles, and from thence about 5 miles north; abutting on the parishes of Kinneff and Glenbervie, from thence descending to the Carron Water at the base of that hill, where Dunnottar and Glenbervie are met by the parish of Fetteresso. The seaward boundary of the parish is a continuous chain of rocks and cliffs containing many caverns, one of which extends more than 150 yards, which render Dunnottar one of the most romantic places on the east coast. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination. The principal object of interest in the parish is Dunnottar Castle, within the walls of which formerly stood the parish church. It is seated on a perpendicular rock, 150 feet above the level of the sea, about 3 acres in extent, and almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The entrance is by a square tower of great strength, within high-water mark; the skeleton of the structure still occupies one-half of the summit of the rock, and forms one of the most majestic piles of ruins in Scotland. This castle withstood a long siege by Cromwell's army, and its ultimate surrender was upon honourable terms; it was often used as a state prison, and several of the nonconforming Presbyterian clergy have been its inmates. It was built during the contest between Bruce and Baliol, by an ancestor of the Marischal family: it was dismantled shortly after the rising of 1715, when its proprietor, James, Earl Marischal, was attainted for high treason. Since that period the castle became by purchase the property of the nearest heir male, Sir Alexander Keith, of Dunnottar and Ravelston, Knight Marischal of Scotland, and is now the property of the trustees of Mrs. Ann Katherine Innes. The stonework of the fortress is yet pretty entire, the battlements, the formidable towers and airy turrets full of loopholes for the archer and musketeer, the hall for the banquet and the cell for the captive, are all alike entire and their respective limits and divisions distinct. It was in this castle, during the Commonwealth, that the regalia of Scotland was placed, which was afterwards conveyed away and secreted under the pulpit in the parish church of Kinneff. The attractive gardens of Dunnottar House are open to the public through the kindness of William Ritchie esq. the present occupier. The old town of Stonehaven is in this parish, near to which is situate the church of the parish, which embraces an area of 7,787 acres, and in 1881 had a population numbering 2,498, and in 1891, 2,739.

DURRIS parish, which extends about 8 miles in length, by 3½ in breadth, lies on the south side of the Dee, from which the ground rises, and terminates at the ridge of the Grampian mountains. Crathes, 2 miles, and Park, 3 miles, are the nearest railway stations. A great part of the parish has been inclosed. The parish, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district, is bounded by Maryculter and Fetteresso on the east and Strachan and Glenbervie on the west, the northern boundary being the river Dee, here crossed by an iron bridge, erected in 1862. There are several lofty mountains in this district. The area of the parish is 15,294 statute acres; rateable value, £9,082; and its population in 1881 was 1,014, and in 1891, 918.

EDZELL, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Forfarshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

FETTERCAIRN is a parish and village—the latter 98 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Montrose, 16½ south-west from Stonehaven, 11 north from Brechin, 4½ north-west from Laurencekirk, situated on a small streamlet, a tributary to the North Esk. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination, small debt court district of Laurencekirk. The latter river is crossed by a romantic bridge called the Bridge of Gannachy, which springs from a precipitous rock at either extremity, and is elevated to a great height above the water. The nearest railway station is Laurencekirk, 5 miles distant. The village has a branch of the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, and there is a large distillery in the immediate vicinity. In the village square is the old cross of Kincardine, an erection of great antiquity. About a mile west is a ruin called Fenella's Castle, in connection with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fenella, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch in rebellion. Besides the handsome parish church, there is a Free church and an Episcopal church and a large public hall, which contains a billiard room, reading room and a library. At one end of the village stands a graceful arch, erected to commemorate the visit of H.M. the Queen and the Prince Consort, on the 21st September, 1861. There is also a fountain erected to the late Sir John Stuart Forbes, of Fettercairn. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the Mearns; the ground on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss; on the east it becomes deeper and of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from the said Fenella cairn or castle and the eminences or moraines in the vicinity. The principal landowners are Sir John Robert Gladstone bart. J.P., D.L. of Fasque, the Hon. Charles Forbes Trefusis J.P., D.L. of Fettercairn House, Col. William McInroy J.P. of The Burn, and the Earl of Kintore G.C.M.G. The parish incloses an area of 13,728 statute acres; rateable value, £11,189, and in 1881 contained a population of 1,503; of this number 3 8 were returned for the village. The numbers for 1891 were 1,421 and 362 respectively.

FETTERESSO is a parish, 1 mile west of Stonehaven railway station, about 10 miles in length and between 5 and 6 in breadth. It is bounded on the south by the parish of Dunnottar, on the west by Glenbervie, Durris and Maryculter, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory-Devenick, and on the east by the German Ocean. There are two quoad sacra parishes within Fetteresso, Rickarton on the west and Cookney on the north; these parishes will be found under separate headings. The principal streams are the Carron and the Cowie, which run from west to east; the former divides the parish from Dunnottar for about 5 miles, entering the sea at Stonehaven; the latter has a similar course and termination. The salmon fishery is carried on here. Fetteresso Castle is the seat of R. W. Duff esq. and was once the ancient abode of the Earls Marischal, but since rebuilt and extended Urie House, a fine modern building, is the residence of Alexander Baird esq. lord lieutenant of Kincardineshire. The town of Stonehaven is in this parish, near to which is the parish church, also the village of Cowie, 1½ miles distant, which contains a cemetery. The area is 27,245 statute acres; the parish contained in 1881 a population of 5,541, and in 1891, 5,527.

Newton Hill, 5½ miles from Stonehaven, near the coast, has a railway station.

FORDOUN, see AUCHINBLAE.

GARVOCK is a parish south-east of Laurencekirk, its post town, which is about 2½ miles distant from the centre of the parish. Its length south-westward is fully 7 miles and its greatest breadth is about 4, embracing an area of 7,966 acres. It is bounded on the south by Marykirk, on the west by Laurencekirk and Fordoun, on the north by Arbuthnott, and on the east by Benholm and St. Cyrus, in the Laurencekirk small debt court district. The nearest station is Laurencekirk, distant 2 miles. The large estates have of recent years been cut up and there are now 20 proprietors. The parish church, a plain building, situated about the centre of the parish, was erected in 1778. About two-thirds of the parish is under cultivation. A cattle and feeding fair, of four days' continuance (called St. James's fair), used to be held, but it is now transferred to Laurencekirk. On the summit of Garvock hill there are two large druidical cairns. The parish of Garvock had, in 1881, a population of 428, and in 1891, 415; rateable value, £4,334.

JOHNSHAVEN AND BENHOLM.

JOHNSHAVEN is a seaport village, in the parish of Benholm, 14 miles south-west from Stonehaven and 4 south-west from Bervie, situated at the bottom of a hill between the coast road and the sea, and a little off the main thoroughfare between Aberdeen and Montrose, 29 miles south-west from the former town and 9 north-east from the latter, in the small debt court district of Stonehaven and is a station on the North British railway. It contains an extensive manufactory for sail cloths, sackings &c. and there is also a brewery in the village. The parish of Benholm, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, forms a square of nearly 3 miles, lying on the shore of the German Ocean, bounded on the north by Bervie and on the south by St. Cyrus. The land is level on the coast, and the interior consists of hill and dale, and beneath the surface is deposited good freestone and limestone. The old Tower of Benholm, before the invention of gunpowder, was considered a strong place of defence. The principal landowners are Hercules Scott esq. J.P., D.L., of Brotherton Castle, the Hon. Lady Elizabeth Cranstoun and William Smith esq. J.P. of Benholm Castle. Acreage, 4,891 statute acres; rateable value, £8,736; the parish contained a population of 1,527 in 1881, of which number 1,041 were returned for Johnshaven; in 1891 the numbers were 1,552 and 1,040 respectively.

KINNEFF, with which is incorporated the abrogated parish of Catterline, lies on the sea coast south from Dunnottar, and is bounded by Arbuthnott on the west and Bervie on the south. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and extends from the Water of Bervie to the northern point, about 5 miles along the coast, which is exceedingly bold and rocky. Upon the margin of the sea, not above 100 yards distance from the church, are to be seen the ruins of a castle, from which it is supposed the parish has taken its name; and tradition assigns it as having been the residence of a Scottish monarch named Kenneth. The old castle of Fiddes, also in this parish, which is in a good state of preservation, is famous as the scene of the legend of Thrummy Cap; a poem written in broad Scotch, in 1796, by John Burness, a cousin of Robert Burns. At Catterline there is an Episcopal church, in connection with which there is a good school. Kinneff church is remarkable as being the place—in a hole under the pulpit—in which the regalia of Scotland were deposited, from 1651 to the Revolution: these valuable memorials of Scottish loyalty were ingeniously conveyed out of the Castle of Dunnottar, while besieged by General Lambert, by Mrs. Grainger, wife of the incumbent of the parish, and her servant girl. The area is 7,130 acres; rateable value, £6,580; and contained in 1881 a population numbering 997, and in 1891, 907.

LAURENCEKIRK, the capital of its parish and the chief town of the Howe, is a thriving burgh, 93 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 10 north from Montrose and 14 south-west from Stonehaven, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and is a station on the railway to that city. A sheriff small debt court is held three times a year, and the parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination. Formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, it is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1772, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh and barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. The town contains a main street nearly a mile in length, one parallel to it, and two or three short ones branching from the principal streets, the whole being well lighted with gas. It is governed by a burgh council and police commission, consisting of 9 members. A police court has been established and is held when occasion requires. Branches of the Town and County Bank Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited are established here and there is also a Savings Bank. The parish, which was formerly called Conveth, is 4 miles in length and 3 at its greatest breadth. A ridge of hills stretches through the whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the old parish kirk dedicated to St. Laurence. In 1866 a public hall was erected by subscription, at a cost of some £1,400, called St. Laurence Hall. The principal landowners are the Earl of Kintore G.C.M.G. and David A. Pearson esq. of Johnston. There is a good brewery belonging to Mr. David Cameron, and an extensive cattle auction mart. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday in January (St. Anthony's fair—old style), and cattle fairs on the first Thursday in July (St. James's fair—old style), and the first Thursday in November (new style). Horse market on the Monday before the first Friday in March. Cattle and grain markets are held every Monday throughout the year. The parish of Laurencekirk has an area extending over 5,612 statute acres, rateable value £12,977, and in 1881 contained a population of 2,045; of this number 1,454 were returned for the burgh: in 1891 the parish contained 1,934 and the town 1,426.

LUTHERMUIR, see MARYKIRK.

MARYCULTER parish lies on the south side of the Dee, extending from that river to the Grampians, and is about 7 miles south-west from Aberdeen; it is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and of an oblong form, being 6 miles in length by 2 in breadth, and containing an area of 7,781 statute acres. The land adjacent to the river is partly low and fertile, but southward it is uneven and rocky and stony. The district is well wooded, and here and there are some thriving plantations. This parish appears to have been a favourite haunt of the Knight Templars. The Dee Side Hydropathic Establishment at Heathcot is a picturesque building, pleasantly situated, and distant 5 miles from Aberdeen. There is also a Roman Catholic college at Blairs. The population of the parish in 1891 was about 1,024.

MARYKIRK parish lies on the north bank of the North Esk, at the extremity of the Houe or Hollow of the Mearns, and is bounded by Garvock, St. Cyrus and Laurencekirk on the east, Fettercairn and Fordoun on the north, and Fettercairn and the North Esk on the west. Marykirk station is 1 mile distant to the village of its name and 3 miles from Luthermuir; it is 6 miles in length and 5 in breadth, in Kincardineshire poor combination and small debt court district of Stonehaven. The surface is level and the soil, though various, is chiefly fertile. Some fine plantations ornament the district, which is interspersed with a few handsome seats. The parish contains two villages, Luthermuir and Marykirk; the latter is on the road about half way between Montrose and Laurencekirk. The principal landowners are the Right Hon. Earl of Kintore G.C.M.G. George Taylor esq. Kirkton Hill, and Sir Thomas Thornton of Thornton. The parish of Marykirk contained at the census of 1891, 1,307 inhabitants; acreage, 9,841 statute acres; rateable value, £

NIGG is a parish in Kincardineshire, situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains, bounded by the Dee on the north, which separates it from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banchory-Devenick. It extends 4 miles in length by 2 in breadth. The parish church is distant 2 miles south from Aberdeen. The coast is bold and rocky, the north-east point, called Girdleness, being a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the estuary of the Dee. There is a small bay called the Bay of Nigg, close beside which are the ruins of the old parish church, dedicated to St. Fitticks. The district comprises the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and a pier, and contains extensive brick and tile works; also a preserved provision factory. Torry is now included in the city of Aberdeen for municipal, school board and parochial purposes, but for parliamentary purposes is in Kincardineshire. The Victoria Bridge, a granite structure, now spans the Dee and connects Torry with Aberdeen. Cove is also a small fishing village in the parish, 4 miles south from Aberdeen, and is a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish has an acreage, as altered May, 1895, 4,136; rateable value, £14,593; population in 1891, 1,561.

Post Office, Kirkhill, Nigg; Mrs. Alexandrina Sumners, postmistress. Letters from Aberdeen (which is the nearest money order & telegraph office) arrive at 7 a.m.; dispatched 2.55 p.m

ST. CYRUS, sometimes called Ecclesgreig, is a parish and village, the latter situated 4 miles south-west from Johnshaven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, which passes through the district, is a station on the Montrose and Bervie railway, in the small debt court district of Stonehaven. The parish, which measures 7 miles in length and 3 in breath, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholm on the east, Garvock on the north, Marykirk on the north-west and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary. General Stratton, the Peninsula and Waterloo hero, left legacies for the poor of the district. The principal landowners are Frederick Grant Forsyth Grant esq. of Ecclesgreig, and David Scott Porteous esq. J.P., D.L., of Lauriston Castle. The sea salmon fisheries along the coast of the parish are very valuable; the yearly rental amounting to about £2,500, and of the river fishings to about £1,000. The surface of the parish is pretty level, but intersected with several glens and rivulets, and is elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths is arable. The burn in Den Fella forms a beautiful cascade by falling over a rock 63 feet in height. The ancient residence of the Barclay family, known by the name of the Kame of Mathers, stands in ruins on a peninsulated rock, the base of which is washed by the sea. The Castle of Lauriston is an ancient building. The parish, which contains limestone quarries and plenty of excellent freestone, has an area of 8,249 statute acres; rateable value, £ ; had a population in 1881 of 1,487, and in 1891, 1,327.

Sub-Post Office, St. Cyrus; James Stewart, postmaster. Arrivals, 8.10 a.m. & 4.30 p.m.; dispatches, 2.35 p.m.; sundays, 10.20 a.m. Letters from Montrose. The nearest money order office is at Johnshaven & telegraph office is at Lauriston station

STONEHAVEN (or Stanehive) is a seaport and the county town of Kincardine and a police burgh, 110 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 68 north-east from Perth, 66 south-south-east from Banff, 35 north-by-east from Arbroath, 23 north-east from Montrose, 15 south from Aberdeen and 10 north-north-east from Bervie. It is a favourite summer resort, being situate on a beautiful bay of the sea, within a mile of a station on the Caledonian railway, on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The place, which is considerable, though not a royal burgh, is composed of an old and new town; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnottar; the other on a peninsula, or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetteresso, the two being connected by a bridge, forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre, in which stands a good market house, erected in 1827, surmounted by a spire 130 feet in height. The town hall, in Allardice street, which stands opposite the market house, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £4,000, by public subscription, and is vested in trustees; it is a fine building, and contains news, billiard and reading rooms. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and having on the north-east a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal and lime trade, and occasionally in exporting grain to Leith. During the season herring fishing is carried on. The celebrated Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and the manufacture of woollens is extensively carried on, besides which there are a tannery, where a large quantity of leather is produced, a brewery, and several net and rope and twine factories. There are three banking houses, two savings banks, and several good hotels. The sheriff ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session, and a sheriff small debt court on the same day during the sitting of the first-mentioned court. A newspaper, the "Stonehaven Journal," is published here every Thursday. The Established churches of Dunnottar and Fetteresso are situated near the town. In the churchyard of the former is erected the "Covenanters Stone," and working at it Sir Walter Scott found James Paterson ("Old Mortality"), on the very spot on which it now stands. There are also Free, United Presbyterian, and Episcopal churches, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are three cemeteries in close proximity—namely, at Fetteresso and Cowie, one mile and a half respectively from the town, and at Dunnottar, one mile distant. The weekly cattle market is held on Thursday, and there is another for cattle and grain on that day from Martinmas to Candlemas. Fairs: Thursday before May 28th for hiring servants; on the third Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August (old style) for cattle; Thursday before November 28th for hiring servants, and the Thursday before Christmas Day (old style) for cattle. The principal landowners are Alexander Baird, of Urie; R. W. Duff, of Fetteresso; Rev. W. D. Innes, of Cowie; Sir John R. Gladstone bart.; Hon. Charles Forbes-Trefusis; Henry Baird, of Durris; N. V. Forbes of Donnottar and Metherley; Sir David Stewart, of Banchory; Sir Thomas Burnett bart. of Banchory; Rt. Hon. the Earl of Kintore, Ingilsmaldie. The population of Stonehaven was in 1881, 3,957, and in 1891, 4,500

STRACHAN parish is bounded on the east by Durris, Glenbervie and Fordoun, on the south also by the latter parish and Fettercairn, on the west by Lochlee and on the north by Banchory Ternan, in the Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district. The village is distant 3½ miles south from Banchory. The parish extends 11 miles in length by from 7 to 9 in breadth, contains an area of 41,672 statute acres, and is for the greater part a mass of hills, some of which belong to the range of the Grampians. Clochnabane, more than 2,300 feet high, rises within the parish, the land of which is low towards the north, on which quarter it is bounded by the Dee, where it is tolerably well cultivated and some of it planted, strawberries being extensively grown. The river Feugh passes through this parish and falls into the Dee at Banchory, which is the nearest railway station, 4 miles distant. Population of the parish in 1881, 694, and in 1891, 655; rateable value, £5,882.

KINROSS-SHIRE.

THIS small inland county formed the north-western quarter of Fifeshire up to the year 1426, and at the Revolution (1689) was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Cleish and Tulliebole, which parishes before that period formed a portion of Fifeshire; Perthshire being its northern boundary, and Clackmannan on the western border. In figure the county takes the form of a square, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west about 13 miles; and from north to south about 11 miles. The total superfices of the county amounts to seventy square miles of land, and seven of lakes; of cultivated land about 27,700 acres, and of uncultivated about 18,400 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the "Head of the peninsula." The population in 1891 was 6,280 (2,964 males and 3,316 females), against 6,697 in 1881, and the inhabited houses, 1,518, against 1,705 in 1881.

Soil, Surface, Produce, &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochil hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern; Benarty hill the south-eastern; and Cleish hills the south and south-western. These eminences are generally adapted for pasture and the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise in several places suited to cultivation. In the Ochil range, Slungie hill is 1,354 feet, and Tilliery 1,787, while Benarty is 1,131 feet above sea level, and Dumglow, in the Cleish range, 1,241. The original condition of Kinross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic—namely, the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent in this part of the country than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appears, were feued about the commencement of the 18th century from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of "runrig," it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated, or less profitable, than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, inclosing and planting—can compete with those of Fife and most other districts. Drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse, east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions in this particular quarter productive arable fields present themselves, in place of desolate moors and sombrous mosses. Oats and barley are the crops most cultivated, but great attention is paid to the growing of turnips and potatoes. The chief crops are oats, 6,240 acres; turnips, 2,701; potatoes, 574; barley, 401; rye, 35; hay, 4,085; cabbage &c. 70; the total corn crops being 7,061 and green crops, 3,400; land under grass, 21,580; permanent pasture, 15,349: and total area of land and water, 55,855 acres; the mountain and heath land being 9,284, and of woods, 2,764 acres. At this day many good roads intersect the shire; and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving plantations. The manufactures of the county are only of moderate importance, and consist chiefly in the weaving of linen fabrics, and the making of plaids, tartan shawls, and other woollen goods. The minerals of the shire are of limited importance. Coal abounds in some localities, and works for raising it have been established on the Blairadam estate; whinstone has been found in several parishes, so has freestone and sandstone of the best quality; and of limestone there is plenty.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney, on the southern boundary of Kinross parish; the South Quelch, that runs below the town of Kinross; and the North Quelch, on the northern border of the parish—all which,and a few rivulets besides, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (for which see Kinross town) lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven there are a few minor lakes, or (as they are properly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. The railways (part of the North British system) consist of a line coming from Alloa and entering the county near Rumbling Brig, which at Kinross is joined by another line which runs up north from Dunfermline through Keltie and Gairny Bridge, and the united line sweeping round the north end of Loch Leven, leaves the county at Burnside; there is a branch line from Markinch to Leslie, and it is also proposed to make a short line from Mawcarse to Leslie, in Fifeshire, for limestone traffic.

Kinross-shire contains only four complete parishes and the parts of three others, and has only two towns, Kinross, with a population in 1891 of 1,902, and Milnathort, with 1,133 persons. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Clackmannanshire in returning one member to parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 numbered 1,444. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 (including railways) was £67,643.

BALGEDIE, see PORTMOAK.

BLAIRADAM, see CLEISH.

BLAIRINGONE is a hamlet and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Fossoway and Tulliebole in this county, Clackmannan and Dollar in Clackmannanshire and Muckart in Perthshire, and is 2½ miles south-east from Dollar station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. The church is a plain stone edifice, built in 1836, and the interior has since been refitted at considerable expense. It was chiefly owing to the liberality of the late Mr. Wylee, of Arndean, that the parish was endowed, and at his death he bequeathed a further sum to increase the living. The population in 1891 was 413.

CARNBO, see FOSSOWAY.

CLEISH is a parish and village; the parish, on the southern border of the county, is oblong in form, about 6 miles in length by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north by the parish of Kinross, on the east and south by the county of Fife, and on the west by Perthshire, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross; the village is 3 miles south-west from Kinross, 7 north from Dunfermline, 2½ south from Balado (Cleish road) station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section, and 2¾ north-west by west from Blairadam station on the Dunfermline and Perth section of the North British railway.

Maryburgh is a village 4½ miles south from Kinross; the mining village of Kelty Bridge is partly in this parish, but chiefly in that of Beath, Fifeshire (which see).

Blairadam is a railway station and a hamlet on Kelty water, 4½ miles south-east from Kinross. There are quarries of freestone in the parish, and coal is extensively wrought on the estate of Blairadam, which occupies a large part of this parish and of Beath and Dunfermline, and is the seat of Sir Charles E. Adam bart. the principal landowner, son of the late Right Hon. William P. Adam, some time M.P. for the united counties of Clackmannan and Kinross, and at the time of his death (1891) governor of Madras, India. A range of hills, called Cleish hills, runs along the western end of the parish, affording fine pasturage for sheep. The rest of the soil is under tillage, which is the chief employment of the inhabitants. The area comprises 6,201 acres; rateable value, £6,924; the population in 1891 was 539, and in 1881, 498.

CROOK OF DEVON, see FOSSOWAY.

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE form a united parish in the western part of the county, bounded on the north by the parish of Forgandenny, on the east by Orwell and Kinross, south by Cleish and the county of Fife and on the west and north-west by the counties of Clackmannan and Perth; it is in the small debt court district of Kinross and has two stations, Crook of Devon and Rumbling Bridge, on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. A part of the parish was formerly in Perthshire, but under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (boundary order No. 120), a large portion was transferred to this county; the remainder was retained in its original county, but attached to the parish of Glendevon. The parish has two small agricultural villages, named Blairingone (which see) and Crook of Devon; the latter is on the river Devon, 6 miles west from Kinross and has a railway station. Powmill and Carnbo are hamlets in the parish. About 2 miles from Crook of Devon, following the course of the river, and about 7 from Kinross, is the celebrated Rumbling Bridge, and a little further on is the equally famous Cauldron Linn, noted also for the surrounding scenery, and since the opening of the Devon Valley railway the locality has become much frequented by tourists. The Marquis Lansdowne is the principal landowner. The area comprises 17,333 acres; rateable value, £14,773; the population in 1891 was 1,053, and in 1881, 1,267.

KELTY BRIDGE, see BEATH (FIFESHIRE).

KINNESSWOOD, see PORTMOAK.

KINROSS is a town and police burgh, about the centre of the county, and a parish, which extends 6 miles from east to west by 5 from north to south, and is bounded south by Fifeshire, north by the parish of Orwell, east by Portmoak and west by Fossoway. The town, which has two stations (Kinross junction and Loch Leven) on the North British railway, is 27 miles north-west from Edinburgh (via Forth Bridge), 19 south-west from Cupar-Fife, 17 south from Perth and 10 north from Dunfermline; it is the head of a sheriff court district, courts being held every Tuesday during session; it stands at the foot of the vale of Kinross, on the shore of Loch Leven, with the North road running through it, and consisted of this main street and several ancient looking lanes, but many new buildings have been erected in modern times, especially in the main street. A Town Hall was built by subscription some years ago, on the site of the old parish church, but being found too small for many purposes, a more commodious structure was built in 1868. The County Buildings, in which the courts are held, were erected in 1826, at a cost of £2,000; a police station has since been added. The places of worship are the parish church, a Gothic erection of modern date; a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and an Episcopalian church; the latter (St. Paul) is an edifice of Gothic architecture, erected in 1875. There are branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Lim. and the British Linen Co. Bank. There is a woollen spinning mill and a linen power loom factory in the town, and shawl weaving is carried on. The "Kinross-shire Advertiser" newspaper is published every Saturday. At the hamlet of Tillyochie, in the parish, and 3 miles distant from the town of Kinross, there is a woollen spinning mill. In the vicinity of the town, on a promontory jutting into Loch Leven, is situated Kinross House, the property of Sir Graham Graham-Montgomery bart. a structure designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House, and many other mansions, in the style of the time of Charles II.; it stands near the northern entrance to the town, and close to the landing place from Loch Leven Castle, the ruins of which occupy a prominent position on an island at the north-west end of the loch; this castle is best known as the prison of Queen Mary, who owed her escape from it to the devotion of George Douglas, a son of Lady Douglas, who as wife of the custodian of the castle was virtually the Queen's jailer; George Douglas arranged a series of signals with the Hamiltons and her other adherents, and bringing her by boat to the landing place near the churchyard, threw the castle keys into the loch, and placed the Queen, 2nd May, 1568, in the care of her friends; in 1805 there was found near this landing place a number of keys, supposed to have been those thrown into the loch; also eight small keys of antique make in the same bearings, but nearer to the castle. The first mentioned are now in the possession of the Earl of Morton, the others being in the Antiquarian Museum of Edinburgh. The loch is twelve miles in circumference, and contains four islands, the largest of which occupies nearly 100 English acres; upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanus), of which only a fragment now remains. The loch is stored with trout of a red colour and first-rate quality, and eels, perch, pike &c. The excellent sport obtained, and the other attractions of the locality, draw a yearly increasing number of visitors. The fishing season begins on the 1st January and closes on the 31st August. Rod fishing begin generally in April, for which there is an ample supply of boats on the loch. The general appearance of the country is hilly and for the most part agricultural. Fairs are held in the burgh on the fourth Monday of March, second Monday of June, fourth Monday of July, and fourth Monday of October, all for cattle, horses and sheep; and there are hirings on the fourth Monday in July, and Thursday after second Tuesday in October. Sir Graham Graham-Montgomery, of Stanhope, bart. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 7,275 acres; rateable value, £18,264; the population in 1891 was 2,385, including 1,902 in the burgh and in 1881 was 2,492, with 1,960 in the burgh.

MILNATHORT is a large village in the parish of Orwell, and a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline to Perth section of the North British railway; it is on North Queich water, 2 miles north from Kinross and 9 north-west from Leslie. The local government is carried on by a committee of the inhabitants. There are three places of worship; the parish church, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian church; this last is a Gothic building, with a tower and spire 125 feet high; it was erected in 1868, at a cost of £3,000. In the centre of the village is the public hall, surmounted by a spire and has a clock. A weekly sale of live stock is held on Monday at the auction mart, adjoining the railway station, and a corn market is also held on the same day. The Clydesdale Bank Limited have a branch here. The inhabitants are principally employed in woollen shawl (hand-loom) weaving. There are also a spinning mill and a linen power-loom factory, which find employment for a number of hands. The Reid Memorial school was founded by Mrs. Reid, of Thomanean, in memory of her late husband; there is also a public school. The population of the village in 1891 was 1,133, and in 1881, 1,269.

ORWELL is a parish, on the northern border of the county, about 7 miles in length by a breadth of about 4; it is bounded on the south by the parish of Kinross and Loch Leven, on the west by Fossoway and Tulliebole, north by Perthshire, and east by the county of Fife and the parish of Portmoak, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross. The parish contains the large village of Milnathort (which see). The Mawcarse Junction station, on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline to Perth section of the North British railway, is on the eastern border of the parish, 2 miles north-east from Milnathort; this is the junction for the Kinross to Ladybank branch. Middleton, Dalqueich and Seggie are hamlets in the parish, from 1 to 2 miles distant from Milnathort. It is bounded on the north by the parishes of Forgandenny and Arngask, on the east by Strathmiglo and Portmoak, on the south by Fossoway and Kinross, and by Fossoway on the west. The greater part of Orwell is fine arable land, well inclosed and planted. On the low ground, towards Loch Leven, stand the ruins of the ancient castle of Burleigh, formerly the residence of Lord Burleigh. Hattonburn is the seat of Henry James Montgomery esq. D.L., J.P. John Horn, of Thomanean, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,133 acres; rateable value, £18,418 10s.; the population in 1891 was 1,852, of which 1,133 were in the village of Milnathort, and in 1881, 2,031, the number in the village being 1,269.

PORTMOAK is a parish on Loch Leven, extending 6 miles north to south by a breadth of 2 to 4 miles; it is bounded on the north by Strathmiglo, on the east by Leslie and Kinglassie, on the south by Auchterderran and Ballingry, and on the west by Kinross and Orwell, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross. Kinnesswood is a village in the parish, on the east side of Loch Leven, 5 miles east from Kinross and 2½ south-east from Mawcarse Junction station on the North British railway. The village is famous as the birthplace of Michael Bruce (1746); the house in which the poet was born, and in which he died (1767), has been restored. Scotlandwell is also a village in the parish, 5 miles west from Leslie and 3 south-east from Mawcarse Junction station. Balgedie is a hamlet 3 miles south-east from Milnathort. There are three places of worship in the parish; the parish church, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian church, the two former situated between Kinnesswood and Scotlandwell, and the latter at Balgedie; there is also a public school. Bishophill, the western peak of the Lomonds, is in this parish, and occupies a large portion of the area in the north-east. This hill is 1,150 feet above Loch Leven and 1,492 feet above sea level, and contains lime and freestone. Wells of pure water are numerous on the west side of the hill, and in one place, near Scotlandwell, there are three, with a copious flow of water. Andrew Winton, the chronicler of Scotland, was a native of this parish; and it was for twenty-eight years under the charge of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the founders of the Secession church. Sir Graham Graham-Montgomery bart. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 9,957 acres; rateable value, £9,253; the population in 1891 was 873, and in 1881, 1,042.

Sub-Post Office, Scotlandwell; Miss Kate Taylor, postmistress. Letters received through Kinross. Deliveries, 10.25 a.m. & 12.25 p.m.; dispatches, 11.35 a.m. & 3.35 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Leslie, Fifeshire, 4 miles distant

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE,

A COUNTY in the south-west of Scotland, on the Solway Firth, and the only remaining "stewartry," or district, once governed direct by the king by means of his steward (or stewart); the name, however, is all that exists of this ancient jurisdiction, the district being treated in all respects as the other counties, the county occupying the eastern portion of the ancient district known as Galloway; Wigtownshire being the other part on the west. It is bounded by Dumfries-shire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway Firth; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtownshire and Wigtown Bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about 44 miles, by a breadth varying from 20 to 30 miles; the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits; it comprises a superficies of 897 square miles, or 547,588 acres. About one half of the whole surface may be said to be brought into cultivation. This shire in point of size is the ninth, and in population the nineteenth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1891 consisted of 18,902 males and 21,083 females, total, 39,985, and in 1881, 42,127; the inhabited houses being 8,432 in 1891, and 9,265 in 1881.

Early History.—After being overrun by the Strathclyde Britons, who appear to have dislodged the Picts and Scots, who originally came to this district from Ireland, it was colonised by the Romans in 79 A.D., when they crossed the Solway Firth; these retired in 410 and the Cumbrian Britons took possession of all the west country, with their capital at Dumbarton; this connection with Cumbria continued for some time. In Kirkcudbright town Edward I. spent some time during the warfare of 1300, when he subdued Galloway, of which this stewartry then formed a part, and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI., with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in the town. Queen Mary spent her last night in Scotland at Dundrennan Abbey.

Soil, Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is principally composed of loam mixed with sand, incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock. Four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphairn, Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan—are commonly designated the district of "Glenkens." If a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Irongray parish to Gatehouse-of-Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is mountainous; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country. The principal eminences in the shire are Criffell (or Crawfell), 1,867 feet; Cairnsmuir, 2,331; Cairnsmore, 2,612; Corscrieve, 2,668, and Merrick, 2,764 feet above the level of the sea. The ancient forest formerly covering this district can now only be traced in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appeared that, so early as the 12th and 13th centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats, the culture of barley, peas, and beans being very limited. In the 18th century measures were adopted to improve its agricultural capabilities, and the inclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the population, who rose in considerable numbers, under the title of "levellers," and proceeded to demolish the newly-formed boundaries; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employed. The county subsequently steadily advanced and towards the close of the century the district could compete with adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The principal cereal grown is oats, and turnips and potatoes are also cultivated. The chief crops are oats, 29,521 acres; turnips, 13,857 and potatoes, 1,521 acres, while hay covers 22,108 acres; the corn crops cover 29,696 and green crops 16,758 acres; land under grass, 59,368 acres, and permanent pasture, 84,869 acres; heath land, 330,354, and total area of land and water, 582,982 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised: horses, 6,179; cattle, 47,626; sheep, 388,726; and pigs, 7,908. The number of horses, cattle and sheep reared in the county is moderately large, and the breed of horses known as Galloways has given way to others of a larger and stronger variety; while for dairy purposes the Ayrshire cattle are gradually superseding the black Galloway cow. Sheep and swine have considerably increased in numbers. The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland, and there is very little freestone. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carlinwark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell marl. The mineral wealth of the county consists chiefly in its granite, which is extensively wrought in the neighbourhood of Dalbeattie and Creetown, and for the polishing of which there are works at both places. Besides the salmon fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Firth affords good fishing; the boats employed in which are registered in the adjoining county of Wigtown. The manufactures are of small value, and consist principally in the making of woollen goods.

Rivers, Railways, &c.—The stewartry is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers; these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Ure. The Ken is considered the largest, joining the Dee below Loch Ken and then debouching at Kirkcudbright Bay. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Firth or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Firth, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of 45 miles; and along the shore of this estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height. The Glasgow and South Western railway work this county, running a line from Dumfries to Kirkcudbright, via Dalbeattie and Castle Douglas, at which latter place a branch runs to Newton Stewart, Stranraer and Portpatrick, which connects with the steamers for Ireland from Stranraer; this branch is known as the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire line.

Divisions, Representations, &c.—The shire, or stewartry, comprises 28 civil parishes, and 34 ecclesiastical parishes; these latter being included in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries and the presbytery of Kirkcudbright (with a few in that of Wigtown), synod of Galloway. There are 2 royal burghs, Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, and 5 police burghs (Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Gatehouse, Maxwelltown and New Galloway). It contains 2 royal burghs, Kirkcudbright and New Galloway; the latter, in conjunction with Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn (in Wigtownshire), formerly sent one member to Parliament, but under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, these towns were included in the counties to which they belong. This county returns one representative. In 1894-5, the parliamentary constituency numbered 5,842. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (exclusive of royal burghs) £320,300; railways, £17,073.

Harper. 8 Companies, stationed:—A, Kirkcudbright; B, Castle Douglas; E, New Galloway; F & G, Maxwelltown; H, Dalbeattie; & C at Stranraer (Wigtownshire) & D, Newton Stewart (Wigtownshire)

No. 7 Company of the Ayrshire & Galloway Volunteer Artillery (head quarters, Kilmarnock) is stationed at Kirkcudbright

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village, in the stewartry and poor combination of Kirkcudbright, and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated near the mouth of the Nith, is 6 miles from Killywhan station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 80 miles south from Edinburgh, 12 north-east from Dalbeattie, 30 north-east from Kirkcudbright, and 7 south from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded on the east by the Solway Firth, originally called Kirkinder, takes its modern name from the Cistercian abbey, founded here in the 13th century, by Devorgilla, daughter of Alan, Lord of Galloway, and wife of John Baliol, of Barnard Castle, co. Durham, the founders also of Balliol College, Oxford, and parents of John Balliol, King of Scotland. The ruins, which occupy an area of 240 by 150 feet, include the piers and arches of the church: the area being used as a burying ground. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, enclose about 14 acres. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambellie, and on the south Loch Kinder, and the dark braes of Criffel, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of 2,000 feet above the sea, from which it is a mile distant. Besides that of Kinder, there are two other lakes in the parish, namely, Lochend and Lochabber. The old parish kirk, built with part of the material of the abbey, stood on the north side of the ruins. The present parish church, built in 1876, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and has recently (1896) been redecorated at the expense of the congregation. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffel Range, is a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo. It is 50 feet high, enclosing a winding stair, and on the base is an inscription. The St. John's Lodge, No. 162, of Freemasons, New Abbey, and the Sweetheart Lodge of Oddfellows, also of New Abbey, hold monthly meetings here. Kinharvie House, the residence of Lord Herries; Lotus, of Archibald Hyslop esq.; Kindar House, Alexander Primrose esq. and Shambellie House, Captain William Stewart, are in this parish. Lord Herries D.L. of Kinharvie, Richard Alexander Oswald esq. of Cavens, J.P. and vice-lieut. of Ayrshire, and Captain Stewart, of Shambellie, are the principal landowners. The parish of New Abbey comprises an area of 13,199 acres; rateable value, £7,016; in 1881 the population was 906, and in 1891, 866.

Beeswing is a small hamlet in the parish, about 6 miles north-west of New Abbey village, and contains a Free church and a public school.

ANWOTH is a parish, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district, 5 miles from Dromore station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian railway, 105 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 50 east of Portpatrick, 33 south-west of Dumfries, and 8 north-west of Kirkcudbright. The parish is bounded on the south by Fleet Bay, and the Fleet river divides the two parishes of Anwoth and Girthon. In this neighbourhood, but in the parish of Anwoth, are the ancient castles of Rusko and Cardoness. There are traces of two Roman encampments. Rusko Castle, now in ruins, is the reputed castle of the "Young Lochinvar," of Scott's ballads. Cardoness is the residence of Sir Wm. F. Maxwell Bart. D.L. Horatio Granville Murray-Stewart esq. of Cally, Gatehouse, is lord of the manor. The parish of Anwoth has an area of 11,774 acres; rateable value, £6,070; in 1881 the parish had a population numbering 728; in 1891 the numbers were 724.

AUCHENCAIRN is a quoad sacra district, in Rerrick parish, the village being 8 miles south from Dalbeattie station on the Dumfries and Castle Douglas section of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 8 south from Castle Douglas, 10 east from Kirkcudbright, and 21 south-west from Dumfries, on the main road between the two last-named towns. It is much frequented during the summer months for its excellent bathing. Mines of barytes, copper and ironstone were at one time worked here with success. In the village are two hotels, which afford excellent accommodation. At the mouth of Auchencairn Bay lies the small and lofty Island of Heston, which affords excellent pasture for sheep, and also harbours a great number of rabbits. There is an Established church and a Free church, erected in 1844, and re-constructed in 1876 at a cost of £1,400; it now seats 460. The principal landowners are John Gladstone Mackie esq. J.P., D.L. of Auchencairn House, and William Douglas Robinson-Douglas esq. D.L., J.P. of Orchardton House. Population in 1891, 806.

CARSPHAIRN is a parish and village on the river Deogh, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district, 9 miles south from Dallmellington terminal station on a branch from Glasgow (St. Enoch) of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 13 north of New Galloway and 32 north of Kirkcudbright. The parish is somewhat extensive, but mountainous and thinly populated, and is bounded on the east by the Ken water, the north by Ayrshire and west by the river Dee and Loch Doon, and is chiefly devoted to grazing. This parish, together with the parishes of Dalry, Kells and Balmaclennan, forms the district of Glenkens—famed for its true breed of black-faced sheep and black cattle, as well as for good horses of the Galloway breed. The Duke of Portland P.C. is the principal landowner. Acreage, 54,624; rateable value, £9,852; population in 1881, 484, and in 1891, 394.

CASTLE DOUGLAS is a quoad sacra parish, town and burgh of barony in the civil parish of Kelton, poor combination and Commissary Court of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western and Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railways, 90 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 18 west by south from Dumfries, 15 north-east from Gatehouse, and 10 north-north-east from Kirkcudbright. The town is situated on the road between Gatehouse and Dumfries, in a pleasant, fertile district, on the banks of the Carlinwark loch, and derives its chief importance from its weekly markets and extensive auction sales; it was originally a village, but in 1792 was erected by the proprietor, Sir William Douglas, into a burgh of barony, but it is now governed as a police burgh under General Police Acts. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appear to have been the arena in ancient times of many hostile encounters, when the ancient Douglases dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of the district; and on the west side of the town are remains of encampments and breastworks, thrown up against the castle; on the south-west bank of the loch is a spot termed the "gallows lot," or "plot," said to have been the place of execution in former times. Near the head of the lake lived, it is said, a blacksmith named M'Kim, or M'Min, and his sons, who, according to tradition, made the large cannon called "Mons Meg," shown at Edinburgh Castle, forged by them at Buchan Croft, near Carlinwark House. The Town Hall, in St. Andrew street, is a building of red sandstone erected at a cost of £1,300. In connection with it is a Mechanics' Institute and reading room; and here a court is held quarterly for the recovery of small debts, and a police court on the first Wednesday in each month. In the town are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Company Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited; there is also a National Security Savings Bank, established in 1840. Castle Douglas parish church, near Carlinwark loch, built in 1868, and enlarged in 1881, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and affords 720 sittings. The Episcopal church of St. Ninian is a building of granite, in the Early English style. The Free church in King street, has a steeple of red sandstone. The principal public school, near Cotton street, is a building with a small tower, erected in 1877. A winter market for grain and a summer cattle market is held on Mondays. Fairs: February 13th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday for horses. Population of the town in 1891 was, of the town, 2,851 and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,832; rateable value, burghal, £13,348.

COLVEND, a parish adjoining Kirkbean, is in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district; 5 miles north from Dalbeattie station on the Dumfries and Castle Douglas section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The parish, which is on the Solway Firth, is entirely agricultural, and remarkable only for its scenery. Along the coast of Colvend and Southwick are several large caves, and three of the hills in the united parish exceed 1,300 feet in height. Near Craigneuk Point is a heap of stones called "Coulthart's Cairn," supposed to be connected in some way with the ancient Galloway family of Coulthart, of Coulthart. Kippford, Rockliffe and Douglas Hall are popular bathing places, visited during the summer by families from many parts of Scotland. The Hutton trustees and the Hilton trustees are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 18,666 acres; rateable value, £9,783; in 1881 the population was 1,281, and in 1891, 1,127.

CROCKETFORD, see URR.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village in the poor combination and small debts court district of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway and is 5 miles north-east from Laurieston and 5½ north-west from Castle Douglas, 91 south-west from Edinburgh, 19 south-west from Dumfries and 9 south-south-east from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the east banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Laurieston. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the latter river, furnish good perch and pike fishing. The parish church of St. Michael stands in the village, but of the cross from which the place derives its name there are now no remains. Greenlaw, in this parish, was formerly the residence of Robert, 4th Viscount Kenmure, who died in 1663 at the old fortress of Greenlaw, the remains of which still exist. Robert Gordon, son of William, 6th Viscount, who was beheaded on Tower Hill, 24th February, 1716, succeeded to the estate in 1737, and began the erection of the present house, which he had not completed at his death, 10th August, 1741. The estate of Greenlaw continued in the possession of the Gordons till 1880, when it was sold to John Ross Coulthart, of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the county of Lancaster, banker, but since his death has been in the hands of trustees. Besides the remains of the old fortalice of Greenlaw, there are also in the parish the foundations of a monastery. The Barony Isle of the river Dee is said to have been a consecrated spot, where the Druids had a temple in the midst of a grove of oaks. There is also a Roman burying place, several Pictish cairns, in which human bones have been found; and British encampments, near which stone weapons of various descriptions have been discovered. Mollance is the residence of John Neilson esq. and Auchendolly, of Col. Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. The trustees of the late Sir R. J. Abercromby bart. (d. 1895), the Cupar Educational trust, Allen Rutherford Bell esq. Col. John Birney R.E. and Col. Archibald Hume J.P., D.L. of 14, Imperial square, Cheltenham, are the principal landowners. The area is 9,919 acres; rateable value, £8,472; the population in 1881 was 1,333, and in 1891, 1,348, of which 100 are in Castle Douglas town.

DALBEATTIE.

DALBEATTIE is a town, burgh and quoad sacra parish, locally in the parish of Urr, poor combination of Kirkcudbright and Castle Douglas small debt court district, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 87 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 13½ north-by-east from Kirkcudbright, 13 south-west from Dumfries, and 6 east from Castle Douglas, on the Dalbeattie burn, a tributary of the Water of Urr, which is here navigable for vessels of 150 tons. The harbour, called Dub-o'-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway Firth. The burgh has communication by sea with the western ports, and by railway with many large inland towns, and has also several considerable falls of water, which are utilised for the working of various paper, bobbin and corn mills, and timber sawing works; in the neighbourhood are extensive granite quarries, granite polishing and granolithic works, carried on by Messrs. D. H. & J. Newall, Mr. D. Newall, Messrs. Fraser and Young, and others; and near the port are manure works and brick and tile works, the machinery of which is propelled by steam. The government of the burgh is vested in 9 commissioners, who are elected by the ratepayers of the three wards into which the burgh is divided under the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A police court is held on the last Thursday in each month. The town is lighted with gas. The Established church, in Craignair street, occupies a site presented by Mr. Maxwell, of Munches, and was built in 1879 at a cost of £3,876 (exclusive of the spire, erected by Mr. Maxwell), from the plans of Messrs. Kinnear and Peddie, architects, of Edinburgh, and was opened 27th January, 1880. There are five stained glass windows in the apse, placed as memorials to Mr. Stewart, and the church affords about 850 sittings. The Evangelical Union chapel (Mount Zion), erected in 1866, and seats 350. Free church, Mill street, built in 1843, was rebuilt in 1882 in the Romanesque style, and affords 560 sittings. The United Presbyterian church, John street, was erected in 1861. Christ Church (Episcopalian), erected in 1875, is in the Early English style, and will seat 164. St. Peter's Roman Catholic chapel is in Craignair street. There is an auction mart held every Saturday for the sale of cattle and sheep. There are Conservative and Liberal clubs, and branches of the Union Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland. About four miles north-east from Dalbeattie are the ruins of Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells, of Terregles. Mary, Queen of Scots, it is said, passed a night here after the battle of Langside Moor, 13th May, 1568. Wellwood Herries Maxwell esq. D.L., J.P. of Munches, Miss Copland, of Colliston and John William Hutchison esq. D.L., J.P. of Edingham, are the principal landowners. Rateable value of burgh, £8,202; the population in 1891 was 3,149, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,348.

DALRY (or ST. JOHN'S) is a parish and village on the east bank of the river Ken, bounded on the north-east by Dumfriesshire and south-east by the Garval brook, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, 8 miles north from Parton and New Galloway stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint line, 2½ miles north of New Galloway, the same distance from Balmaclellan, and 24 north of Kirkcudbright. The southern portion of the district lies in a beautiful valley of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral, and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village is surrounded with delightful scenery and there is a good hotel (the Lochinvar). St. John's Public Hall was erected in 1858, at a cost of nearly £400, and is used for public meetings, lectures &c. In the churchyard is a stone erected to the memory of two Covenanters with a long inscription in rhymed couplets. Fairs are held on the first Friday in July. In the parish are several lakes; the largest, Lochinvar, covers an area of 50 acres, and within it stand the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and latterly Viscounts of Kenmure. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T., William Forbes esq. J.P., of Callendar House, Falkirk, John M'Turk esq. of Mackilston, Richard Alexander Oswald esq., J.P. of Auchincruive, Ayr, and John Murray Kennedy esq. of Curridoo, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 34,536 acres; rateable value, £10,570; the population in 1881 was 988, and in 1891, 925.

NEW GALLOWAY is a small town and royal burgh, in the parish of Kells, and poor combination of Kirkcudbright and in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, with a station 5 miles distant on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire section of the Caledonian railway, 84 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 24 west from Dumfries, 18 north-east from Newton-Stewart, 14 north-west from Castle Douglas, 8 north-west from Parton and 20 north-north-west from Kirkcudbright. The town is pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ken, over which an elegant stone bridge of five arches was erected in 1821. The business of the place is confined to local handicraft. The burgh charter was conferred by Charles I. and the municipal government is vested in a provost two bailies and nine councillors. The Town Hall stands in the centre of the town, and has a public clock. Fairs are held on the Thursday after the 12th of April and the first Thursday in October. The population in 1891 was 391.

GATEHOUSE is a modern town and burgh of barony, partly in the parish of Anwoth, but chiefly in that of Girthon, 6 miles south-by-east from Dromore station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian system and 8 north-west from Kirkcudbright terminal station and 8 west from Tarff station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 105 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 50 east of Portpatrick and 33 south-west from Dumfries, charmingly seated at the head of Fleet Bay and in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed within hills and lofty eminences, some of which are clothed with woods, interspersed with rich pasturage. The town is well and regularly built, the streets running in straight lines and crossing each other at right angles. Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, through the interest of the late Mr. Murray, and is governed by a provost and town council. At the foot of High street flows the river Fleet, which is here crossed by a good stone bridge, and at this point the river meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of 60 tons burthen. The navigation was considerably improved by the late Mr. Murray, who, at a cost of £3,000, cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which a commodious quay has been constructed. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain, timber, and wood, and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper were some years since wrought to advantage; specimens of copper from the Enrick mine,shown at the London Exhibition of 1851, were then pronounced to be the richest in Europe. In High street stands a square tower of grey granite, 75 feet high, which had its origin in a sum of £30, left by Andrew Findlay, watch maker, in 1867, for the purpose of erecting a public clock; the tower was erected in 1871, at a cost of £300, raised by public subscription, and the fine clock was supplied at a cost of £160, and presented to the town by H. G. Murray-Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. of Cally. The public hall in High street, built at a cost of £1,400, obtained by public subscription, contains a very fine oil painting, by John Faed R.S.A. of Ardmore, of the town, castle and Rutherford's monument. The parish church of Girthon, erected in 1817, in place of an ancient church at the "Clachan" of Girthon, now in ruins, is now (1896) undergoing extensive alterations, including the erection of a new tower and other improvements, at an estimated cost of more than £1,000. There is a masonic lodge, a library, and a reading room well supplied with newspapers and periodicals. On a hill near the town stands a plain monument or column of stone, erected to Samuel Rutherford, once a popular minister here. The column, which overlooks the church where he preached, was struck and thrown down by lightning in 1847, but rebuilt soon after. The chief hotel is the Murray Arms, in which it is said Burns wrote the well-known "Scots wha hae." The market day is Saturday, the cattle markets on second Saturday, monthly; and the fairs are held on the Saturday before the 29th of June and the last Saturday in September. The population in 1881 was 1,286 and in 1891, 1,226.

GELSTON (or GILSTON), see KELTON

GIRTHON is a parish, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debts court district; bounded on the east by the Aire brook, north by the river Dee, and west by the Fleet water, 8 miles from Dromore station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian railway, and 5 west-by-north from Kirkcudbright terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish church is locally in Gatehouse. Barlay Mill,a short distance from Gatehouse, is the birthplace of the brothers Thomas Faed R.A. (1826) and John Faed (1820), the well-known artists. There are traces of three Roman encampments in the parish of Girthon. Cally is the residence of Horatio Granville Murray-Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. who is the lord of the manor. The area is 33,374 acres; rateable value, £9,718; the population in 1881 was 1,415, and in 1891, 1,354; of this number 896 were in the town of Gatehouse-of-Fleet.

KELLS is a parish, in the poor combination of Kirkcudbright and small debt court district of Castle Douglas, and contains the town and railway station of New Galloway (which see); the parish is bounded east by the Ken water, north by Pulmaddy burn, and west and south-west by the river Dee. Loch Ken, which adjoins the town, is 4½ miles long and in many places more than a mile broad, and abounds with pike and perch. The parish church is an edifice of stone with a square central tower, built in 1822; in the same year a Sunday school was established, in which upwards of 100 children are taught. In the churchyard is an ancient tombstone carved with the arms of the Coulthards and Macturks, and a monument to a covenanter. The ancient castle of Kenmure, which stands a short distance south, was once a place of considerable strength, and here, it is said, Mary Queen of Scots lodged one night, on her way from this country to England. Glenlee, the residence of Prince Smith esq. and Knocknalling, the residence of Mrs. John Murray Kennedy, are both in this parish. Mrs. Maitland Gordon, of Kenmure Castle, Prince Smith esq. of Glenlee, Wm. Forbes esq. J.P. of Earlston and Henry Houghton Hughan esq. D.L., J.P. of Airds, are the principal landowners. The area is 48,581 acres; rateable value, £9,982; and in 1881 contained a population of 970, and in 1891, 931; of this number 374 were returned for New Galloway.

KELTON is a parish, in the southern part of the county, bounded on the south by the parishes of Kirkcudbright and Tongland, and containing part of the police burgh of Castle Douglas; it is in the poor combination of Kirkcudbright and small debt court district of Castle Douglas, from which town Kelton kirktown is 2 miles south-west, and half a mile further south is the small village of Kelton Hill, or Rhonehouse. Gilston, or Gelston, is a village 3 miles south-east, and Bridge of Dee, a small village with a station on the Castle Douglas and Kirkcudbright section of the Glasgow and South Western railway, about 3 miles from Castle Douglas and 1 mile west of Rhonehouse. The ruins of the ancient castle of Threave stand on an island in the Dee, a mile north of Kelton. Threave House is the residence of William Gordon esq. J.P., D.L. Gelston Castle, a modern mansion, formerly the residence of Sir William Douglas, founder of Castle Douglas, is now occupied by Edward Ridley esq. Carlinwark loch, south of Castle Douglas, is upwards of a mile in length, and has an area of 118 acres; it contains a number of small islands, and is plentifully stocked with pike and perch. The parish church, a plain structure with a belfry, affords about 550 sittings. The extensive horse fairs formerly held at Kelton Hill have been transferred to Castle Douglas. William Gordon esq. J.P., D.L. of Threave, Graham Hutchison esq. J.P., D.L. of Balmaghie, Andrew Montgomery esq. of Netherhall, the trustees of the late Sir Robert J. Abercromby bart. John Campbell esq. Auchlane, Major Francis William Maitland-Kirwan, of Gelston, Charles Lockhart esq. Dildawn, John M'Kie J.P., D.L. of Bargaly, and Lieut.-Col. Charles H. Trueman J.P. of Torrs, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 11,222 acres; rateable value, landward, £10,521; the population in 1891 was 3,692, including 2,751 in the burgh of Castle Douglas, and in 1881, was 3,458, with 2,492 in the burgh.

KIRKBEAN is a small parish and village, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, is 10 miles from Southwick (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 5 south of New Abbey and about 10 south-east from Dumfries. The parish is bounded on east and south by the Solway Firth. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birthplace of John Paul Jones, a "sea adventurer," and a commodore in the United States navy, who was born 6 July, 1747, and was the son of a gardener in the place; from 1775 to 1779, as captain of the "Providence," he did much damage to English shipping, and died at Paris, 15 July, 1792. The conspicuous mountain called Criffel stands partly within the parish and partly within that of New Abbey; there are also slight traces of the castles of Caven and Weath, both of which were the property and occasional residence of the Regent Morton. Mainsriddle and Southerness are small villages, the latter being situated at the extreme point of the coast, which runs to the Solway Firth, and is resorted to for bathing purposes. On the point is a lighthouse. Carsethorn and Preston Mill are small hamlets also in this parish, both about a mile distant from the village of Kirkbean; the former is a favourite resort for bathers during the season. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. J.P. of Auchencruive, Ayr, and Col. Christopher Edw. Blackett J.P. of Arbigland, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 7,937; rateable value, £8,269; population in 1881, 794, and in 1891, 714.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT (G. Circ Cudbricht, Cuthbert's kirk) is a royal burgh, the capital of the stewartry, a parish and the head of a poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 100 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 55 east from Portpatrick, and 28 south south-west from Dumfries. The town occupies a peninsula on the east side of the Dee, about 6 miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Firth, and is of considerable antiquity; it is regularly built, and consists of six or seven distinct streets, at right angles with each other, and the houses have a respectable and comfortable appearance. The harbour is the best in the stewartry; at the ordinary spring tides the depth of water is 30 feet, and at the lowest neap tides 18 feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the Tongland bridge, built by Thomas Telford, the famous engineer, and constructed of one arch of 110 feet span. The iron bridge, erected across the Dee here during the period, 1865-8 at a cost of £10,000, and opened 8 July, 1868, is of the bowstring lattice construction, and is 500 feet long by 23 feet broad, consisting of five fixed spans of 71 feet each, and a compound span of 98 feet, which latter turns on a cast iron cylinder filled with concrete, to allow of the passage of vessels of considerable burthen; on the parapets is a reproduction of the burgh seal, together with the names of persons concerned in the erection of the bridge. A small fort erected here by the lords of Galloway, was afterwards superseded by a castle belonging to the Crown, and governed, with the town, by a constable. During the lordship of the Douglases in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence, and on the forfeiture of their rights, James II. erected the town into a royal burgh by charter dated at Perth, 26th October, 1455. This grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I. 20 July, 1633, and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two bailies, and thirteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain; together with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar and Lochmaben it forms the Dumfries Parliamentary district, returning one member. The Sheriff Court House was erected, at a cost of £8,583, on the site of the old Stewartry building, under the Sheriff Court House Act, at the joint expense of Government and the county, is a castellated structure with a tower in the centre; the old tower now stands in rear of the new building. On the ground floor are the offices of the procurator fiscal, the county and justice of the peace clerk's office, and police office; the second storey contains the court room, seated for 150 persons. From the old tower an extensive view is obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the castle of Kirkcudbright, built about 1630, by Sir Robert Maclennan K.T. 1st Baron Kirkcudbright, a title which has been dormant since the death of the 9th baron, 19 April, 1832. The former gaol and court house is an ancient and curious building, supposed to date from about the middle of the 16th century, and has a market cross on the outside stair leading to the tower. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The Royal, Commercial and the Selkirk Arms are the principal hotels. The Established church, erected in 1838, is a building of stone, consisting of nave, transepts, and a tower with spire, stands in the centre of a plantation, through which are public walks, and will seat 1,500 persons. A portion of the former church, erected in 1730, still remains, but is now used as a school. It contains a monument with recumbent effigy in fine preservation to one of the Barons Kirkcudbright. The Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert is a building of iron, erected in 1880 at a cost of £200, and containing nave, chancel, porch and vestry, and will seat 100 persons. The Free church, the foundation stone of which was laid in Aug. 1872, is a building of whinstone, with red sandstone facings, and occupies the site of the former church. It is in the Gothic style, with good traceried windows, and has a square tower, with spire reaching a height of 122 feet; there are sittings for 712 persons; attached to the church are a number of halls and various offices; the cost amounted to upwards of £5,000. The United Presbyterian church, in St. Cuthbert street, opened in 1880, at a cost of £3,300, will seat 400 persons. In rear of the church is a hall used for the Sunday school and various church purposes. The Johnstone Free school is a building of stone, consisting of a central block, with wings and a tower. The Town Hall, erected in 1879, at a cost of £5,300, is a building of freestone in the Classic style, and contains a library, reading room and lecture hall. A new building for the museum, previously in the Town Hall, was erected in 1892, at a cost of £1,550. The Mackenzie Hall, founded by Mr. John Mackenzie, of this town, is used for lectures, concerts &c. The market day is Friday. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, a mile from the town, formerly the seat of the late Earl of Selkirk, is now the residence of Captain John Hope R.N., D.L., J.P. Balmae is the residence of the Countess of Selkirk, and Ardendee is the residence of the Dowager Lady Lifford Captain John Hope R.N., D.L., J.P. of St Mary's Isle, William Bell, of Gribdae, and the town council of the burgh of Kirkcudbright are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,280 acres; rateable value, £19,113; the population was, in 1881, 3,479, and in 1891, 3,477, and of the burgh, 2,531.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM is a parish and small village in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, 5 miles north from Castle Douglas station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire section of the Caledonian railway, 85 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 14 south-east from New Galloway, 13 west-south-west from Dumfries, and 7 east from Parton. The parish, which is skirted by the Urr water on its western side, the north by Dumfriesshire, and south-east by Urr parish, derives its name from the old church, dedicated to St. Patrick, and from the Durham family, the ancient lords of the manor. The parish church, erected in the year 1848 on the site of the old church, is a building in the Gothic style, and has a tower. Auchenreoch Loch, a sheet of water about a mile in length, is in the parish, and on Larg Hill is a monument to the Covenanters. Adam Skirving esq. J.P. of Croys, Robert W. Fergusson esq. J.P. of Kilquhanity, and James M'Queen esq. J.P. of Crofts, are the principal landowners. The parish, which is between 9 and 10 miles in length and about 4 in breadth, comprises an area of 18,277 acres, partly pastoral and partly arable, the former character prevailing in the north, the latter in the south of the district; rateable value, £9,650; in 1881 the population was 1,317, and in 1891, 1,157; of this number 398 were returned for the village.

Old Bridge of Urr is a small village in the parish, 2 miles from the village of Kirkpatrick-Durham, on the banks of the Urr water.

LOCHFOOT, see LOCHRUTTON.

LOCHRUTTON is a parish at the north-eastern extremity of the stewartry, 5 miles south-west from Dumfries, its greatest length being 5½ miles by 4½ broad; bounded on the north by the parishes of Kirkpatrick and Terregles, east by Troqueer, south by Kirkgunzeon and west by Urr. At the base of a range of hills in the parish lies the village of Lochfoot, 2 miles north-west from Lochanhead station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries section of the Glasgow and South Western railway; and the Lochfoot lake, from which the village derives its name. This fine sheet of water—1 mile long by half a mile broad—provides the inhabitants of Dumfries and neighbourhood with an unfailing supply of water. On one of the hills here remains of a Druidical circle still exist. The area comprises 7,411 acres; the population in 1891 was 534, and in 1881, 614.

MAXWELLTOWN, which forms part of the burgh of Dumfries, is a town in the parish of Trequeer, and stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and is divided from Dumfries town by the river Nith, over which are three bridges, one of which is an ancient structure coeval with the Franciscan Monastery, to which its bridge tolls once belonged. The observatory and the gaol are both in this suburb. Full particulars and lists of residents are given with Dumfries (see Dumfries-shire).

MINNIGAFF is a large parish, in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, 17 miles in length by 11 in breadth; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ayr and the parish of Carpshairn, on the north-east by Kells, south-east by Girthon and Kirkmabreck, and on the west by the river Cree, over which there is a bridge uniting it to the parish of Penninghame and the town of Newton Stewart. The parish is in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, and has a station at Palnure, 3 miles south-east from Cree Bridge on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire section of the Caledonian railway. In the lower parts the land has been a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which is navigable for several miles and produces excellent fish of various kinds, including an abundance of salmon. The major portion of the parish is devoted to pasturage, and sustains large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle. Messrs. R. and W. Callander, timber merchants and saw mill proprietors, have extensive works here. The parish includes part of the town of Newton Stewart, Wigtownshire (which see). Kirroughtree, within a mile of Newton Stewart, but in the parish of Minnigaff, is beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by pleasant winding paths; in the grounds is a romantic grotto, formed out of an old stone quarry. Palnure is a village with a railway station and a small quay, near the confluence of the Palnure burn with the river Cree, 3 miles south-east from Newton Stewart and 4 north-west from Creetown. The area comprises 88,130 acres; rateable value, £14,910; the population in 1891 was 1,425, of whom 406 were in Newton Stewart, and in 1881, 1,587; of this number Newton Stewart contained 425.

Letters for Minnigaff are received through Newton Stewart

PARTON is a parish and village, in Kirkcudbright poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, and is bounded on the west by the Dee, the river Urr forming its eastern boundary; the parish extends from 6 to 7 miles in length, its breadth varying from 4 to 6. A large portion is hilly, especially in the northern quarter, but towards the Dee the land is flat and arable, and under cultivation; the village, which contains only a few houses, has a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire branch of the Caledonian railway. The church was erected in 1834, and with the manse belonging to it is about 3 miles from Crossmichael. Parton House and Airds House are good residences in the parish. Col. Patrick Sanderson, of Glenlaggan House, and Robert Armstrong Yerburgh esq. B.A., M.P. of Barwhillanty, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,841 acres; the population in 1891 was 692, and in 1881, 716.

PRESTON MILL, see KIRKBEAN.

RERRICK is a parish on the Solway Firth, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and is 6 miles south-east from Kirkcudbright (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The abbey church, many of the piers and arches of which are still standing, was a cruciform building with a central tower and spire rising to a height of 200 feet. The nave and choir were 120 feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, enclosing a garth. The remains now standing are almost entirely covered with a pale grey-coloured moss. The abbey afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland, after the defeat at Langside, 13 May, 1568, and previous to her embarkation for England. She arrived here in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at Burnfoot, the nearest point to the coast, situated in a little creek and surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks. Dundrennan is a small village in this parish, 6 miles south-west from Kirkcudbright station. The ruined Abbey of Dundrennan, the remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. John M'Dowall esq. J.P. of Girdsting Wood, is the principal landowner. The area is 19,980 acres; rateable value, £16,345; the population in 1881 was 1,807, and in 1891, 1,582.

Sub-Post Office, Dundrennan; Mrs. Margaret Copland, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Kirkcudbright. Delivery, 8.40 a.m.; dispatch, 2.5 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Auchencairn, 4½ miles distant TERREGLES is a parish near the confluence of the rivers Nith and Cluden and 2½ miles west of Dumfries. The abbey of Lincluden in this parish, the ruins of which occupy an elevated and sequestered site about a mile from Dumfries, was founded about the middle of the 12th century by Uchtred, eldest son of Fergus, Earl and Lord of Galloway, for nuns of the Benedictine order, and is assumed to have been colonised from the monasteries of Clugny or Marmoutier in France. The spot was anciently known as "Tir-eglwys" (Terra Ecclesia) now corrupted into "Terregles," but the name "Lincluden" signifies the "linn" or "pool" of the Cluden, a tributary of the Nith. In the autumn of 1174, Uchtred, the founder, was surprised in his castle at Loch Fergus by his brother Gilbert, and after being inhumanly tortured was put to death, but his mutilated remains, according to tradition, were interred within the abbey. In 1296, Alianore, prioress of Lincluden, did homage at Berwick-on-Tweed to Edward I. but in the 14th century, Galloway became the possession of Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas, and the abbey was shortly thereupon suppressed, the sisterhood expelled, and its endowments appropriated by this powerful chieftain, and the last priorress, Blanche, is believed to have died in 1440 at Dundrennan Abbey, where her tomb still remains. The Earl subsequently refounded the institution as a college for 12 canons and a provost, and erected new buildings, including a fine church, and he appears also to have liberally endowed his foundation, afterwards enlarged so as to consist of 8 prebendaries, 24 bedesmen and a chaplain; he died at Thrieve Castle, 3 Feb. 1400-1. Archibald, his son, 2nd Earl of Douglas and Duke of Touraine, married the Princess Margaret, daughter of King Robert III.; she died in 1440 and was buried with great pomp in the collegiate church, where her splendid tomb, though much mutilated, still remains. The college was eventually dissolved about 1565 Robert Douglas, the last provost, being pensioned, and the secularization of the college property was completed by the Annexation Act of 1587. The estates were subsequently granted to the Murrays of Lochmaben and to the Maxwells of Carlaverock, Earls of Nithsdale, now represented by Lord Herries. Of the original abbey, scarcely more than traces of its foundations now remain, but of the collegiate buildings, considerable portions are still standing, and include the church and the sacristy and provost's lodging, which formed part of the east side of a quadrangle adjoining the church on the north. The vaulting of the choir, entire in 1775, fell in at the beginning of the present century, and in 1851, a heptagonal tower, which stood south-west of the church, also fell, and the buildings were left to decay, until, in 1882, Capt. Alfred Constable-Maxwell, the late owner of the Terregles estate, repaired the fabric generally at very considerable expense, and erected a cottage for the residence of a caretaker. During the process of clearing and excavating the site, various relics of much interest were recovered, including a portion of the panelled rood screen, with figures, the coffin slab of Alexander de Carnys, provost, c. 1410-13, and others. The splendid tomb of the Princess Margaret, highly enriched with carved shields of arms and ornamental work, remains on the north side of the choir, and during the work of renovation the recumbent effigy which once lay within it was recovered, though in a much mutilated condition; on the south side of the choir are sedilia and a piscina, and the interior of the church generally is much ornamented with heraldic shields and carved foliage. In later days, Lincluden was a favourite resort of the poet Burns, and beside its ruined walls he composed several of his pieces, including the "Vision of Liberty." Terregles House is the residence of Henry Tootal Broadhurst esq. The area is 3,842 acres; the population in 1881 was 471 and in 1891, 478.

URR is a parish, a little to the north-east of Castle Douglas, in the Kirkcudbright poor combination, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Lochrutton, north by Kirkpatrick-Irongray and north-west by Kirkpatrick-Durham, and contains the town of Dalbeattie (which see).

Haugh-of-Urr is a picturesque village on the east bank of the Water of Urr, and about 3½ miles north-east from Dalbeattie station on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the neighbourhood is a waterfall called Spottes Lynn, a ferruginous well, and a romantic glen, interesting both to the botanist and geologist. On the bank of the river, about a mile from the village, is the Moat of Urr, an artificial mound, surrounded by elevated circles and supposed to have been used in primitive times as a place for public meetings. The Established church was erected in 1815.

Crocketford (or Nine Mile Bar), a small village about 3 miles north-east from Kirkpatrick, on the road from Dumfries, was begun towards the close of the last century by a sect known as the Buchanites, so called from their foundress and leader, Mrs. Elspath Buchan, who established the sect about 1779, but died in 1791, when her followers were dispersed.

Hardgate is a small village, half a mile from Haugh, and has a United Presbyterian church.

Springholm is a small village one mile east from Kirkpatrick, on the road from Dumfries. In the neighbourhood is a woollen manufactory.

Munches is the residence of Wellwood H. Maxwell esq. D.L., J.P. and Spottes of Alexander Young Herries esq. D.L., J.P. Alexander Young Herries esq. and Rowland Craig Lawrie esq. of Red Castle, are the principal landowners.

The area comprises 15,426 acres; rateable value, parish, £22,625; burgh, £8,202; the population in 1891 was 4,589, including 3,149 in the burgh of Dalbeattie, and in 1881 was 5,490, with 3,865 in the burgh.

LANARKSHIRE,

A POPULOUS county situated south of a line drawn from the Firth of Clyde to the Firth of Forth, and containing in its northern, or Lower ward, the City of Glasgow. At an early period this extensive district was, for convenience, divided into two wards, called the Over Ward and Nether Ward, Lanark being the chief town and seat of justice of the former, and Rutherglen of the latter; this arrangement was altered during the last century, when the county was divided into three wards, namely, the Upper, the Nether or Lower, and the Middle Wards, the chief towns being Glasgow, Lanark and Hamilton. The central part of the county throughout is termed Clydesdale, or the Vale of Clyde, from being the basin of that beautiful river. In the reign of James I. a portion of the county was made into the county of Renfrew. The three wards roughly correspond to the differences in the conformation of the country, as commencing from the south of the county the hilly portion may be said to correspond with the Upper ward; the plain country with the Middle; the Lower or Northern ward being the smallest, though having the largest population, as it includes the City of Glasgow. The county is bounded south by Dumfries-shire, west by Ayr and Renfrew, north by Stirling, east by Linlithgow, Edinburghshire and Peebles. Its extreme length (from south-south-east to north-north-west) is somewhat more than 50 miles, and its greatest breadth in the middle (from east to west) is about 34 miles; it includes within its area 881 square miles, or 564,284 acres, of which 4,584 are under water. In 1891 the population of the county comprised 523,169 males and 522,871 femules, total 1,046,040, and in 1881 a total of 904,412; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 208,923, and in 1881, 180,259. By Boundary Orders Nos. 137 and 140, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict.), that portion of the burgh of Glasgow which up to 1891 was included in the county of Renfrew, was transferred to Lanarkshire, thus increasing the total population of that county to 550,847 males and 555,052 females, equal 1,105,899, and the inhabited houses, 220,880. In size Lanark is the tenth of the Scottish counties, and in population the first.

Early History.—Held by the Strathclyde Britons, it was in 79 overrun by the Romans, who built their wall between the Clyde and Forth just north of this county; in 410 the Britons resumed possession, but were ousted by the Irish Scots, who in their turn gave way to the Northumbrians. Throughout the arduous struggle for Scottish independence, Lanarkshire was the theatre of many military excesses. At a subsequent date the turbulence of the Douglases, with the intrigues of the first Lord Hamilton, involved Lanarkshire in the various calamities consequent upon intestine warfare; it subsequently became subject to a thirty years' civil commotion, stimulated by the prosecution of the more zealous Presbyterians of this district by Charles I.

Soil, Produce, Manufactures, Climate, &c.—The upper division of the county is very mountainous; from Tinto, looking northwards, the face of the country shows only gentle elevations. The Upper Ward, which may be deemed three-fifths of the county, is mostly hilly and moorish; the Middle Ward, though esteemed a good agricultural district, is nearly one-third moss land. The Lower Ward is of very limited extent. The commencement of improvement in soil and cultivation in this part of Scotland was not apparent until about the middle or nearer the end of the 18th century; from this period draining, planting and inclosing took place. The chief crops are oats, 40,810 acres; turnips, 9,604 acres; potatoes, 4,110; vetches, 1,972; fruit, 1,909 and wheat, 1,734 and hay, all kinds, 44,396 acres; the total corn crops being 43,719 and green crops, 15,952 acres; land under grass, 101,927 and permanent pasture, 93,048 acres; total area of land and water, 564,879 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised: horses, 8,570; cattle, 71,094; sheep, 234,919 and pigs, 7,788. Some flax is grown, which is spun by females, who dispose of the yarn in the markets of Lanark, Biggar, Carnwath and other places. Gardens and orchards occupy 2,240 acres, more particularly on the banks of the Clyde; in this part they are of the most luxuriant growth, consisting chiefly of apple, pear and plum trees. In the neighbourhood of Carluke strawberries are also grown in abundance. The inhabitants of the inland and upland districts rear great numbers of black cattle and sheep, and the Clydesdale breed of horses is of a useful character. The climate, although varying considerably in different situations in the low-lying districts, in the vicinity of the Clyde is mild and temperate; but in the uplands in the south, south-west, and south-east the weather is more severe. In mineral productions, Lanarkshire is, perhaps, the richest in Scotland. Gold, to an important amount, was, at an early period, found in this county, and in later days, on the sides of a rivulet called the Wenlock, small pieces of that precious metal, in a pure state, have been picked up from among the sand and soil brought down by the torrents from the precipices and slopes of the mountains; particles of gold have also been found in Crawford Muir, with some large pieces of lapis lazuli. At present supplies of lead may be had in the parish of Crawford; and coal, ironstone, limestone, freestone, sandstone, whinstone, fire-clay and a variety of other metallic, mineral and fossil substances are to be obtained abundantly in different districts of the county. The lead mines belonging to the Earl of Hopetoun, at Leadhills, afford employment to a large number of workmen. Owing to the discovery of large quantities of bituminous shale, the manufacture of paraffin oil has been extending very rapidly in the neighbourhoods of Airdrie, Lanark and other places. In 1894 12,216,260 tons of coal, valued at £3,571,542, were raised in the county; also 221,321 tons of fire-clay, value £34,184; 85,982 tons of iron ore, value £36,048; 1,876 tons of lead ore, which gave 1,390 tons of lead and 7,299 ounces of silver. There are 11 iron works in the county, containing 70 blast furnaces, of which an average of 34 7-12ths were in work in 1894, producing (with the four furnaces of the Carron Co. at Carron) 459,697 tons of pig iron; and there is also a large production of shale oil; the quantity of shale raised in 1894 being 102,283 tons. The quantity of stone raised in the same time was 15,716 of limestone, and 1,860 of building stone. The fishing industry is only a small one; the number of boats registered in 1894 was 12; tonnage, 57, employing 12 hands; of other vessels the number registered was 1,689, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,522,299, and new vessels built were 124, aggregate tonnage, 16,908. The cotton goods, for which Glasgow is the market, are to a very considerable extent woven in different villages and parishes in the county, and this branch of manufacture supports a large proportion of the dense population; and there are extensive works in several places in the shire for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron and steel tubes and boilers, besides which there are large engineering, brick, tile and terra cotta, paper, and many and various other kinds of works.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The principal river is the Clyde, which rises on the north of the watershed which separates Lanarkshire from the counties of Peebles and Dumfries. The chief tributaries are the Powtrail water, the Grook burn, and the Even and Elvan waters, Glengonar water and the Duneaton water The Clyde flows in a longitudinal direction, in a winding course of more than 60 miles, dividing the county into two nearly equal parts, and ultimately falls into the Firth of Clyde, opposite the Isle of Bute. It ranks amongst the largest rivers of Scotland, and is navigable for vessels of 1,000 tons as far as the City of Glasgow. The most prominent of the secondary rivers within the shire are the Douglas water, the Mouse, the Nethan, the Avon, the Calder, the North Calder and the Kelvin. There are other streams, of less magnitude, as the Elwin, the Little Clyde, the Cotton and the Logan. The greatest elevatons of this county, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are:—The Lowther Hills, 2,403 feet; Tinto, 2,335; Culter Fell, 2,454; Wintercleugh Fell, 1,804; Goodbush, 1,556; Dungavel, 1,502; Hagshaw, 1,540; and Hawkswood, 1,251. The railways consist of the main line of the Caledonian line, which enters the county in the south-east and passing by Symington, where a branch goes off east to Biggar and Carstairs Junction, proceeds to Glasgow through Motherwell; at Carstairs Junction one branch goes north-east to Edinburgh, with a short branch from Auchengray to Wilsonstown, and another to Dolphinston, a third proceeding south-west to Muirkirk, on the way to which it connects at Ponfeigh with a line running through Lesmahagow and Ayr road—whence a branch goes to Stonehouse—to Hamilton, which is the centre for lines to Strathavon, East Kilbride and Pollockshaws on the west and Uddingston to the north; this latter line being continued through Shettleston to Glasgow; from Motherwell on the main line a branch runs through Coatbridge and Gartsherrie to the North of Glasgow. The North British enters the county in two places, a little west of Slamannan and Bathgate stations, and proceeds through Coatbridge and Airdrie to Glasgow, and the same railway comes in at Lenzie Junction, and it works the Glasgow City and District railway to and from Maryhill, and has a line from Glasgow to Uddingston and thence to Hamilton. The Caledonian Company have also a line through Coatbridge to Stirling and the north. The Forth and Clyde Navigation canal and the Glasgow Union canal both pass through the northern divisions of the county.

Divisions, Representation, &c.—Lanarkshire comprises (including the city parishes of Glasgow) 129 parishes and 14 parts of ecclesiastical parishes, which are included in the Presbyteries of Hamilton, Lanark and Glasgow, in the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr; there are 41 civil parishes and 3 parts of parishes, and it contains five royal and parliamentary burghs—Glasgow, Airdrie, Lanark, Rutherglen and Hamilton. Previous to the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, the county returned two representatives to the Imperial Parliament, but on the passing of that measure was apportioned into six divisions, and was given four additional members. Glasgow, which up to that time had sent but two members, was also separated into seven divisions, with the privilege of electing one representative for each. The royal burgh of Lanark, in conjunction with Hamilton and Airdrie in this county, Linlithgow, in the county of that name, and Falkirk in Stirlingshire, also contribute another member. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 (inclusive of railways and canals) was: Upper Ward, £317,513; Middle Ward, £1,079,232; Lower Ward, £702,212; total, £2,098,957.

AIRDRIE.

AIRDRIE is a market and post town and a burgh of barony, in the Middle ward, and a quoad sacra parish formed from the parish of New Monkland and includes the villages of Clarkston, Rawyards and Drumgilloch. The town has stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and is 18 miles north-north-east from Lanark, 32 west from Edinburgh and 11 east from Glasgow. The Monkland canal runs within a mile and a half from the town, which is regularly built and consists of several principal streets with smaller streets diverging from them; and it is lighted with gas, and well supplied with good water by two local companies. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, four bailies, and fifteen councillors, with a treasurer and town clerk: and together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Lanark and Linlithgow it forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted by the Reform Act of 1832 and returning one member. The TownHall, an important building has a tower with spire, and containing a clock. The County Buildings, a handsome pile, are used for the sheriff court, which is held every Tuesday, Thursday and Friday; a justice of the peace court is held here every Monday and Thursday, and here also are the offices of the sheriff clerk, the clerk of the peace, the procurator fiscal, and other public functionaries. The New Monkland parish council chambers, in North Bridge street, were erected at a cost of about £2,000. The Free Public Library, in Anderson street, erected at a cost of over £3,000, from the designs of Mr. G. Arthur, architect, of Airdrie, is an edifice in the Classic style, with Roman Doric pilasters, and contains a reading room, library, reference room, museum and picture gallery. The Airdrie Academy, on the south side of the town, was erected at the sole expense of the proprietor, Mr. Alexander, of Airdrie House, at an outlay of upwards of £2,500, and opened in 1848; it is on the south side of the town. A new secondary education and science school has also been erected at a cost of upwards of £5,000. Amongst the chief industries may be mentioned the extensive boiler and engineering works of Messrs. Inglis, Hossack & Co., the iron and steel forge of Messrs. Sutherland & Co. and the locomotive works of Messrs. Martyn Bros.; there are also other firms engaged in various branches of engineering and iron and brass founding, besides an extensive cotton mill. Hand loom weaving, which at one time occupied a large number of hands, is now almost extinguished owing to the introduction of steam power; there are also railway waggon works at Rawyards. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Co. Bank, as well as a bank for savings. The "Royal" and the "Star" are the principal commercial hotels and posting houses. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in November. The local newspapers are the "Airdrie Advertiser," "Coatbridge Express," "Lanarkshire Examiner" and "Rutherglen Reformer," printed and published here weekly by Messrs. Baird & Hamilton. Airdrie is the head quarters of the 5th Volunteer Battalion The Cameronians (Scottish Rifles), and of the B and D Companies. Rochsoles is the residence of Major-Gen. Montague Gilbert Gerard C.B., D.L., J.P.; Airdrie House, of Alexander John Alexander esq. J.P. and Cairnhill, of John More Nisbett esq. J.P. The rateable value of the burgh is £40,302; the population of the parliamentary burgh in 1881 was 13,363, and in 1891, 15,133, and of the municipal burgh, 18,135; ecclesiastical parish, 11,924.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, 20 Graham street; Miss Jessie Millar, postmistress. AVONDALE is a parish, in the Middle ward, in Hamilton poor combination and small debt court district, and contains the town of Strathaven; it is bounded on the east by the Kype water, on the south by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the Avon water, which flows through the centre of the parish, and on the north-west by East Kilbride. The reservoir for the supply of the Middle ward of the county with water, now (1896) being erected in the uplands of the parish, is estimated to cost more than £250,000; the water is of excellent quality. The district, the air of which is pure and salubrious, is recommended by many medical men as a summer resort. The Duke of Hamilton is the principal landowner. The area is 37,666 acres; rateable value, £40,174; the population in 1881 was 5,466, and in 1891, 5,069.

BENHAR, see SHOTTS.

BIGGAR is a small town and burgh of barony, and parish, in the Upper ward, and in Peebles poor combination, and the small debt court district of Lanark; the town, on the road between Peebles and Lanark, with a station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, opened in 1858-9, is 23 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-east from Glasgow, 16 west from Peebles, and 12½ south-east from Lanark. The town, which consists principally of a spacious main street, was created a baronial burgh by charter of James II. to Lord Robert Fleming of Biggar, in the 15th century; it is governed by a body of police commissioners and is lighted with gas by a company formed in 1839, and well supplied with pure water, conveyed from a source five miles distant. The parish is bounded on the east by Peeblesshire, west by the parish of Libberton, and north by Walston. The parish church is an ancient cruciform structure, in the Gothic style, founded and endowed in 1545, by one of the Flemings, lords of Biggar and Cumbernauld, as a collegiate church for a provost, eight prebends, four singing boys and six poor men, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The weekly market is held on Monday, and fairs in February and November, also on the eleventh day from the last Thursday in October (old style) and one on the third Thursday in July. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. In this parish there are some remains of Boghall Castle, once the feudal stronghold of the Fleming family, and the principal residence of the successive lords, until late in the 17th century, when they had been advanced to the revived dignity of earls of Wigton. Its next possessors were the Elphinstones, through whose neglect it fell into decay. At a comparatively recent date its walls were pulled down, and the materials carried off to form drains and dykes in the neighbourhood. Tradition reports that an engagement took place near this town between the Scots, under Wallace, and the English army, when the Scottish leader drove the invaders into a morass, where most of them perished. Carwood House is the seat of James Dennistoun Mitchell esq. D.L., J.P., B.Sc., B.C.L. who is the principal landowner. The parish is 6 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, embracing 7,272 statute acres; rateable value, £14,165. In 1881 the parish had a population of 2,128, and in 1891, 1,902, and 1,356 in the burgh.

BLACKWOOD, see LESMAHAGOW.

BLANTYRE is a parish, in the north-western part of the county and Middle ward, about 6 miles in length, with a coast line to the Clyde of about 2 miles and a half; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Hamilton, south by Glassford and west by East Kilbride and Cambuslang, and is in Hamilton poor combination and small debts court district. The parish has two stations, Blantyre and High Blantyre, on different sections of the Caledonian railway, and contains three villages, High Blantyre, Low Blantyre and Stonefield, all situated in a rich and fertile district. High Blantyre, the first of these, is 8 miles south-by-east from Glasgow, and between 2 and 3 west-by-north from Hamilton, on the road between the last-named town and East Kilbride. Low Blantyre, rather more than a mile distant in a north-easterly direction, was built and is owned by Messrs. Henry Monteith & Co. dyers, whose extensive works, established about 1780, present a long frontage to the river Clyde, but since 1893 have not been at work.

Adjoining are the premises of Messrs. Robert Kerr & Co. cotton manufacturers. Dr. David Livingstone, the distinguished African explorer and missionary, was born in a small house in this village, March 19, 1813, his father having kept a small shop at Hamilton, while he himself was employed in the mills; he was admitted a Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery in 1838, and his African labours and travels, in connection with Dr. Moffat, and at a later period Mr. H. M. Stanley M.P. extended from 1840 to 1872, after which Livingstone continued his explorations alone, but died at Hala, 4th May, 1873; his remains, carried to Zanzibar by his native servants, were transferred to England and interred in Westminster Abbey, 18th April, 1874. Stonefield, the third village, lying about midway between the other two, is entirely the creation of the coal trade, and is principally inhabited by the miners employed in the numerous pits in the neighbourhood belonging to Messrs. Merry and Cuninghame and Messrs. Baird and Messrs. Dixon Limited; it was in one of the pits belonging to Messrs. Dixon, at High Blantyre, that the great explosion of 22nd October, 1877, took place, causing the death of over 200 men and boys. The Free church at Stonefield occupies the site of the old one, and was erected at a cost of about £2,000. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. The ruins of Blantyre priory, founded early in the 13th century, stand on a rocky eminence on the south bank of the Clyde. At the Reformation, the priory was demolished, and its revenues, with the patronage of the parish church, given by James VI. to Walter Stewart, afterwards lord treasurer of Scotland, who was created, 10th July, 1606, Lord of Blantyre. South of High Blantyre, near the farm of Park, and in a very picturesque locality, is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur; the water is of similar quality to that of St. Bernard's well, near Edinburgh; it was formerly much resorted to, and is still efficacious in the cure of scrofulous and scorbutic cases. Calderwood Castle, the property of Capt. Dundas R. Gill, is now occupied by W. J. Chrystal esq. Lord Blantyre D.L., A. Millar Bannatyne of Millheugh, John Craig esq. C.C. of Bellsfield and Mrs. Agnes Scott of Blantyre Farm, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,954 acres; rateable value, £45,640. The population in 1891 was 11,352, and in 1881, 9,760.

BOTHWELL is a parish and ancient village in the Middle ward, and Motherwell poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Hamilton, about 9 miles south-east from Glasgow and between 2 and 3 north-west from Hamilton, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways. The parish is about 8 miles and a half long by 4 broad; the great roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and from Glasgow to Carlisle, pass through it; and besides the river Clyde, it is intersected by the two Calder streams, which are beautifully wooded. Bothwell bridge, which spans the Clyde, is famous in Scottish history as the scene of an encounter between the royalist forces under the Duke of Monmouth K.G. and a formidable army of Covenanters, on the 22nd of June, 1679, in which the latter were totally defeated. The ancient church of Bothwell was founded by Archibald "The Grim," Earl of Douglas, in 1398, as a collegiate church, with an endowment for a provost and eight prebendaries. The present parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish, is an edifice in the Gothic style. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Lim. The "Clyde" is the chief hotel here. Kirkland Joint Lunatic Asylum, about half a mile from the town, and formerly conducted as a private asylum under Dr. Dean Fairless, was bought by the Glasgow District Board of Lunacy, in 1878, and opened in 1881 as a district asylum for pauper patients, and contains over 200 beds. BothwellCastle,the residence of the Earl of Home A.D.C., V.D. is a modern mansion, standing in the midst of shrubberies and plantations, and near it, on an eminence, is the magnificent ruin of Bothwell Castle, once an important Scottish fortress. The Duke of Hamilton is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,644 acres; rateable value, £189,395; the population in 1891 was 31,484, of which number Bothwell village contained 2,400, and in 1881, 25,466, with 1,520 in the village.

Carnbroe is a small village in the parish of Bothwell, a mile and a half from Coatbridge. The works in the neighbourhood afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The nearest railway station is at Calderbank, about a mile distant, on the Glasgow and Airdrie section of the Caledonian railway. The population in 1891 was 739.

Fallside is a hamlet in the parish of Bothwell, about 1 mile north-east from Bothwell village, with a station on the Carstairs Junction and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway.

BUSBY, see EAST KILBRIDE.

CADDER is a parish, in the Lower ward, small debts court district of Glasgow, extending along the northern boundary of Lanarkshire, with Kirkintilloch and New Monkland on the east, New Kilpatrick on the west, Campsie on the north, and the barony parish of Glasgow on the south, and has stations at Gartcosh, Garnkirk and Steps Road on the Caledonian railway, and at Bishopbriggs on the North British railway, and is about 5 miles north from Glasgow. The great canal between the Forth and the Clyde, passes through the parish for 5 miles and the river Kelvin washes its northern boundary to the extent of 6 miles. Coal has been found on the estate of Cadder, and coal and very valuable fire clay on that of Garnkirk. Cadder House, the property of Archibald Stirling esq. D.L. is now (1896) occupied by Andrew Buchanan esq.

Chryston is a compact little village pleasantly situated on a considerable elevation about 6½ miles from Coatbridge. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. Bedlay Manor is the residence of Thomas C. Christie esq. J.P., D.L. The nearest railway station is at Garnkirk, over a mile distant. The population in 1891 was 495.

Moodiesburn is also a small village in this parish.

Gartcosh is a somewhat scattered village in this parish, about 4½ miles from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. Woodneuk House is the residence of John Hurll esq.

Bishopbriggs is another village in the parish, 3½ miles north-east from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. The population in 1891 was 934.

Garnkirk is a village in the parish of Cadder, about 6 miles east-north-east from Glasgow and 3½ north-west from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. The Garnkirk Fire Clay Works here form one of the largest manufactories of fire clay in Great Britain, and employ about 500 men. The quality of the fire clay on this property is quite equal to that of Stourbridge in Worcestershire, and bricks, furnace blocks, retorts and crucibles are exported in large quantities to all parts of America, Germany, Holland and Russia. The manufacture of glazed pipes for water and sanitary purposes and of ornamental articles, such as chimney cans, vases and fountains, is also extensively carried on at this establishment. Garnkirk House is the residence of Major Alexander Sprot. The population in 1891 was 813.

Muirhead is a small village about 6 miles from Coatbridge, lying between Garnkirk, which is the nearest railway station, and Chryston. The population in 1891 was 404.

Archibald Stirling esq. of Dunblane; the Carron Co.; William D. Cleland esq.; Thomas Craig Christie esq. D.L., J.P. of Chryston; John Faill esq.; John Hurll esq.; Major Alexander Sprot; Henry R. Taggart esq.; the trustees of the late A. J. Lamont esq. D.L., J.P. of Lamont (d. 1862), and Messrs. Smith and McLean, of Gartcosh Iron works, are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire parish comprises 13,969 acres; rateable value, £45,085; the population in 1891 was 8,232, and in 1881, 6,965.

CALDERCRUIX, see NEWMONKLAND.

CALTON, see GLASGOW.

CAMBUSLANG is a town and parish, in the Middle ward, and small debts court district and poor combination of Hamilton; the parish contains the large mining villages of Hallside and Newton (which see), Flemington, Spittal Colliery, Newton Colliery, Westburn and Halfway and is bounded on the east by the North Calder water, north by the Clyde, west by Carmunnock parish and south by East Kilbride parish; the town stands on the road from Glasgow to Hamilton, on the banks of the Clyde, and includes the suburbs of Kirkhill Coats, Silverbanks and Wellshott Hill; it has a station on the Glasgow and Lanark section of the Caledonian railway, and is 4 miles south-east from Glasgow; in 1872 it was supplied with water by gravitation. The "Auld Kirk," as it is termed, prior to the Reformation belonged to a prebend of Glasgow Cathedral; there was also at that time a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary; in 1565, the chaplain, Sir John Millar, made grants of the property endowed for its support and these lands are still called "chapel lands." The Cambuslang Institute and Library, erected in 1891, at a cost of £3,000, has a library containing upwards of 3,000 volumes. The works of Messrs. T. P. Miller & Co. turkey red dyers, afford employment to the female working portion of the population, the male portion being engaged in the collieries and large iron and steel works of the neighbourhood. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited. The annual agricultural show of the Cambuslang, Blantyre, and Rutherglen Agricultural Society is held at Cambuslang, on the Queen's birthday. In the south-east portion of the parish lies the famous "Dechmont Hill," referred to by Sir Walter Scott in the lines:—"Wight Wallace stood on Dechmont Hill, and blew his bugle round, till the wild bull in Cadzow wood had started at the sound." The Duke of Hamilton; Allan Graham-Barns-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Craigallian and G. B. H. Montgomery esq. of Newton, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,160 acres; rateable value, £96,686; the population of the parish in 1891 was 15,364, including 8,323 in the town and in 1881, 9,447, with 5,538 in the town.

Halfway is a mining village with a population in 1891 of 928.

Flemington, another mining village, lies close to Cambuslang town, and had in 1891 a population of 796, and in 1881, 691.

Newton Colliery, with a population (1891) of 964; Spittal Colliery Rows, population 397, and Westburn, population 790, are all hamlets in this parish.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Main street, Cambuslang; Joseph Mowatt, postmaster. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 7.15 a.m. & 2.45 & 7.15 p.m.; dispatches, 9.50 a.m. & 1.15, 4.15, 5.40, 6.35 & 7.55 p.m

CAMBUSNETHAN is a parish and village in the Middle ward, and in Cambusnethan poor combination; the village is about a mile east from Wishaw, with which burgh it is now incorporated, and the nearest railway stations are at Morningside, on the Caledonian and North British railways. The parish is bounded on the east by Linlithgowshire and Edinburghshire, north by the South Calder water, and south byCambusnethan parish. The ancient parish church, now an ivy-grown ruin, has long been disused, but interments still take place in the graveyard, which has been greatly extended, and is tastefully kept. The present church, on Kirk Brae, is a modern edifice with square tower, and stands near. The staple trade of the district is coal, and upwards of one million tons are sent from Wishaw annually. The fire-clay works of Messrs. W. Hudspith and Co. and Messrs. London and Russell, the iron and brass foundry of Mr. Thomas Gray, the Stenton Iron and Steel Works, the Pather Iron and Steel Co. Limited, and the railway waggon and axle works of Messrs. R. Y. Pickering and Co.Limited, give employment to a large number of workmen. About 2 miles south-west from Wishaw, and near to the Clyde, is an ancient graveyard, the burial place of the Hamiltons, lords of Belhaven and Stenton, a title first conferred, 15th December, 1647, on Sir John Hamilton kt. of Broomhill; it is also said that the original parish church stood upon this site, but no trace of it whatever now remains. In the graveyard stands the tomb of Robert Montgomery, 8th Lord Belhaven and Stenton K.T. and Baron Hamilton, of Wishaw, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, who died 22nd December, 1868. It was erected by his widow, and is a handsome structure of freestone, 28 feet in height, with granite tablets on three sides, one of which bears an inscription; the graveyard also contains many memorials, rudely but curiously carved, and of considerable antiquity: one of these, erected in 1733, commemorates Arthur Inglis, in Nethertoun, shot at Stockelton Dyke by Graham, of Claverhouse, July, 1679, and several bear lengthwise the simple device of a sword. There are also memorials to Sir James Stewart Denham bart. and his wife, erected by their son, General Sir James Stewart bart. G.C.H. of Coltness and Goodtrees. Wishaw House is the seat of Lord Belhaven and Stenton, who is lord of the manor; Allanton House, of James Lemon esq.; Coltness House, of James Houldsworth esq. D.L., J.P. of Coltness; Cambusnethan House, of Major-General Graeme Alexander Lockhart C.B., D.L., J.P.; Garrion Tower, of James Scott esq. and Murdostoun Castle, of Robert King Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. The area of the parish is 16,708 acres; rateable value, £93,033; the population in 1881 was 20,823, and in 1891, 22,709, which includes 2,598 in Newmains and 12,467 in Wishaw.

Bonkle is a village in Cambusnethan parish, 3 miles east from Wishaw. The nearest railway station is at Newmains, on the Motherwell and Morningside section of the Caledonian railway, one mile distant. Population returned with the parish.
Letters through Newmains R.S.O

Morningside is another village about 2 miles east from Wishaw,with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways; here also are the collieries of the Morningside Coal Co. Population in 1881, 740, and in 1891, 748.

Chapel is a hamlet adjoining Morningside, the inhabitants of which are chiefly employed in the adjacent collieries, and in an iron foundry. Population in 1881, 414, and in 1891, 503.
Letters through Newmains R.S.O

Waterloo is a village in the parish of Cambusnethan, 2 miles south from Wishaw. The nearest railway station is at Overtown,a quarter of a mile distant, on the Caledonian railway. The population in 1881 was 855, and in 1891, 967.

CARLUKE (formerly a burgh of barony) is now a small town, and is a parish in the Upper ward, small debt court district of Lanark, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 20 south-east from Glasgow, 10 south-east from Hamilton, and 5 north-west from Lanark. The parish is bounded on the east by Carstairs parish, south by Lanark parish, west by the river Clyde, and north by the parish of Cambusnethan. The town contains several regular streets, Kirkton street, High street and Hamilton street, each having a number of fine stone buildings, and the shops are lighted with gas. The Rankin Memorial Hall, in High street, is a modern building, erected on a site given by James Brownlie esq. Glasgow, who also contributed £1,000 towards the erection. The district is rich in coal, ironstone and limestone, all being of the best quality. The trade of the town and neighbourhood is chiefly confined to mining and agriculture. The banks of the Clyde have long been famous for the culture of fruit trees. Apples, pears, strawberries and gooseberries are produced in great abundance, and in higher perfection in this district than in any other in Scotland. The growing of strawberries now forms a prominent feature in the industry of the district. A large portion of the produce is usually purchased by preserved fruit manufacturers, and great quantities are also forwarded to Glasgow. There are branches here of the British Linen Co. Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and also a Savings Bank. There are also two steam corn mills, a steam saw mill, several brick works, the extensive preserve factory of Messrs. R. & W. Scott, two engineering works, an iron foundry, the boot and shoe works of Mr. John Watson, and three timber merchants. Major-General William Roy, an eminent mathematician, employed on the Ordnance Survey of Scotland and Great Britain, was born in this parish, 4th May, 1726, and died 1st June, 1790. There is a cattle show held here yearly on the last Wednesday in June. Mauldslie Castle is the seat of Sir William Wallace Hozier bart. D.L., J.P. and Milton Lockhart, of Major-General David Blair Lockhart. Principal landowners are Lt.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. D.L., of Lee; Sir William Wallace Hozier bart. D.L., J.P. of Mauldslie Castle; Lord Lamington D.L., J.P. of Lamington; Major-General David Blair Lockhart, of Milton Lockhart; James Stevenson Hamilton, of Kirkton; The Earl of Home D.L., J.P. Douglas Castle, and Sir Windham Charles James Carmichael Anstruther bart. D.L., J.P. of Carmichael. The parish has an area of 15,345 acres; rateable value, £45,550; in 1881 the population was 8,552, and in 1891, 8,058; the town of Carluke containing 4,116 of that number.

Braidwood is a small village in the parish of Carluke, 2 miles south-east from the town, and about half a mile to the right of the road to Lanark. Here are the chemical works of the trustees of Mr. James Martin, a steam saw mill and brick and tile works. Braidwood House is a handsome mansion of stone, and about half a mile nearer to the Clyde are the remains of a fortified structure, apparently of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, known as "Hall Bar," and consisting of a tower and keep in good preservation; it was thoroughly repaired not long since, and is still inhabited. Besides Braidwood there is the hamlet of Kilncadzow, at which place there is a board school. The population in 1881 was 616, and in 1891, 439.

CARNWATH is a parish, small town and burgh of barony, on the main road between Biggar and Edinburgh, with a station on the Edinburgh and Carstairs section of the Caledonian railway, and is a parish in the Upper ward, and the small debts court district of Lanark, 25 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 27 south-east from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Biggar, and the same distance east from Lanark. It consists of one street, nearly three-quarters of a mile in length. About the centre is the tolbooth, a plain old building, in front of which is the cross, an obelisk, on which the distances from Edinburgh to various places in Clydesdale and Ayrshire are indicated. Lieut.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. D.L. of Lee and Carnwath, is superior of the burgh. The estate is held of the Crown, on payment of a pair of red hose, which are run for annually on the day succeeding the August fair, and followed by athletic games, to the successful competitors for superiority in which are awarded medals and prizes in money. The remains of the ancient church stand at the west end of the town, and a portion of the building is used as a sepulchre for the Lockhart family; it contains the remains of the Somervilles, former lords of the manor, and includes a tomb of the 15th century, with the effigy of one of these in complete armour, and another of his wife in the costume of the period. The present church, erected in 1866, on the site of the former one, erected about 1798, is a building of freestone, in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,000 persons. Fairs are held on the last Friday in February (new style), for hiring servants, and the Friday before the 31st of October, for hiring servants. About a mile to the north-west of Carnwath are the scattered ruins of Cowthally Castle, in former ages the seat of the Somervilles. Carnwath House is the seat of Lieut.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. D.L. and Kersewell of William Bertram esq. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. D.L. of Lee, James Williamson esq. of Westside-wood and William Bertram esq. of Kersewell. The parish is bounded on the east by Dunsyre parish, north by Edinburghshire, west by West Mouse river, and south by the river Medwin. Auchengray, 5 miles north-east of Carnwath, is a village with a station on the Caledonian railway. Braehead is a village 3 miles north.

Haywood and Wilsontown are also villages, the latter being 6 miles north from Carnwath; both have a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway. The population of Haywood in 1881 was 1,121, and in 1891, 1,206; of Wilsontown in 1881, 808, and 651 in 1891. The civil parish embraces an area of 30,446 acres; rateable value, £27,946; the population in 1881 was 5,831, and in 1891, 5,324, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 3,798.

CARSTAIRS is a parish and small village, in the Upper ward, small debts court district of Lanark, on the road from Edinburgh to Lanark, about a mile east from Carstairs Junction on the Caledonian railway, 4 north-east from Lanark and 3 west of Carnwath. The Mouse water flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the east by Carnwath parish, south by the river Clyde, west by Lanard and Carnwath parishes. The three fairs formerly held here, having gradually declined, are now altogether discontinued. From the number and magnitude of the architectural and other Roman remains which have been discovered here, it is assumed that the place must have been one of importance during the Roman period. Carstairs House is the seat of Joseph Monteith esq. J.P., D.L. The principal landowners are Joseph Monteith esq. J.P., D.L., William Eliott-Lockhart esq. D.L., J.P. of Cleghorn and Lieut.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. D.L. of Lee. Acreage, 9,820; rateable value, £10,495; population of the parish in 1881, 1,955, and in 1891, 1,977.

Carstairs Junction is a village in the civil parishes of Carstairs and Carnwath; the population in 1881 was 888, and in 1891, 943.

Post Office, Carstairs; Thomas Martin, postmaster. Letters received through Lanark. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 7.30 p.m.; dispatches, 8 & 9.30 p.m. Postal orders issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Carstairs Junction, distant 2 miles

COATBRIDGE.

COATBRIDGE is a populous town and municipal burgh in the parishes of Old and New Monkland, and in the Middle ward and small debt court district of Airdrie, on the Glasgow and Edinburgh road, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 8 miles east from Glasgow and 2 west from Airdrie. The burgh includes the quoad sacra parishes of Coats, Gartark and Gartsherrie, in Old Monkland parish and portions of New Monkland and Old Monkland ecclesiastical parishes; it is divided into five wards. The Monkland canal passes through. The Technical School was erected by the Old Monkland School Board, at a cost of about £7,000, and opened in 1891. The Theatre Royal is a substantial building of stone, and will hold an audience of 2,000; it is open from August to May; Mr. Easton Watson, proprietor and manager. The Institute at Gartsherrie, erected at a cost of £5,000, was the gift of William Weir esq. of Kildonan, and is a building of stone, containing spacious reading and billiard rooms, swimming and private baths. At Gartsherrie, Calder, Carnbroe, Langloan and Summerlee are iron works on an extensive scale, affording employment to large numbers of the inhabitants. Several firms are engaged in the manufacture of malleable iron and steel, and the making of iron tubes is likewise carried on in this distr ct, and there are several large engineering and iron founding establishments. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Drumpellier House is the residence of Col. Sir David C. R. Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B., D.L., J.P. and Gartsherrie, the residence of Capt. George Fredk. Russell Colt D.L., J.P. The rateable value of the burgh is £106,964. In 1881 Coatbridge had a population of 17,500, but in 1891 it had increased to 30,034; viz.: First ward, 5,129; Second ward, 7,357; Third ward, 5,113; Fourth ward, 5,336; and Fifth ward, 7,099.

CROSSFORD, see LESMAHAGOW.

CULTER is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debt court district of Lanark, 3 miles south from Biggar and 11 south-east from Lanark, with a station on the Peebles-shire branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish is traversed by the Culter water, and bounded on the extreme north-west by the river Clyde and on the east by Peebles-shire, and in the village is a reading room with a library of 1,400 volumes, erected by Alexander Kay esq. of Cornhill, on a site given by R. G. Baillie esq. of Culter Allers. Agriculture and sheep farming appear to be carried on extensively. Robert G. Baillie esq. of Culter Allers, is the principal landowner. The parish of Culter, which contains an area of 11,883 acres, is now wholly situated in Lanarkshire; rateable value, £6,060; population in 1881, 574, and in 1891, 559.

DOUGLAS is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark, on the south side of the Douglas water, and on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr, with a station, 4 miles north, on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway, 41 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-south-east from Glasgow and 12 south from Lanark. The parish, which extends on the west to Ayrshire, is well watered, for besides the Douglas there are three minor streams which fall into the Douglas, previous to its junction with the Clyde about 7 miles below the village, which consists of several narrow irregular streets, and is well lighted with gas. Near the centre, and within a burial ground, stand the remains of the ancient parish church, which contains monuments of some of the great chiefs of the house of Douglas. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. The parish abounds in limestone, freestone and coal. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in February, the third Friday in March, the first Friday after Whitsuntide, the third Friday in October, and the third Friday after Martinmas for hiring servants. Near the village, on the bank of the river, stands Douglas Castle, the residence of the Earl of Home. The old castle was burned down in 1760, and the present edifice was begun in 1761, from designs by Robert Adam, the distinguished architect. Springhill House is the residence of Sir Robert Gillespie D.L., J.P. The Earl of Home and John Paterson, of Carmacoup, are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 34,139 acres; rateable value, £19,964 18s.6d.; the population in 1881 was 2,641, and in 1891, 2,266.

Rigside is a small village in the parish of Douglas, and 4 miles north from Douglas village, on the road from Edinburgh to Ary. In its neighbourhood are several collieries, and it also abounds with rich and productive beds of ironstone, limestone and fireclay. The Free church, with manse attached, was built in 1885, at a total cost of about £1,300, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, seating about 200. The population in 1891 was 322.

Inches is a village in this parish, with a station on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway.

HAMILTON.

HAMILTON is an ancient town, police burgh and parish, the head of a poor law combination and small debt court district, and the chief town in the Middle Ward of the county, with stations on the Caledonian and NorthBritish railways, 37 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 10½ south-south-east from Glasgow, 15 north-west from Lanark, 8 south from Airdrie and 7 north from Strathaven. The town lies along the base of a rising ground, extending nearly a mile in length, and consists of several streets of substantial, well-built houses, including a new thoroughfare forming a continuation of the London road, and crosses the ravine, dividing the old and new towns, which are connected by Cadzow bridge, and is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works belonging to the Town Council. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the 15th century by one of the Hamiltons, lords of Cadzow; Queen Mary created it a royal burgh in 1548, but after the Reformation the rights and privileges thus acquired were resigned into the hands of William, Duke of Hamilton K.G. who, in 1670, restored to the community its former franchises, and erected it into a burgh of regality dependent on him and his successors. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, four bailies and ten councillors; and in connection with Lanark, Airdrie, Falkirk and Linlithgow, it forms the Lanark Parliamentary district, returning one member. The justices of peace hold regular courts for the trial of minor offences.

The parish church was made collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a provost and prebendary, and has always been the place of sepulture of the Hamilton family.

The Old Grammar School of Hamilton was founded by the ducal family of Hamilton early in the 16th century. It stood near the old churchyard, adjoining the present palace, and was endowed by Lord John Hamilton in 1588 with £20 Scots. In 1714, Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, built a school (now called the Old Grammar School), endowing it with an annual sum of £11 2s. 4d. the Town Council being the sole managers. The present school, erected in 1848 by the Town Council, the heritors of the parish of Hamilton, and subscribers, was managed by a directorate and was then called the "Hamilton Academy." In 1866 the subscribers handed over their interest in it, on certain conditions, to the Town Council, who, with the heritors, continued to be the governing body till 1872, when, by the Education (Scotland) Act of that year, it was transferred to the burgh school board, who, in 1876, erected it into a higher-class school, and in 1890 various alterations and extensions were made to the buildings.

The Town Hall is a building in the Classic style, and contains the various municipal offices.

The Victoria Hall, in Quarry street, erected in 1887, at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of red freestone, and the main hall will hold 1,500 persons.

There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Lim. the British Linen Company's Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited.

The weekly market for Hamilton is held on Friday. The hiring and cattle markets are held on the third Friday in April and the third Friday in October; and the annual cattle show about the beginning of June.

There is a hospital, in Muir street, for four old people, endowed by the late Mr. Aikman, of Ross. In the vicinity, to the west of the town, on the road to Bothwell, are barracks, and on the banks of the Clyde is an extensive racecourse, on which horse races occasionally take place.

Hamilton is the depot of Regimental Districts Nos. 26 and 71, and is also the head quarters of B Squadron of The Queen's Own Glasgow and Lower Ward of Lanarkshire Yeomanry Cavalry, and of the 2nd Volunteer Battalion, The Cameronians (Scottish Rifles).

At the junction of Muir street and Cadzow street stands a fountain which has been presented to the town by Sir John Watson bart. of Earnock; it is of Aberdeen and Peterhead granite, from designs by Mr. Gavin Paterson, of Hamilton, and consists of an octagonal base, from which rise eight columns of polished Peterhead granite, carrying a circular ogee-shaped dome. There are four recessed drinking basins, and the remaining sides are filled in with bronze panels, two ornamented with heraldic devices and one containing a medallion portrait of the donor. In the centre of the base, under the dome, is a bronze figure representing Industry. The total height is 22 feet.

In August, 1895, a public park of 23 acres was presented to the burgh by the Duke of Hamilton.

Hamilton Palace, the seat of the Duke of Hamilton, with its surrounding park and pleasure grounds, magnificently wooded, covers an area of about 1,400 acres; the palace is a stately mansion in the Renaissance style, and contains many fine apartments, but the pictures, ornaments &c. were disposed of by auction in London in the month of June, 1882, by order of the late Duke of Hamilton. In the middle of the great park, one mile from the town, on a rock overhanging the Avon, stand the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient manor house.

Cadzow wood, or forest, in this parish, is the home of a famous breed of wild, white cattle, and it is said to be a condition appendant to the title of Duke of Hamilton that the breed should be maintained in this forest.

Glenlea House is the residence of James C. Burns esq. J.P.

The Duke of Hamilton and Sir John Watson bart. are the principal landowners, the former being the lord of the manor. The parish of Hamilton embraces an area of 14,243 acres; rateable value, £239,639 1s.; in 1881 the population was 23,933, and in 1891, 35,161. The population of the municipal burgh in 1891 was 24,421, and of the parliamentary, 24,859; of the ecclesiastical parish, 19,004.

HOLYTOWN is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Bothwell, and in the Middle ward, with a junction station on the Caledonian railway, half a mile distant, 10 miles east from Glasgow. The village derives its chief support from the extensive collieries in the neighbourhood, which give employment to a large number of persons. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. New Stevenston, forming part of the village of Holytown, is 1 mile from Holytown railway station. The population, including New Stevenston, in 1891 was 2,811, and in 1881, 2,480; in 1891 the ecclesiastical parish had a population of 11,641.

INCHES, see DOUGLAS.

KILBRIDE (EAST) is a burgh of barony, village and parish, in the Middle ward, Hamilton poor combination and small debt court district; the village is on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, is 8 miles south by road from Glasgow and 10¾ by rail, between 6 and 7 west from Hamilton and 45 west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Glasgow and East Kilbride branch of the Caledonian railway; there are also three other stations in the parish, viz.: Busby, 4 miles north-west; Thornton Hall, 3, and Hairmyers 1¾ west from the village. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated parish of Torrance, contains some extensive lime works, and coal also lies beneath the surface. Under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary orders 75 and 137, a part of the parish of Cathcart has been transferred to East Kilbride. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are Dr. William Hunter M.D., F.R.S. born 23 May, 1718, died 30 March, 1783, and his brother John Hunter F.R.S. the celebrated anatomist and physiologist, born 14 July, 1728; he was at first a student at Chelsea Hospital and subsequently for some time a member of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and his portrait hangs in the dining hall of that society; he died 16 Oct. 1793, and an oration in his honour is annually delivered at the Royal College of Surgeons, in London. There are several Board schools. A market is entitled to be holden here on Monday. The cattle show, which is held on the second Friday in June for Clydesdale horses and Ayrshire cattle, is the only fair that takes place in East Kilbride. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Busby is a village and railway station at the north-western extremity of the parish, partly in this county but chiefly in Renfrewshire (which see). The principal landowners are Lady Sophia C. Allenby Montgomerie and Col. Robert Edward Stuart Harington-Stuart D.L., J.P. of Torrance. The area comprises 22,760 acres; rateable value, £42,409; the population in 1891 was 3,861, and in 1881, 3,975.

Sub-Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, East Kilbride; Miss Hannah Reid, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 8 a.m. & 12.30 & 6.10 p.m.; dispatches, 7.20 a.m. & 12.30, 3.30 & 7.15 p.m

KIRKFIELD BANK is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Lesmahagow, on the left bank of the Clyde, about a mile and a half from Lanark railway station, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in handloom weaving. The neighbourhood is much frequented on account of its romantic scenery. The population of the village in 1891 was 737, and in 1881, 963; in 1891 the ecclesiastical parish had a population of 1,329.

LANARK.

LANARK (W. Clanerch, a clearing in a forest) is a royal burgh, market town, the seat of a presbytery, and the chief town in the Upper ward, the head of a poorhouse combination, and a parish on the main road leading from Stirling to Carlisle, one mile above the left or east bank of the river Clyde, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway connecting the burgh with the main line at Carstairs, and affording easy communication with Edinburgh and Glasgow, and also by direct route with Ayr on the west, and is 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-east from Glasgow, 15 south-east from Hamilton and 11 north-west from Biggar. An old arched bridge, of unknown origin, spans the Mouse water near its junction with the Clyde, a short distance north-west of the town, and from this point a fine view is obtained of Cartland bridge, erected in 1822, and Cartland Crags. The town occupies an elevated site about half a mile north-east of the Clyde; all the older streets, viz. High street, Wellgate, Castlegate, Broomgate, Bloomgate, Wyde close, radiate from a central space called the "Cross." The High street, a wide thoroughfare, extends eastward to the "Port," and is continued by St. Leonard street, which leads to Carstairs, and by Bannatyne street, conducting to the railway station. Hope street branches off from Bloomgate and leads to Cleghorn. Westport is a continuation of Bloomgate and conducts to the Old and New Carluke roads. The burgh is encircled by a series of narrow lanes, called the North Vennel, the South Vennel, The Delves, Friars' or Arnold lane, Greystonebalks and others. The town is lighted with gas by a limited company, and an abundant supply of excellent water is obtained from the Tinto range of hills, seven miles distant. The original charter of the burgh seems to have been granted by Alexander I. (1107-24); and in the reign of Malcolm (1153-65) it appears to have been regarded as a royal burgh, many of the ancient kings of Scotland having made Lanark their place of residence. The charter was finally confirmed by Charles I. in 1632, and the town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and 15 councillors. A sheriff court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday and Friday during the session, and small debt and debts recovery court on Tuesdays. Here are also held the meetings of the County Council for the Upper ward. Lanark, together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Airdrie, forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The landward parish is included in the South Lanarkshire parliamentary division, which also sends one member to Parliament. The old parish church, now in ruins, stands within its burying ground, on the south-east border of the town. Tradition asserts that in this church Sir William Wallace first saw Marion Braidfoot, who subsequently became his wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the ruins of the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and James VI., born at Lanark about 1580. After traversing a great portion of Europe and Asia he was tortured and committed to prison by order of the Spanish Inquisition, but eventually returned, though in a crippled condition, and settled in his native parish till his death, about 1645. The modern parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, is a plain rectangular structure of two storeys with a square projecting turret at the east end; the lower stage of which forms a porch; in a niche over the entrance is a statue of Wallace, executed by Forrest, a self-taught genius and a native of the district, and presented by him to the town. The fountain, standing in front of the church, was erected by public subscription, in commemoration of Her Majesty's Jubilee, 1887. For list of places of worship, see page 882. The County Buildings, in Hope street, erected in 1836 at a cost of £5,000, are of freestone, in the Classic style, and contain court-rooms and a series of offices. Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms, erected in 1827 on the site of a Franciscan monastery. Hand-loom weaving, formerly the general occupation, has greatly decreased, but the manufacture of winceys, skirtings &c. is carried on by two firms, and there is a brewery belonging to Messrs. Thomas Gilroy & Co.; a tannery and the fancy wood-work establishment of Messrs. Mackenzie & Meikle, where a great variety of ornamental articles in wood are made. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Company Bank. The principal hotel is the "Clydesdale." In the town is an auction and cattle mart belonging to Messrs. Lawrie & Symington, at which important sales of live stock are frequently held. The weekly market day is Monday. The fairs, still observed, are as follows:—Wednesday, 10th April, plants; Monday, 10th June, rough sheep; Monday, 24th June, rough sheep; Saturday, 13th July, Cattle Show; Monday and Tuesday, 5th and 6th August, lambs; Wednesday, 7th August, horses; Tuesday, 20th, blackfaced, cross and cheviot lambs; Monday, 2nd September, sheep and lambs; Thursday, 10th October, sheep and lambs. Horse races are held on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and half east of the town. Lady Hozier's Convalescent Home was opened July 10th, 1893, by Sir William Wallace Hozier bart. of Mauldslie Castle, Carluke, who has presented a donation of £10,000 towards the endowment of the institution as a memorial to Frances, his late wife, who died in 1891; it is available for 42 inmates, and is connected with the Western Infirmary, Glasgow. There was anciently a castle here, which stood on an apparently artificial mound at the foot of the Castlegate, but the site is now converted into a public bowling green. In the vicinity is Lanark Loch, a fine expanse of water, the shores of which have been embanked and planted, and a delightful promenade laid out, which is much frequented by the inhabitants. Adjoining the loch is Lanark Moor, used as a golfing green, and as a camping ground for the Lanark militia. The neighbourhood presents much fine scenery, including the romantic grounds of Bonnington, Cartland Crags and the Falls of Clyde; these last are three in number, viz.: Bonnington Falls, divided into two by a rocky islet; Corra Linn, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making a descent altogether of 84 feet, and Stonebyres Falls, about two miles below the town. The Lee is the seat of Lt.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald-Lockhart bart.; here is preserved a curious stone called the "Lee Penny," which is said to have suggested to Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel, "The Talisman;" this stone, reputed to have healing virtues, was acquired from the Saracens in 1329. Cleghorn House is the residence of William Eliott-Lockhart esq. D.L., J.P. The Earl of Haddington, of Tyningham House; Sir Charles Henry A. F. Lockhart-Ross bart. of Bonnington and Balnagown; W. Eliott-Lockhart esq. D.L., J.P. of Cleghorn; Lt.-Col. Sir Simon Macdonald-Lockhart bart. of Lee and Carnwarth; Mrs. Ronald Johnstone, of Sunnyside; William Lindsay Stewart esq. of Stanmore; J. Noble Graham esq. of Carfin; Charles Walker esq. of Bankhead; Mrs. Cranstoun, Covehouse, and Farie Allan esq. of Baronald, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 10,385 acres; rateable value, burgh, £15,340 10s.; landward, £22,527 10s.; total, £37,867; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 7,110; ecclesiastical parish, 3,964; of the royal burgh, 5,537; and of the parliamentary burgh, 4,579.

New Lanark is a village, about 1 mile south from Lanark, and on the same side of the Clyde, and in the parish, Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. It originated in 1783-4, when Richard Arkwright and Mr. David Dale built cotton mills here, and constructed a subterranean aqueduct, about 100 yards in length, through the solid rock, by which means the waters of the Clyde were conducted to the sloping plain on which the mills and the village now stand. Robert Owen, chiefly known as a social reformer, was in his earlier years a partner in these extensive mills. The works were sold in the spring of 1881, and now belong to the Lanark Spinning Co. Acreage and rateable value included with Lanark; the population of the village was in 1881, 706, in 1891, 672.

LARKHALL is a town and quoad sacra parish, formed from Dalserf and Hamilton civil parishes, and is in the Middle ward, poor law combination and small debts court district of Hamilton, and on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, 3½ miles south-east from Hamilton, with a station on the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the Caledonian railway. The bleach works of Messrs. C. D. Miller & Co. Limited, in this place, give employment to many of the inhabitants. The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The rateable value is £41,640; the population in 1891 was 8,349 in the town and 8,845 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LEADHILLS is a village and a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parishes of Crawford and Crawfordjohn, in the Upper ward, and is on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, about three-quarters of a mile west from Elvanfoot station on the Carstairs and Dumfries section of the Caledonian railway, 46 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 44 south from Glasgow and 15 south from Douglas. It derives its name from the lead mines hereabouts, which have produced in some years 18,000 bars, of nine stone (avoirdupois) the bar; in the year 1894, according to the "Mineral Statistics," 1,876 tons of lead ore were raised, producing 7,299 ounces of silver, valued at about £17,000. Gold was found in the mountain sand at an early period, and in 1881 the miners of Leadhills, during their spare hours, collected a quantity weighing 1,000 grains, and presented it to the Earl of Hopetoun, lord of the manor, on the attainment of his majority. Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born here 13 Oct. 1685, and subsequently became a bookseller in Edinburgh; he died 7 Jan. 1758. In the village is a good inn, the Hopetoun Arms. Fairs are held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October. The population of the village in 1881 was 1,023, and in 1891, 998, and of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 1,018.

LENZIE is partly in the parish of Cadder, in the county of Lanark, and partly in the parish of Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire; information will be found in the latter county.

LESMAHAGOW is a parish and village in the Upper ward of the county and in Lanark small debts court district, with a terminal station on a branch of the Caledonian railway from Glasgow and Hamilton; the village, also called Abbey Green, is on the river Nethan, a tributary of the Clyde, and is 38 miles west from Edinburgh, 23 south-east from Glasgow and 6 south-west from Lanark; the parish is bounded on the north-east by the river Clyde, south-east by the Douglas and Poniel waters, and north-west by the Kype water. The parish is 12 miles square, and abounds in coal, ironstone and limestone, in the working of which a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment; a line of railway, for this traffic only, passes through or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian main line at Motherwell. The parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish in 1808, stands on part of the site of the priory. The British Linen Co. Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. The principal hotels are the Abbey Green, the Commercial, the Sun, and the Masons' Arms, all of which are also posting houses. There are two hiring fairs and two others for general business held during the year. In the month of December are three market days, known as Big Wednesdays. Here was anciently a priory, founded by David I. in 1140, and dedicated to St. Machutus. The noble ruins of Craignethan, or Draphane Castle, the property of the Earl of Home, are immortalised by Sir Walter Scott in "Old Mortality," under the name of "Tillietudlem Castle," and a room in the castle is still shown as that in which the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochleven Castle, in 1567. The Duke of Hamilton and the Earl of Home are the principal landowners. The area is 41,299 acres; rateable value, £60,572; the population in 1881 was 9,949, and in 1891, 9,752 in the civil parish and 8,423 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Coalburn is a mining village, about 4 miles south of Abbey Green, with a station on the Lesmahagow branch of the Caledonian railway.

Crossford is a village in a beautiful valley on the left bank of the river Clyde, and near its confluence with the Nethan; it is about 5 miles north-by-east from Abbey Green and 4½ north-west from Lanark. Population in 1881, 816, and in 1891, 818.

Kirkmuirhill and Blackwood are villages adjacent to each other, about 3 miles north-west from Abbey Green, on the Glasgow road, and at Blackwood is a station on the Caledonian railway. Boghead is a small village about 1½ miles distant from Kirkmuirhill. Auchenheath, a mining village, is about 3 miles north from Abbey Green, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. Populations in 1891: Kirkmuirhill, 519; Auchenheath, 516; Blackwood, 373.

OLD MONKLAND is a parish and the head of a poor combination, in the Middle ward and the small debts court district of Airdrie, and extends from the right bank of the Clyde to the border of New Monkland, a distance of between 7 and 8 miles, by a breadth near the Clyde of little more than 1, but afterwards expanding to nearly 4 miles. It is bounded on the north by Cadder and the barony parish of Glasgow, and on the south by Bothwell, and is rich in minerals. The village of Old Monkland and the parish church are now locally part of Coatbridge. The Poorhouse is at Coathill. SirDavid C. R. Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B., D.L., J.P.; Capt. George Frederick Russell Colt D.L., J.P. of Gartsherrie, and the Rev. Sholto Douglas Campbell-Douglas M.A. of Douglas Support, are the principal landowners. The area of Old Monkland parish is 10,935 acres; rateable value, £173,916: in 1881 the population was 37,283, and in 1891, 44,615 in the civil parish, and 12,898 in the ecclesiastical.

Broomhouse, in the parish of Old Monkland, is a small village, 2 miles from Baillieston and 6 from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the North British railway. There are several collieries in this neighbourhood. John Fulton Millar esq. of Greenock, and Mrs. Scott, of Blantyre, are the chief landowners. Population in 1891, 743.

Cuilhill, a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, is about a mile from Baillieston and has a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the North British railway. Bargeddie, almost adjoining it, is the nearest post office.

Swinton and Easterhouse are both small villages in Old Monkland parish, adjoining one another, and about a mile from Baillieston. West Maryston is a little village adjacent. At Easterhouse is a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the North British railway. The population of West Maryston in 1891 was 459.

MOTHERWELL is a town and police burgh, chiefly in the parish of Dalziel, but partly in Bothwell and Hamilton parishes, and Middle ward, Cambusnethan poor combination and in the small debt court district of Hamilton, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 2 miles north-east from Hamilton and 11 south-east from Glasgow. The town was constituted a police burgh under the "Police of Scotland Act, 1892," and is governed by a chief magistrate, four magistrates and seven commissioners. The town is supplied with water from Coldstream and Netherton, near Carluke, and the streets are lighted with gas by a company. The Town Hall was opened in November, 1887, at a cost of about £7,000. The extensive works of Messrs. David Colville & Sons Lim. and the Glasgow Iron & Steel Co. Lim. (each employ over 1,000 hands), the Lanarkshire Steel Co. Lim. also have works here. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, British Linen Co. Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Lim. and the Clydesdale Bank Lim. The population of the burgh in 1881 was 12,904, and in 1891 was 18,726, and is now (1896) about 22,000.

SHOTTS is a large parish at the north-eastern extremity of the county, extending from north to south about 8 miles and east to west about 9, bounded on the north-west by the parish of New Monkland, on the west by Bothwell and Dalziel, on the south by Cambusnethan, and on the east and north by the county of Linlithgow; it is in the Middle ward, Cambusnethan poor combination and small debts court district of Airdrie and Wishaw, and has a station on the Gourock and Greenock to Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. The kirktown of Shotts is 2¼ miles north-west of the station, 5½ south-east from Airdrie and 6½ north-east from Wishaw. Fairs are held here annually, on the third Tuesday in June and the last Tuesday in November. The parish also includes the villages of Harthill, Benhar, Salsburgh, Dykehead, and part of the village of Shotts Ironworks. The coal and iron works in the parish furnish employment for the inhabitants, and include the collieries of the Coltness Iron Company. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch at Shotts, and close to the station is a good hotel. The Duke of Hamilton, Lieut.-Col. Robert King Stewart D.L., J.P. of Murdostoun Castle, Newmains, and Col. Sir David C. R. Carrick-Buchanan bart. K.C.B., D.L., J.P. of Drumpellier House, Coatbridge, are the principal landowners.

Harthill and Benhar have been erected into a quoad sacra parish. The population in 1891 was 2,801, of Harthill only, 1,008.

Greenhill is a small village about 4 miles east from Holytown and 1 from Omoa station on the Holytown Junction and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. There is a Board school in the village, and extensive collieries in the neighbourhood.

Salsburgh, "Sallysburgh," or "Salzburgh," is a village in the parish of Shotts, 5 miles east from Holytown.

Newhouse is a hamlet 2 miles east from Holytown. Here are the works of the Linrigg Coal Co. Limited.

Shotts Ironworks, with Torbothie, form a village on the southern border of the parish, half a mile east from Shotts railway station; the village is partly in the adjoining parish of Cambusnethan. The population in 1891 was 1,141.

Tillingburn is a hamlet near the village of Greenhill, about 4 miles east from Holytown and 2 from Omoa station on the Cleland and Mid-Calder branch of the Caledonian railway. The works of Mr. James Munro, artificial manure manufacturer, are in this hamlet.

Cleland, a large village and quoad sacra parish in this civil parish, will be found under a separate heading.

The area of the entire parish comprises 24,944 acres; rateable value, £77,599; the population in 1891 was 11,957, and in 1881, 11,214.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of barony, on the river Avon, in the parish of Avondale and in the Middle ward and poor combination and small debts court district of Hamilton, with a terminal station on a branch from Blantyre station on the Caledonian railway, 44 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 15 south-by-east from Glasgow, 28 north-east from Ayr, 21 east-by-north from Kilmarnock, 14 west from Lanark and 7½ south from Hamilton. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, by William, Earl of Douglas. The local trade is chiefly in cheese and grain, and the silk, cotton and hosiery goods manufactured here. The market, which is held on Thursday, is well attended; fairs are held on the first Thursdays in January, March and April, for cattle and hiring servants; Thursday in Whitsun week, the last Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August, and (the old fair) on the 2nd of November. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. On the south side of the river Avon remains of a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles. The population in 1891 was 3,478.

WANDELL and LAMINGTON form a united parish, bounded on the west by the river Clyde, on the south by Crawford parish and east by Culter parish, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark, the village of Lamington, 6 miles south-west from Biggar, having a station on the Carstairs and Dumfries section of the Caledonian railway. The district is hilly, but fertile, and chiefly agricultural. The Episcopal church here was built by Lord Lamington. Lamington House, the property of Lord Lamington K.C.M.G., D.L., J.P. and now governor of Queensland, who is the principal landowner, is now occupied by J. A. Whitaker esq.; the estate affords about 8,000 acres for shooting, and there is excellent trout fishing on the Clyde. The mountain of Tinto, 2,336 feet, and Coulter Fell, 2,330 feet above sea level, are the loftiest eminences in this romantic neighbourhood. Acreage, 12,820; rateable value, £6,971; population in 1881, 316, and in 1891, 305.

Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Lamington (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed R.S.O. Lanarkshire); Mrs. Elizabeth Forrest, receiver. Delivery, 6 a.m.; dispatches 4.30 & 7.15 p.m. Telegraph office at the railway station

WISHAW.

WISHAW is a quoad sacra parish, town and police burgh, in the Middle ward of Lanarkshire, civil parish and poor combination of Cambusnethan, and 15 miles south-east from Glasgow and 32 west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway. It was made a burgh under the Scotch Police Act of 1850, and on the adoption of the Act of 1862, modifications took place, but under the Act of 1892 the burgh is now governed by a provost, three bailies and seven commissioners, and the boundaries having been extended, now include within their limits the village of Cambusnethan. The town, pleasantly situated on the face of a hill, comprises several spacious streets. The parish church of Cambusnethan, on Kirk Brae, is a modern building with a square tower. Wishaw church (quoad sacra), in Main street, is a large edifice, and has a tower with a spire and a clock. A police court is held at the County buildings as occasion requires, and a sheriff's small debt court every three weeks. There are branches here of the British Linen Company's Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The Wishaw Iron and Steel Works, two iron foundries, the malleable iron works of Messrs. John Williams and Co. and the Clydesdale Distillery Co. Limited, afford employment to a large number of work-people. Large cattle sales are held every Tuesday and Thursday by Messrs. J. and J. Marshall, auctioneers, Carluke. Two newspapers, the "Wishaw Press" and the "Wishaw Herald and Motherwell Advertiser," are published here every Saturday. In 1881 the burgh of Wishaw had a population of 13,112, and in 1891, 15,252, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 11,187.

Craigneuk is a small village in Dalziel parish, situated between Motherwell and Wishaw. Here are the works of the Etna Iron and Steel Co.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE.

THE ancient division of West Lothian, is a small county of a pentagonal shape, lying south of the inner portion of the Firth of Forth, and bounded on the west by Stirling, south-west by Lanark, and south-east and east by Edinburghshire; its extent along the Firth coast is 16 miles, and from north to south about 15. Its area comprises 120 square miles, or 76,807 acres; its population in 1891 comprised 27,946 males and 24,862 females, total, 52,808, and in 1881 the total was 43,510; the inhabited houses were 10,173 in 1891, and 8,532 in 1881. It ranks in point of size as the thirty-first, and in population as the seventeenth of Scotch counties.

Early History.—The Gadeni are the first who are mentioned as holding this district, and they were subdued by the Romans, whose great bulwark, "Grimms Dyke," ended at Carriden, in this county, and several forts can still be traced in other parts of the county; it suffered in common with other parts of Lothian from invasions by Norwegians, and by the successes of the Northumbrian Earls, passing at length in 1018 under the Scottish rule. This county was probably separated into the sheriffdom in the reign of David I. It was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so it continued until the time of James IV. (1488-1513). No other district appears to have been so divided into petty baronies, bailieries, regalities and other independent jurisdictions, nor so domineered over by a number of peers inimical to peace and regardless of justice. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion (1165).

Soil, Surface, &c.—This county has an irregular surface, but the hills are only of moderate elevation; the highest being found about the middle of the county. Many places present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the parish of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of basaltic rocks, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. The hills are generally well clothed with wood; about one-third of the county is either old pasture or laid down with artificial grasses; and there are more than four-fifths of the shire inclosed. Until the year 1723, there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district. Soon after this period, John, Earl of Stair, in conjunction with Charles, first Earl of Hopetoun, introduced new modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, turnip, and carrot by the plough. The highest elevations are Cairnnaple, 1,000 feet above sea level; Riccarton, 800; Caithlaw, 940; and Drumbowie, 705.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals, &c.—Rather more than one-fourth of the land is under corn and green crops, and one-ninth under hay, while only one-tenth is under heath land and wood. The chief crops are, oats, 10,376 acres; turnips, 4,117; barley, 3,370; potatoes, 1,609; wheat, 1,029; and hay, 8,748; the total corn crops being 15,309, and green crops, 6,137 acres; land under grass, 15,765 acres and permanent pasture, 21,584 acres; total area of land and water being 77,186 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised: horses, 2,215; cattle, 12,635; sheep, 25,219; and pigs, 1,872. Linlithgowshire contains a considerable quantity of minerals. Coal abounds throughout, limestone is prevalent, in some parts ironstone is also found, and the whole surface rests on a bed of sandstone of the finest quality; silver and lead mines were formerly wrought, and there is plenty of marl, potters' clay, brick clay and red chalk. This is the richest district in Scotland for the production of shale, from which paraffin oil is extracted, and for the manufacture of which very extensive works are in operation in the neighbourhood of Bathgate, Linlithgow, Uphall and Whitburn. Besides this branch of trade, there are also large iron and steel foundries, paper mills, distilleries, chemical works, and brick, tile and earthenware manufactories. The production of coal in 1894 was 630,680 tons, value £204,971; fire clay, 10,665 tons, value, £1,733; iron ore 30,131 tons, value, £12,052; oil shale 1,168,488 tons (the largest production in Great Britain); limestone 2,994 tons. There are four blast furnaces in the district, but these were not worked in 1894.

Rivers and Railways.—The only river of consequence is the Almond, or Amond, but there are a number of considerable rivulets and burns. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanarkshire, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, falls into the sea at Cramond; at its mouth it assumes the appearance of a small loch or arm of the sea, running up the bottom of a woody ravine; but it is only navigable for a very short distance, and then only for boats and very small sloops. Linlithgow Loch, north of the town, is the only considerable sheet of water in the county. The Union canal runs across the northern portion of the county. The railways belong to the North British Co. and their lines are one coming from Falkirk, entering the county about 2 miles west of Linlithgow town, and leaving it again near Hough; another branch from Ratho enters the county a little south of Hough, runs to Uphall, whence a line goes to East Calder; the main branch proceeds to Bathgate, from which three lines diverge, one south to West Foulshiels, where it again divides, going east to West Calder and west to Crofthead &c.; the second line from Bathgate runs west to Armadale and the third north-west to Blackston Junction, where it joins the line from Bo'ness to Slamannan. Besides these railways there is the line to Queensferry for the Forth Bridge, which crosses the north-east angle of the county.

Divisions, Representation, &c.—This county comprises 13 civil parishes and part of one other, and 14 ecclesiastical parishes with parts of two others, all of which are included in the Presbytery of Linlithgow; it contains two royal burghs, namely, Linlithgow and Queensferry; the next largest town is Bathgate. Its seaport is Bo'ness, and there are a number of thriving villages. The burghs of Linlithgow, Hamilton, Lanark, Airdrie and Falkirk, in conjunction, send one representative to the Imperial Parliament, and the shire at large another. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 was 7,804. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (exclusive of railways and canals) £254,979, and of railways and canals, £59,037.

ABERCORN is a parish, in the northern part of the county, on the south bank of the river Forth, at the point where the Haugh brook flows into that river, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow, and contains the villages of Newton and Philpstoun. Hopetoun House is the seat of the Right Hon. the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C. The area of the parish is 4,500 acres; the population in 1881 was 850, and in 1891, 863.

Newton is a village on the east side of the parish, about 2½ miles from Queensferry.

Philpstoun is a village on the west of the parish, with a station, about 1 mile south, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 4 miles east from Linlithgow. In the village is a large shale mine for the extraction of oil and other products, which gives employment to most of the inhabitants. The United Presbyterian church at Wester Pardovan, close to the village, is locally in the parish of Linlithgow. The nearest school for this village is at Bridgend, 1 mile distant. The population in 1891 was 560.

ARMADALE is a quoad sacra parish, town, and police burgh, in the civil parishes of Bathgate and Torphichen, 2 miles west from Bathgate, 20 miles west from Edinburgh, with a station, a mile from the town, on Bathgate and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 22 miles east from Glasgow, and 7½ south from Linlithgow. It was constituted a police burgh under the provisions of the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is governed by a provost, two baillies and six commissioners, and is lighted with gas by a limited company. In the vicinity are extensive coalfields and ironstone quarries; several brick and tile and fire-brick manufactories, shale works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products and large steel works. In the town is a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Lim. Sir William Honyman bart. one of the lords of the Court of Session at the beginning of the present century, took the title of Lord Armadale from this place. The Rev. Sir William Macdonald Honyman bart. M.A. of Torbanehill; Thomas M. Durham esq. J.P. of Boghead; the trustees of the late Sir William Baillie bart. of Polkemmet (d. 1890) and Capt. Thomas Hope J.P. of Bridgecastle, are the principal landowners. Bathville is a thriving suburb of the burgh. The soil is of strong clay, and its products principally oats and grass for grazing purposes, and the surface is flat and waving. The rateable value is £5,362; the population of the burgh in 1891 was 3,190, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 4,557.

BATHGATE.

BATHGATE is a market town, police burgh and parish, on the middle road betwixt Edinburgh and Glasgow, with stations on the Bathgate branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow and Monklands sections of the North British railway, in Linlithgow poor combination, 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 24 east from Glasgow, 14 east from Airdrie and 7 south from Linlithgow. The Couston water, a tributary of the river Clyde, flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the west by the Barbaulchlaw brook. The town occupies a pleasant site near the southern base of a great ridge of hills extending across the county, and sheltering the town on the north and east, and at the same time it has a fine southern aspect, possessing several good streets, Hopetoun, Engine, Mid and Jarvey streets being the principal thoroughfares; it is lighted with gas from works the property of a local company, and abundantly supplied with water of excellent quality from works erected at a cost of £6,000. Bathgate was made a burgh of barony by Charles II. in 1661, and created a free and independent burgh of barony by Act of Parliament in 1824; subsequently the burgh adopted Provost Lindsay's Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, two bailies and twelve commissioners. A small debt court is held in the burgh once a quarter. The old parish church, erected about 1737, was taken down in 1882. The present church, erected on the same site at a cost of upwards of £8,000, and opened in 1884, is a handsome edifice of stone, chiefly in the Norman style, and has a square tower at the south-west angle, rising to a height of 108 feet and ornamened with crocketed pinnacles. The tower contains a bell and an illuminated clock, the gifts of John Waddell esq. of Inch, and ex-provost of the burgh, Bathgate, the estimated cost of which was over £250; a gallery is carried round three sides of the church, and the east gable is relieved by a semi-circular apse with five memorial stained windows. The church affords about 1,100 sittings, and adjoining are vestries and a hall. The Evangelical Union church, in Marjoribanks street, rebuilt on the old site in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £2,200, is an edifice in the Early English style from designs by Mr. J. Graham Fairley, architect, of Edinburgh. The United Presbyterian church, erected in 1894-5, and opened in October, 1895, at an estimated cost of £3,700, is an edifice in a plain Gothic style, and has a tower of three stages with octagonal broach spire, and containing one bell, weighing nearly a ton; various gifts have been made to the church, including a communion service and font basin of solid silver. The Bathgate Academy, which stands on a commanding and healthy site in the immediate vicinity of the town, was endowed by a bequest of the late John Newland, of Kingston, Jamaica, a native of this town, with a sum of between £16,000 and £17,000; the building is an elegant and extensive structure, comprising seven large class-rooms, library, trustees' room and a janitor's house. It is now under Government inspection, and is managed by a body of trustees, one of whom represents the lord of the manor and another is appointed by the Commissioners. The neighbouring hills abound with limestone quarries yielding fine specimens of fossil remains. Paraffin oil and candles are manufactured here from the Torbanehill shale, which is largely found in the county, and Young's Paraffin Light & Mineral Oil Co. Limited has extensive works in the vicinity. At Westfield, about two and a half miles distant, is an extensive mill of the Westfield Paper Co. Limited. The weaving of goods for the Glasgow manufacturers, at one time very active, is now carried on only to a very limited extent. In the town is an iron foundry, two spade and shovel works and a large distillery, and in the district are many large collieries, and coal and ironstone &c. are much worked in the immediate neighbourhood. On the north border of the parish are ancient silver mines worked in the early part of the 17th century, and a few years ago re-opened. The market day is Tuesday, when a large supply of grain of all kinds is brought from the surrounding country to the Corn Exchange, in Jarvey street. A cattle auction is also held at the mart in Engine street on market day. The authorities of the burgh are entitled by Act of Parliament to hold seven annual fairs—namely, on the third Wednesdays in April, July and August, on the first Wednesdays after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (o. s.), and the fourth Wednesdays in June and October; the principal fairs are those held at Whitsuntide and Martinmas, which are well attended by cattle dealers. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The "West Lothian Courier" is published here every Saturday. The following eminent men were born in the parish—Dr. John Fleming, professor of natural science, Aberdeen; Dr. John Reid, professor of anatomy, St. Andrews, and Sir James Young Simpson bart. M.D. the discoverer, in 1847, of the anæsthetical properties of chloroform; he was born here 7th June, 1811, and died at Edinburgh 6th May, 1870. Boghead is the residence of Thomas Maxwell Durham esq. J.P. and Bridgecastle, of Captain Thomas Hope J.P. The principal landowners are the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C.; Thomas M. Durham esq. J.P. of Boghead and Foulshields; the trustees of the late Sir Wm. Baillie bart. of Polkemmet (d. 1890); Major James Henry Cowan; Geo. Readman esq. and Alexander Russell esq. of Moss Side. The land is fairly productive, while the surface is largely undulating. The parish of Bathgate has an area of 10,876 acres; rateable value of the burgh and parish landward (excluding the burgh of Armadale) is £34,661, of which the burgh is £13,107; in 1881 the civil parish contained a population of 9,450, and in 1891, 11,359, of which the town possessed 5,331; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 7,557.

Bridgend is a small village adjoining the burgh of Bathgate. The population in 1891 was 435.

Woodend, a small colliery village, 3½ miles distant.

Durhamtown is also a mining village in this parish. The population in 1891 was 366.

BATHVILLE, see ARMADALE.

BLACKBURN is a small village, on the river Almond and the road from Bathgate to Wishaw, in the parishes of Livingstone and Whitburn, 1½ miles west from EastWhitburn station on the Morningside section of the North British system, and 3 south from Bathgate. Adjacent to the village are leck stone quarries, the stone from which is specially used in the construction of ovens, being capable of bearing any amount of heat, but it is unsuitable for building purposes. There are also works for the manufacture of millboard. The population in 1891 was 814.

BLACKNESS is a small village on the coast, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and on the Firth of Forth, 3½ miles east-south-east of Borrowstounness, 4 north-east of Linlithgow, 5½ west-north-west of South Queensferry, and 4 from Linlithgow station on the North British and Caledonian railways. There is a pier here for landing goods from small vessels. The nearest place of worship is at Carriden, 3 miles distant. Blackness Castle, situated on the banks of he Forth, close to the village, was, during the reign of James VI. the principal state prison in Scotland, and as such received within its gloomy walls many distinguished persons; one of the most remarkable of its prisoners was James (Stewart), Lord Ochiltree, who, for accusing the Marquis of Hamilton of aspiring to the Scottish crown, was here confined for upwards of twenty years, during nearly the whole reign of Charles I. The fortress was subsequently converted into barracks, and has since been altered, repaired and fitted up as a powder magazine or depot, with barracks attached for a military guard in charge of the magazine, stores and premises.

The nearest post office is at Bridgeness, 3 miles distant

BO'NESS AND CARRIDEN.

BORROWSTOUNNESS (or, as it is now generally pronounced, Bo'ness) is a parish, seaport town and police burgh, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow. By a Local Government Board Order, dated 8th February, 1895, under section 51 of the Local Government (Scotland) Acts of 1889 and 1894, and which came into operation 15th May, 1895, the parish is now, for civil purposes, united to the parish of Carriden and also includes the villages of Borrowstoun and Newtown. The burgh has also been extended from the same date and now includes on the east side the suburban villages of Grangepans, Cowdenhill and Bridgeness, and on the west side the mining village of Kinneil. The town is built on low ground on the south shore of the Firth of Forth and is 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 9 west from SouthQueensferry, 3½ north from Linlithgow and 8 east-by-north from Falkirk, and has a terminal station on the Monkland section of the North British railway. A tract of flat but rich alluvial land called the "Carse of Kinneil" lies to the north-west, and the beach from thence eastward is low ground lying between a high bank landward, and a great expanse of muddy silt extending at ebb tide to the sea; all the rest of the parish declines gradually from Irongath Hill to the west and north. The soil is deep loam and is well cultivated. The town consists principally of two streets, running eastward and terminating in one of nearly the same length, and the greater portion of the houses appear to be of ancient date. It is lighted with gas, and governed by a provost, two bailies and 12 councillors. Between 1750 and 1780 Bo'ness was one of the most thriving towns on the east coast, and ranked as the third port in Scotland; but on the construction of the Forth and Clyde canal, Grangemouth, at the east end of the canal, became the chief seat of commerce, and in 1810 was erected into a separate port, with a custom house. In 1876, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, the Harbour Commissioners here constructed a new pier, and also a wet dock, 7½ acres in extent, at a cost of £200,000, finished towards the end of 1881. The quays have also been rebuilt and the area extended from 2½ to 5½ acres, and the depth of water largely increased. The extent of the quayage in the dock is 2,400 feet, and in the harbour 1,900 feet. The harbour has a depth of water on the sill of 22 feet at spring tides and 18 feet at neaps, from which 2 feet has to be deducted for silt in the channel. The dock and attached works are of the most substantial character, and have been furnished throughout with hydraulic machinery of the latest description, and the lines of railways on the quays are in direct communication with the North British Railway Company's system, thus affording access to and from all parts of the United Kingdom. The hydraulic appliances consist of three coal-shipping hoists, each capable of shipping 2,000 tons of coal per day of 24 hours, or 6,000 tons by all the hoists, six portable cranes, each capable of lifting two tons, three of which can at one time be applied to the discharge of the same vessel, capstans for hauling ships into and out of the dock, and waggon capstans for working the movable traffic on the quays of the dock &c. Large sheds, in which are fitted hydraulic cranes for lifting goods, are also provided for the storage of cargoes. The trade of the town and port consists chiefly in the importation of timber, pitwood for mining purposes, esparto grass, grain, iron ore, phosphate &c., and the exporting of coal, iron and general goods. Steamers run direct once a week between Bo'ness and London, and ample standage for coal wagons, worked by self-acting gradients, has been provided to facilitate in every possible way the quick shipment of cargo and bunker coal at the hoists. Amongst the chief industrial works of the burgh and district are two large collieries, freestone and whinstone quarries, an extensive distillery, earthenware manufactories, chemical manure works and several iron foundries. The Established church is a good building with a tower and spire, erected in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £1,000. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The "Bo'ness Journal" is published here every Friday, price 1d. Kinneil House is a seat of the Duke of Hamilton, who is superior of the burgh and parish. Here the celebrated James Watt realised some of his earliest improvements in the steam engine. The Roman wall of Antoninus, commonly called "Graham's, or Grim's, Dyke," but chiefly constructed by the Pro-praetor Lollius Urbicus, A.D. 139-140, passes through the parish; and within a short distance of the town on the south-east, the traces of a Roman camp are still visible. The parish of Bo'ness has an area of 3,146 acres, and of Carriden, 2,705; rateable value of the joint parish, £41,794 5s. 11d. of which the burgh contains £29,431; Bo'ness landward, £6,412 6s. 10d. and Carriden landward, £5,950 19s. 1d.; population of the burgh in 1895, 7,650, and landward, 505.

Carriden, now a joint parish with Borrowstounness for civil purposes, adjoins it on the east, and is 7 miles west from South Queensferry and 4 north from Linlithgow, on the south bank of the Firth of Forth. The nearest railway station is at Borrowstounness. The soil is light and produces plentiful crops; the surface of the land is very unequal, rising rapidly from the shore and declining again to the south; it comprises part of the Irongath or Glour-o'er-'em hills, and has there an extreme altitude of 519 feet above the sea level; the land is entirely arable and enclosed. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C. Colonel George Hope Lloyd-Verney, of Carriden; Henry M. Cadell esq. J.P. and the Duke of Hamilton are the principal landowners. Population landward in 1895, 936; the other portion of the parish is in the burgh of Bo'ness; area of the parish, 2,705 acres; rateable value with Borrowstounness.

Borrowstoun is a small hamlet half a mile from the burgh.

Bridgeness is a suburb of the burgh, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and has a small harbour used by vessels employed in the coal trade &c. connected with the colliery of the Bridgeness Coal Co. There is an Established church here.

Cowdenhill is a suburb of the burgh.

Grangepans is a suburb of the burgh, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and has a Mission church in connection with the Established church at Bridgeness, a public school and an infants' school.

Kinneil is a mining village and a suburb of the burgh. The barony of Kinneil is one of the most ancient possessions of the house of Douglas-Hamilton, Dukes of Hamilton and Brandon.

Muirhouses is a small hamlet in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden.

Newtown is a mining village adjacent to the burgh.

BRIDGEND, see BATHGATE.

BRIDGENESS, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

BROXBURN is a small town in the parish of Uphall, and in the small debts court district of Linlithgow; the town stands on the Brox brook, a tributary of the Almond, and the road from Bathgate to Edinburgh, and is 1 mile north from Drumshoreland station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, 11 west from Edinburgh, 7 east from Bathgate, and 7 south-east from Linlithgow. The western extremity of the place is crossed by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal. The Public Hall was erected, together with billiard and reading rooms, in 1873, at a cost of £1,300, and will seat 500 persons. There is a branch here of the British Linen Co. Bank. In the neighbourhood are the works of the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited, which afford employment to the greater part of the inhabitants. The population in 1891 was 5,898; rateable value returned with the parish.

CRAMOND (NOW IN DALMENY PARISH), see EDINBURGHSHIRE.

CROFTHEAD, see WHITBURN.

DALMENY is a parish and small village; the parish consists of a landward portion and a burghal portion, the latter embracing the burgh of Queensferry, which see. Its length from east to west is about 6½ miles, and its breadth 3½ miles, and is on the shore of the Firth of Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 9 and 122, that part of Cramond in this county has been added to Dalmeny. By the same act part of Dalmeny was annexed to Ecclesmachan and part transferred to Kirkliston parish. The village has a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and is about a mile from Queensferry and about 9 west from Linlithgow. The parish church is an ancient structure in mixed styles. This place gives the title of baron to the Primrose family, Earls of Rosebery. Nearly the whole of the parish is well cultivated and enclosed, and contains several mansions, amongst which are Dalmeny House, the seat of the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. surrounded by an extensive park and Craigie Hall, the seat of Jas. Chas. Hope-Vere esq. D.L., J.P.; Dundas Castle &c. The Earl of Rosebery, The Earl of Hopetoun, James Russel esq. and J. C. Hope-Vere esq. are the principal landowners. It has an area of 5,991 acres, and in 1881 contained a population of 1,660, and in 1891, 2,112, of which 768 are in Queensferry; rateable value, including Queensferry, £56,883. The small hamlet of Craigie is in the parish.
Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Linlithgowshire added); Miss Ann Dickson, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 5.30 p.m.; dispatches, 10.23 a.m. & 8.20 p.m. The telegraph office is at Queensferry

ECCLESMACHAN is a village, about 2 miles north from Uphall station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, and 5 miles south-east from Linlithgow. The parish, which is in the small debts court district of Linlithgow, is 4 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and is watered by the Brox and Bueux brooks, tributaries of the Almond. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 108 and 122, portions of Dalmeny and Linlithgow parishes have been added to Ecclesmachan. Robert Liston F.R.S. the eminent surgeon, was born here 28 Oct. 1794, his father then being parish minister; he died 7 Dec. 1847. Near the church is a weak sulphureous spring, called the "Bunion Well." The Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C.; Peter Thomson esq. of Binny, the trustees of the late Wm. Thomson, of Craigbinning, and James Mitchell esq. of Bangour, are the principal landowners. The surface of the soil is flat and sandy. The land is under tillage, with a fair sprinkling of wood. Freestone and sandstone are plentiful in the parish. The area of the parish is 2,647 acres; rateable value, £7,100; the population in 1881 was 278, and in 1891, 506.
There is no post office in the village, but a post messenger calls at 9.30 a.m. & leaves at 6 p.m. Letters should be addressed Uphall S.O.

KINNEIL, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

KIRKLISTON is a parish and village partly in Edinburghshire, but chiefly in Linlithgowshire, and in Linlithgow poor combination; the village, anciently called Temple-Liston, from the fact that the Knights-Templars formerly had an establishment here, is situated on the left bank of the Almond, on the road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Dalmeny branch of the North British railway, 8 miles west from Edinburgh. The Niddry burn, in the northern part, and Brox brook in the southern part of the parish, both tributaries of the Almond, join that river in this parish. The village is well built, and the principal industry is shale mining. The land is generally rich, well cultivated, and produces excellent crops. Here Lord Stair first introduced the culture of cabbage in the open fields. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 83 and 122, a part of Dalmeny parish was added to Kirkliston. The parish church is an ancient structure, originally erected in the Norman period, and retains a fine doorway in that style; within the church is the mortuary vault of the noble family of Dalrymple, Earls of Stair, and here was buried Elizabeth (Dundas), wife of John, 1st Earl of Stair, and the "Lady Ashton," of Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." The church affords 700 sittings. The "Catstane," a remarkable monument of antiquity, within a field which stands on Westbriggs farm, on the east bank of the river Almond, rises 4½ feet above the ground, and is about 11½ feet in circumference; it bears a much worn inscription as yet undeciphered. Newliston, now the seat of Thomas Alexander Hog esq. J.P. was once the property and favourite residence of the distinguished soldier, Field-Marshal John, 2nd Earl of Stair K.T. who fought at Oudenarde and Dettingen; the mansion was built in 1794 from the designs of William Adam, and the plantations in its grounds are said to have been arranged so as to represent the disposition of the British army on the eve of the battle of Dettingen, fought 16 June, 1743. Carlowrie Castle is the residence of Thomas Hutchison esq. and Clifton Hall, of John D. Bell esq. The Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., Sir James Ramsay Gibson Maitland bart. J.P. of Barnton, T. A. Hog esq. J.P. and James Russell esq. of Dundas, are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 9,506 acres; rateable value, including minerals and railways, £35,201; the population in 1881 was 2,580, and in 1891, 3,777.

LINLITHGOW.

LINLITHGOW (popularly called Lithgow) is a county town, a parish, royal burgh, and the head of a poor combination, small debts court district and presbytery, on the northern border of the county. The parish is bounded on the west by the river Avon, which separates it from Stirlingshire, and falls into the Firth of Forth near Borrowstounness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict.c. 50), boundary order 108, a portion of Linlithgow parish has been annexed to that of Ecclesmachan. The town, situated on the banks of a fine pool, or "linn," from which in part it derives its name, consists chiefly of a single street which runs east and west along the south edge of the lake, and is nearly a mile in length. It has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and is 16 miles west from Edinburgh, 31 east-by-north from Glasgow, 8 east from Falkirk and 3½ south from Bo'ness. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, three magistrates, or bailies, and fifteen councillors, and together with Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie and Falkirk it forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The Union (Edinburgh and Glasgow) canal, which terminates at Falkirk, where it is joined by the Forth and Clyde Navigation, completed in 1790, passes through the town and parish, and is carried across the Avon on a fine acqueduct of twelve arches. The local industries comprise papermaking, tanning, currying and boot making; tanning and currying are carried on by several large establishments, the principal of which belongs to Messrs. T. Nimmo & Co. There is also close to the town a distillery, soap works and two paper mills, belonging respectively to Messrs. Thomas Chalmers & Sons and Messrs. J. Lovell & Son. In the vicinity are several stone quarries, and within 3 miles there are two large shale mines, and works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products. The Town House, an elegant structure, erected in 1688, was partially destroyed by fire in 1847, but immediately repaired; it contains a council chamber and sheriff court room, and a large hall, tastefully decorated, which is used for public meetings. To the north of this stands the County Hall, a handsome and convenient building, in which hang full-length portraits of General Sir John Hope K.C.B. Baron Niddry, and subsequently 4th Earl of Hopetoun (d. 27th August, 1823), of his brother General Sir Alexander Hope G.C.B., M.P. (d. 19th May, 1837), and of John Alexander, late Earl of Rosebery (d. 2nd April, 1873). The Court House, on the south side of the street, contains offices for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal and chief constable; besides a spacious court room, small court room, witness and jury rooms, and a hall for the procurators of the court. A court is held every Wednesday for criminal cases, and on Friday for civil and small debts cases. The Victoria Hall, in High street, the foundation stone of which was laid, with masonic honours, December 31st, 1887, is a building in the Scottish baronial style, and was erected at a total cost of about £4,000; it has a frontage of 56 feet, and a depth from front to back of about 170 feet, and comprises ante-rooms, cloak rooms &c. and a hall seating about 800 persons. The Combination Poor House at St. Magdalene's stands on rising ground, about a quarter of a mile from the town, was erected in 1854, at a cost of £9,000, defrayed by the various parishes in proportion to the number of shares each has in the establishment. The Cross Well, which stands immediately opposite to the Town House, is a fountain, completed on the 4th of June, 1807, in imitation of the ancient Cross Well. It is hexagonal in form, on a graduated base, the water descending from the top, which is surmounted by a unicorn holding a shield. The stream falls into a basin, from whence it is spouted into a larger one through the mouths of six grotesque figures, whence it again issues through the jaws of other heads into the lower basin, which is surrounded by statues. The work, executed in 1807, is said to have been all hewn by Robert Grey, a one-handed stonemason, and there is an inscription on one side. There are also in the town several other fountains of similar formation.

The church of St. Michael stands close to the south front of the palace, and occupies part of its outer courtyard, is an edifice in the Gothic style, consisting of apsidal choir, nave, transepts, continuous aisles, vestries and a massive square western tower, which till the beginning of the present century was surmounted by a crown, something in the style of St. Giles's, Edinburgh; it has now a heavy parapet and pinnacles, and contains a fine peal of bells, one of which, re-cast in 1468, is named "Meg Duncan." In 1812 the interior was divided by a partition reaching across the nave at its junction with the transept, and galleries fitted up in the chancel; the whole has now been removed, and the vestry re-erected on the north side of the chancel; the cost of the whole work is estimated at from £4,000 to £5,000, towards which the Baird Trust has made a grant of £1,000, and the late Capt. Urquhart, of Vellore, Linlithgow, bequeathed a legacy of £500. The central window of the apse is filled with stained glass as a memorial to the late Sir Charles Wyville Thomson kt. LL.D., F.R.S. director in 1872-6 of the Challenger Deep Sea Dredging Expedition, who died at Bonsyde, 10th March, 1882; there is another memorial window to the late Mr. Robert R. Glen, formerly town clerk, and to his sister. The font, presented in 1896 by Mr. William Gilkison, banker, of Linlithgow, and designed by Mr. John Honeyman, architect, of Glasgow, is of stone and consists of an octagonal panelled basin, ornamented with quatrefoils on a pedestal relieved with niches and crocketed pinnacles, the whole standing on a wide octagonal base of one step. The south end of the transept (called St. Catherine's aisle) is the spot where the Scotch nobles are said to have attempted, by means of a spectral apparition, to terrify James IV. from persisting in his invasion of England in 1513, an expedition which ended in his defeat and death at Flodden Field, September 9th in that year. In the vestry some interesting relics of the church are still preserved. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Co. Bank. The weekly market for grain on Friday has been practically extinguished since the establishment of a weekly auction mart on Mondays. Fairs are held on the Friday after the second Tuesday in January, February 25th, the third Friday in April, the second Tuesday in June, Aug. 2nd and the first Friday in Nov.

The Royal palace of Linlithgow, now only a majestic ruin, stands, together with the church of St. Michael, on a terraced promontory jutting out into the linn, and occupies the site of an earlier structure, demolished by order of Robert the Bruce, but rebuilt by Edward I. and in the new fortress, Robert II. was elected King of Scotland in 1371; of this building three round towers on the east side still exist, and have been used as abutments for supporting the massive east wall of the palace. In 1410 the palace and castle were seriously damaged by fire, but were again rebuilt or repaired, and here, 10th April, 1512, James V. is said to have been born; his daughter Mary, afterwards Queen of Scots, was also born in the palace, 8th December, 1542, in a room on the west side. The palace, as now standing, is a quadrangular building, enclosing a spacious open courtyard, about 90 feet square, with a turret staircase at each angle; the latest portion is the north side, erected by James VI. (James I. of England) about 1618, after his visit in the previous year; the original entrance was on the east side, but the palace is now approached through a turreted gatehouse adjoining the western tower of St. Michael's church, and opening to the spacious outer courtyard on the south side of the palace, which is entered by a porch, and includes a hall, chapel and ante-rooms; the great hall, on the east side, is about 100 feet long and 25 feet wide; on the west side is Queen Mary's room, and another apartment at the north-west angle is called by the name of James III. who is said to have taken refuge here during the civil disturbances of his reign. The final ruin of the palace was accomplished by the dragoons of General Henry Hawley, who were quartered here during the rebellion of 1745; in spite of the remonstrances of the custodians of the palace, the soldiery persisted in maintaining enormous fires, and on the night of 31st January, 1746, a conflagration broke out which destroyed everything save the walls. In the centre of the palace quadrangle are the shattered remains of a beautiful fountain, exquisitely and elaborately carved by Italian artists, brought over by one of the Stuarts. A restored facsimile of this fountain made under the direction of the late Mr. Matheson, of Her Majesty's Board of Works, now adorns the west front of Holyrood House. The fountain was supplied with water from the estate of Preston, about a mile distant, and the pipes leading to it have been discovered on the Carmelite Friars' lands on the south side of the town. Sir Walter Scott, in "Marmion," has vividly depicted the bustle and gaiety of the court when at Linlithgow. A miniature jewelled spinning wheel, formerly belonging to Mary of Lorraine, Queen of James V. and brought with other articles from the palace, is now the property of W. Murray Threipland esq. Her Majesty Queen Victoria paid a visit to the palace in 1842. Among the ancient dwellings in the town a particular house used to be pointed out to strangers as the place from whence James Hamilton, of Bothwellhaugh, shot the Regent Murray (23rd January, 1570). A bronze tablet, with the effigy of the regent, has been inserted in the wall of the county-court room to denote the spot where the house stood. The St. Andrew badge of the Order of the Thistle, wrought in gold and enamel, and worn by the regent at the time of his assassination, now belongs to the Earl of Galloway. On the north side of the railway, a little to the west of the station, there stood an old house which formed part of a preceptory of the Knight Templars of Torphichen, and was used in the reign of James VI. as the Scottish mint, but was pulled down in 1886. Bonnytoun is the seat of Robert Mickel esq. and Preston House, of Patrick B. Seton esq. Robert Hathorn Johnston-Stewart D.L., J.P. of Champfleurie; the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C.; the Earl of Hopetoun G.C.M.G., P.C.; the Duke of Hamilton; Patrick Baron Seton esq. of Preston, and Charles Chalmers esq. J.P. of Longcroft, are the principal landowners. The soil in the south and south-east is a pretty strong clay, stiff and upon a retentive subsoil more suited to pasturage than to the plough, and in all other parts is generally light and free, easily cultivated and rich in its returns. The area of the parish is 10,127 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £15,152, and landwards, £30,451; the population of the whole of the civil parish in 1891 was 7,520, of which the royal and parliamentary burgh contained 4,155.

Loch Mill is practically a siding of the railway about one half mile distant from Linlithgow.

Bridgend, a small village on the Edinburgh road, 2½ miles east from Linlithgow, is mainly the cottages of the working miners at the shale works adjacent. Rateable value, £530; the population in 1891 was 435.

LINLITHGOW-BRIDGE is a small village, partly in the parish of Muiravonside, Stirlingshire, but chiefly in the parish of Linlithgow, and in the small debts court district of Linlithgow; it stands at both ends of the bridge over the river Avon, on the road from Linlithgow to Falkirk, about 1½ miles west from Linlithgow station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 7 east from Falkirk and 18 west from Edinburgh. The general appearance of the country around is undulating, diversified by small summits of hill and woods. The stone bridge over the river Avon was built about 1650, by Alexander, Earl of Linlithgow. A little above it is the viaduct of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway over the Avon, with 20 arches of beautiful masonry, some of them upwards of 90 feet high. The nearest place of worship is at Linlithgow. Adjacent to the village is the large paper mill of Messrs. J. Lovell & Son, Avon paper mills, which gives employment to many of the inhabitants. The rateable value is £1,025; the population in 1891 was 594, of which 139 are in Stirlingshire.

Post Office; John Dickson, postmaster. Delivery by postman from Linlithgow; dispatches, 11.30 a.m. & 12.30, 3.5 & 6.5 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Linlithgow, about 1 mile distant. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid

LIVINGSTONE is a parish and small village with a station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway; the parish, which extends for about 4 miles on both sides of the Brech water, is in the small debt court district of Bathgate. The village is 4 miles south-west from Bathgate and about 8 south from Linlithgow, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh. The parish church was rebuilt in 1732, and repaired in 1837. The soil varies from strong clay and loam to poor moor land. The shale oil works of the Pumpherston Oil Co. are in the parish; and there are likewise the ruins of an old Peel tower and royal hunting lodge. Dechmont House, the residence of Mrs. Madden, adjoining the hamlet of Dechmont, 5 miles south of Linlithgow, on the Edinburgh road; also Bangour, the residence of John Cadzow esq. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., Capt. Robert Stewart, Westwood, Sir John Pender M.P., G.C.M.G., John Young, Addiewell, Meldrum's trustees and Sir W. McDonald Honyman bart. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,362 acres; rateable value, £12,000; population in 1891, 1,616, and in 1881, 1,484.

Post House, Livingstone; John Crow, sub-postmaster. Letters through Mid-Calder. Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 8 p.m.; dispatches, 3.40 & 9 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Mid-Calder, 2½ miles distant QUEENSFERRY is a seaport town on the Firth of Forth, in the parishes of Dalmeny and Queensferry, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow and poor combination of the same; 6 miles west from Edinburgh and 6 east from Bo'ness; it is sometimes styled South Queensferry, to distinguish it from the town of same name on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, and took its name from the use made of the ferry by Margaret, the queen of Malcolm Canmore, in her journeys to and from Dunfermline. Queensferry civil parish is very small and faces the Forth and is on three sides bounded by that of Dalmeny. As a royal burgh Queensferry is governed by a provost, two bailies, and a town council. The burgh unites with Stirling, Culross, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline in returning one member to parliament. The Earl of Rosebery conveyed water into the town, but the supply is now obtained from Mid-Calder. There is a good harbour accessible at any time, and about half a mile distant is the Dalmeny station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. There is a ferry with pier at Newhalls (a little to the eastward of the town) over the Forth. There is another pier a short distance to the westward, for the convenience of boats when they cannot make the former point. At this place the Firth is contracted to a gut of two miles in width; and in the middle of the strait lies a small rocky island called Inchgarvie, and on a height above the town stands Dundas Castle with a modern house adjoining and bearing the same name. The old Town House has a good steeple. About half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, so named from Prince Edgar having landed there. From this place George IV. when on a visit to Scotland, embarked on his return to England. A clock has been erected in the centre of the village by public subscription, at a cost of over £200, in commemoration of her Majesty's jubilee. In 1893, the Earl of Rosebery erected, at a cost of over £3,000, the Countess of Rosebery Memorial Hall: it contains a library and reading room, billiard and games rooms, and also a grand hall for concerts and public meetings, which serves also as a Town hall for the burgh.

The Forth Bridge.—The channel of the Forth here is contracted by the promontory of North Queensferry to a width of a little over a mile. Including the north and south approaches, the structure is rather over 1½ miles in length and runs nearly north and south from the west end of Dalmeny Park to Carlin Knowes, Fifeshire. The spans are 26 in number, of which two are of 1,710 feet, two of 680 feet, 15 of 168 feet, 4 of 57 feet and 3 of 25 feet. The south approach, 1,994 feet in length, consists of four stone arches, 57 feet span, 10 spans of 168 feet each, carrying an iron lattice girder bridge, succeeded by a half span (cantilever) of 680 feet, two cantilever spans of 1,710 feet each, then a half span and five lattice girder spans, succeeded by three arches of granite, each 25 feet span; these last 8 spans form the north approach, 980 feet in length; the portion crossing the deep water channel is 5,322 feet in length and is formed by 3 double cantilevers, each resting on four masonry piers, 49 feet in diameter, rising 18 feet above high water, the centre of each cantilever being 361 feet above high water. There is a double set of steel rails laid in steel troughs; the total weight of steel used was 54,076 tons. The engineers were Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker, and the resident engineer, Mr. F. E. Cooper, the contractors being Messrs. Tancred Arrol & Co.

Bridge House, Newhalls, has been purchased for the Royal Naval Sailors' Home, at the price of £1,200, with grounds attached. A training ship for about 700 boys is now stationed here. A fair is held on the second Friday in August. The area is 11 acres; the population in 1891 was 768 in the royal burgh and 1,531 in the police burgh.

TORPHICHEN is a parish and village; the former, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, is bounded north and east by the parish of Linlithgow, south-east by Bathgate, and west and south by the county of Stirling; the village, which lies 1½ miles west from Westfield station on the Blackstone and Bathgate branch of the North British railway, on the road to Linlithgow, from which town it is 4½ miles distant; it was at one time of some importance. Adjacent to the village, on the north-east, are some remains of the hospital or preceptory of Torphichen, the principal house in Scotland appertaining to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The parish church occupies the site of the nave of the preceptory church, and the ruins of the transept and a portion of the choir remain, the east end having quite disappeared. There is also a Free church, said to be one of the first Free churches in Scotland. The parish, although in some parts moorland, is generally fertile; coal and ironstone are found within it, and there are brick and tile works and a paper mill. Capt. Gillon, Wallhouse, Coltness Iron Co. trustees of Robert Young and William Forbes Lothcote are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,939 acres; rateable value, £11,292; population in 1881, 1,526, and in 1891, 1,724, of which 317 are in the village.

Blackridge is a small hamlet in this parish, an agricultural district on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, 2 miles north-west from Westcraigs station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway and 5½ west from Bathgate. Several coal fields have been opened out in the vicinity, giving increased employment to the inhabitants.

Westcraigs is a small hamlet in this parish, on the road from Bathgate to Airdrie, with a station (which is locally in Lanarkshire) on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway.

UPHALL is a parish and village; the former, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, is bounded by Kirkliston on the north-east and east, by Mid-Calder on the south, Livingstone on the west, and Linlithgow and Ecclesmachan on the north. It is intersected from west to east by the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and is watered by a rivulet called Broxburn; its extent from north to south is 4 miles, with a breadth of 3. Besides the village of Uphall, it contains that of Broxburn (which see); the former village lies one mile north of its railway station on the main line of the North British Company, and there is another station, 1 mile south of Broxburn, called Drumshoreland; the village is distant 11 miles west from Edinburgh and 5½ north-east from Bathgate. In the Buchan vault of the parish church are buried the Hon. Henry Erskine, 2nd son of 10th Earl of Buchan, appointed king's advocate, and died 1817, and his brother Thomas, 3rd son of the 10th Earl, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain and created Baron Erskine, 1806, and died 1823. Shale, which is now so largely used in the manufacture of paraffin oil, of which there are three extensive works in the locality, is found in abundance in the neighbourhood, and is said to be of a very rich quality; owing to this important industry, there has been a great increase in the population within the past few years; bone manures are also manufactured in the parish. The district abounds in coal, sandstone, limestone and ironstone. In this parish is Almondell House, a seat of the Earl of Buchan; Middleton Hall, of Sir John Pender G.C.M.G. and Houstoun House, of John Campbell Shairp esq. J.P. Lord Cardross, trustees of the late Robert Bell esq. John Campbell Shairp esq. J.P. and Sir John Pender G.C.M.G. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,541 acres; rateable value, £49,979; the population in 1881 was 4,812, and in 1891, 8,653, of which 922 are in the village.

WHITBURN (or Whiteburn) is a police burgh and parish in the Linlithgow poor combination and small debt court district, bounded on the south-east by the Breich water, which separates it from Edinburghshire, and on the north by the river Almond. The Cultrig and Bickerton brooks, tributaries of the Almond, both rise in the south-west portion of the parish. The village is on the road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, 1 mile west from East Whitburn station on the Bathgate and Morningside branch of the North British railway, 3½ south-west from Bathgate and 9 south from Linlithgow. Bents station, also on the Bathgate and Morningside branch, is in this parish, 5 miles south from Bathgate. The village is well built and regular. The inhabitants are supported by the coal and iron mines with which the parish abounds, and a little weaving of cotton goods for the Glasgow houses. The public coffee-house and reading room was the gift of Lady Baillie, and schools were built by the trustees of the late Mr. Wilson, under a bequest made by him for the purpose. These schools have since been purchased by the school board, and the trustees now devote the endowments for the purpose of encouraging higher education, by means of scholarships and bursaries. Professor John Brown, the well-known biblical expositor, was a native of this parish. Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet, the Duke of Hamilton, Sir W. McDonald Honyman and John Storry, are the principal landowners. The soil varies considerably. In the upper portion of the parish there is much moss and pasture land; in the lower, the surface is arable.

Crofthead is a large mining village in the parish of Whitburn, with a station, about 1 mile east-by-north, on the Morningside section of the North British line, and about 6 south from Bathgate.

Longridge, or Lanrig, is a small village in the parish of Whitburn, 1½ miles north from Breich station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway, and about 6 south from Bathgate.

The area of the parish comprises 9,775 acres; rateable value, £18,641; the population in 1881 was 6,326, and in 1891, 5,782, of which 1,185 are in the burgh, and in the town of Fauldhouse, which includes Crofthead, 2,762.

WINCHBURGH is a small village in the parish of Kirkliston, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, with a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and on the bank of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal, 11 miles west of Edinburgh and 6 east of Linlithgow; it has a mission church under Kirkliston. The inhabitants are employed in the large shale works and brick and tile works in the parish. The surrounding country is rolling and wooded, the soil being heavy, with a subsoil of clay, and growing fair crops of wheat, barley, oats and turnips, with a considerable acreage of pasture. The rateable value of the village is £967; the population in 1891 was 424.

THE LOTHIANS.

LOTHIAN was in ancient times a district of the kingdom of Northumbria, and is now represented by the counties of Linlithgow (West Lothian), Edinburghshire (Mid-Lothian) and Haddingtonshire (East Lothian). Mid-Lothian is popularly used for Parliamentary purposes as a synonym for Edinburghshire.

MORAY.

THIS was formerly a large district in the north-east of the kingdom, lying south from Moray Firth and east of the Great Glen, and included the present counties of Elgin and Nairn together with a large portion of Inverness and most of Banff. It is now sometimes used as an alternative name for Elgin. The ancient earldom of Moray became extinct early in the 12th century, and in 1563 was revived by Queen Mary in favour of James Stuart, afterwards Regent of Scotland, and this title still continues in the Stuart family.

NAIRNSHIRE.

THIS is a small maritime county in the northern part of Scotland, once forming a portion of the ancient province of Moray, and bounded on the north by the Moray Firth, on the east by the shire of Elgin, and on the south and west by the county of Inverness. It extends from the coast, on the north, to the small lake of Lochindorb (situate at its extreme southern apex) on the south, 20 miles; the breadth along the shore is about 10 miles, and its sides vary from 12 to 20 miles asunder. The shire comprises 195 square miles, or 124,968 acres. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (including valuation of railway, £1,581) £36,955. The population in 1881 was 10,455, and in 1891, 10,019, viz.: males, 4,683, and females, 5,336, showing a decrease during the last decade of 436. In size this county ranks as the twenty-ninth, but as regards population it is, with one exception (Kinross), the smallest in Scotland.

Ancient History.—In this shire is Cawdor Castle, the seat of the Earls of Cawdor, erected in 1454, and in which it is stated Macbeth, Thane of Cawdor, was murdered. In the roof of the highest part of the building is shown the apartment where Lord Lovat lay concealed from his enemies, for some time after the battle of Culloden; upon the glass of the small window is rudely scratched the word "overcome," and the date 1665.

Soil, Produce, &c.—The agricultural properties of Nairnshire assimilate closely with those of the county of Elgin. Exclusive of the hilly part of the district, it may be described as a narrow border of level ground, along the shore of the Firth, from 1 to nearly 6 miles in breadth—and here for the most part it is arable; but as the county recedes further from the coast, it becomes bleak and hilly; there are, however, no eminences of great altitude or note. The farms are usually small, and most frequently uninclosed. Sheep and black cattle are reared in considerable numbers, and chiefly fed on the natural pasture. From the agricultural returns of Great Britain for 1894, the chief crops are shown as follows: oats, 5,861 acres; barley, or bere, 3,164 acres; rye, 172 acres; the total corn crops being 9,235 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,192 acres; potatoes, 342 acres; total green crops, 4,574 acres; land under grass, 8,849 acres; and permanent pasture, 3,245 acres; the live stock in 1894 was: horses, 1,382; cattle, 6,563; sheep, 16,945; and pigs, 706. There are no minerals worked. The shire is entirely devoid of manufactures; but the fisheries—white, herring and salmon—are tolerably productive.

Rivers and Railways.—The county is crossed in its southern or hilly part by the river Findhorn, which runs in a direction from south-west to north-east, through Elginshire to the Moray Firth; parallel with this rapid stream, about 8 or 9 miles to the west, courses the river Nairn, which also runs into the Moray Firth. Besides the rivers there are several small brooks and burns, the banks of which are covered with woods and plantations; and there are some elegant seats scattered over the county. The only railway which passes through this county is the Highland railway, on which line Brodie and Nairn are stations. Small as this shire is, it possesses a distinct political and judicial establishment. It comprises three complete parishes, viz.: Ardclach, Auldearn and Nairn, two parts of parishes, and contains one royal burgh, Nairn, which is the only town. This burgh, in conjunction with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres, sends one member to Parliament; and the county unites with Elginshire in returning another representative. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 numbered 816.

COUNTY CONSTABULARY.

HEAD QUARTERS, NAIRN.

Chief Constable, James Stirling.

The force consists of 1 sergeant & 6 constables.

Stations, Nairn, Auldearn, Cawdor & Belivat.

MILITARY.

The troops in this county are in the Scottish District command; head quarters, Edinburgh.

There are no Militia, Yeomanry, or Volunteers having head quarters in the county, but The Highland Volunteer Artillery (Southern Division, Royal Artillery) (2nd Sub-District) (head quarters, Inverness) have Nos. 10 & 11 Garrison Companies stationed at Nairn; Capts. T. Hood & D. M. Baillie (hon. major), in command.

ARDCLACH is a Highland parish, in the south-east of the county, bounded on the east by the county of Elgin, and is in general mountainous, covered with heath, and abounding in tracts of bleak and barren moss; it is 6 miles west from Dava station on the Highland railway, and 9 south-east from Nairn, in Nairn poor combination and small debts court district. It contains no village worthy of the name, and till within the last few years consisted of small crofters, with their plots of land, reclaimed from the surrounding wilds: but of late great improvements in agriculture have taken place, every year increasing the arable acreage of this parish. The river Findhorn traverses the parish, and the scenery along its banks is of the most varied and interesting description. There is a considerable quantity of timber along the banks of the river, which in its course through the parish receives the Tomlachlan, the Leonach and the Rhilean brooks. Glenferness House is the seat of the Earl of Leven and Melville. The principal landowners are Alex. Brodie esq. of Lethen, Earl of Leven and Melville, and Earl Cawdor. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order No. 29, part of this parish has been transferred to Edinkillie parish in Elgin county. The area is 40,317 acres; rateable value, £6,692, 3s.; population in 1881, 1,117, and in 1891, 942.

AULDEARN (anciently called Erin) is a parish and village; the latter, a burgh of barony, is 2½ miles south-east from Nairn. A railway station on the Highland line is now (1895) in course of erection. It is in Nairn small debts court district and poor combination. In the immediate neighbourhood of the village is the scene of a victory gained by the Marquis of Montrose over the forces of the Covenanters in 1645. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land, and the parish is bounded on the north-west by the Moray Firth, and the east by Elginshire. The Dunbar Memorial Hall cost £650. The principal landowners are Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen, Ian Ashley Moreton esq. of Brodie, Lady Gordon Cathcart, Sir Alexander James Dunbar bart. and Earl Cawdor. The area is 14,035 acres; rateable value, £9,932 11s. 7d.; the population in 1891 was 1,315 in the parish, and 364 in the village.

CAWDOR is a parish in the Nairn poor combination and small debts court district. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders Nos. 49 and 133, the part of this parish formerly in Inverness-shire has been transferred to this county, and a part of Moy and Delarossie parish also added to the parish and a part of Cawdor added to Nairn. The village is 5 miles south-west of Nairn, the nearest railway station on the Highland railway: and is interesting and picturesque, and upon the banks of the burn of its name is an excellent inn, frequented by tourists and families, who visit the spot to contemplate the scenery around and the towers of the ancient castle—the seat of the Thanes of Cawdor. The castle is occupied in the shooting season by Earl Cawdor; visitors are granted access to this interesting structure, which possesses great antiquarian interest (on applying at the post office for tickets of admission), where are vaulted chambers, spiral staircases and tapestried rooms. From the summit of the castle is commanded one of the most extensive and lovely views in the county, and many parties of the gay and the fashionable appreciate by their presence in the summer and autumn the various beauties of this favoured locality. There is in the vicinity one of the largest and oldest established distilleries in Scotland. A cattle market is held once a year, viz. last Wednesday in July. Earl Cawdor and Harry F. Rose esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 29,366 acres; rateable value, £5,259 4s. 6d. and it contained in 1881, a population of 1,070, and in 1891, 1,009.

Post & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Cawdor; Charles M'Gillivray, postmaster.

Letters through Nairn arrive at 10.15 a.m. & 4.25 p.m.; dispatches, 5 a.m. & 12 noon. The nearest telegraph office is at Nairn

CROY and DALCROSS form a parish partly in this parish and partly in the adjoining county of Inverness; particulars will be found under the latter county.

DAVIOT and DUNLICHTY, a joint parish formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), transferred to Inverness-shire.

DYKE and MOY, forming together a parish, part of which was in this county, has been by the Act previously mentioned, transferred to Elginshire.

MOY and DELAROSSE form a joint parish partly in Inverness-shire. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part in this county has been annexed to Cawdor parish.

NAIRN.

NAIRN is a royal burgh of considerable antiquity, having been regalised by William the Lion. It is the head of a poor combination and small debts court district, and has a station on the Highland railway, and is distant by rail from Edinburgh, 185 miles north-north-west; from Aberdeen, 93¼ north-west; from Perth, by the Inverness and Perth junction railway, 128¾ north; from Forres, 9½ south-west and from Inverness, 15¼ north. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part of the parish of Cawdor in this county has been added to this parish. It is supposed that the town derives its name from the river Nearn, in Gaelic meaning alders—the river, or water, being understood. The original charter of the burgh is not extant. It was granted by Alexander I. in the year 1100, and was renewed by King James VI. Nairn enjoys a strange immunity from rain, having the smallest rainfall of any town in Scotland. The mean annual rainfall is 23 inches, while that of Edinburgh is 32 inches. The town has been considerably improved of late years, being much resorted to in summer; in the neighbourhood is some fine scenery and many agreeable residences. There is a harbour here with breakwater and pier. For a seaport town Nairn enjoys certain advantages obtained from a fertile country yielding various articles for exportation. The exports consist of timber, corn, potatoes, eggs, smoked haddocks, herrings and freestone. The imports are groceries, hardware, lime, manure and coal. The white fishery is carried on successfully, and salmon fishing is also prosecuted. A sheriff court and a small debt court are held weekly. The burgh unites with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres in returning one member to Parliament. A new parish church is now (1895) being erected at the corner of Seabank road, on a site presented by Lieut.-Col. Clarke, of Achareidh, from designs by Mr. John Starforth, architect, of 35 York place, Edinburgh, at a cost of £8,000. The building will replace the present structure; it is in the Early Gothic style, and consists of transepts, organ chamber, vestry and session house, with a large square tower and belfry, and will have 1,200 sittings. There is a hall adjoining for Sunday school purposes, to hold 400 scholars. The New Free Church, opened on 1st January, 1882, is in the Early French and the modified Gothic styles; a spire surmounts the building, a clock and bell being placed in the lower base of the tower; it is seated for 1,200 persons. There is an excellent museum, containing a valuable cabinet of minerals. A Public Hall has been erected at a cost of about £1,800, which will accommodate 600 persons. It is in the High street, and is much used for public entertainments. Near the centre of High street is a spacious structure erected about 1818, containing a town and county courts room. A new Post Office is now (1896) in course of erection. Four branch banking establishments are settled here, and also a savings bank. There are two newspapers, viz.—"The Nairnshire Telegraph," published on Wednesdays by George Bain, Leopold street, and the "St. Ninian's Press," published on Saturdays by John Fraser, High street. Cattle, horse and general markets are held here once a month, on the Saturday following Muir of Ord market; corn markets on Thursday weekly; feeing markets, Thursdays preceding 26th May and 22nd November. About 4 miles distant is the celebrated Royal Brackla Distillery, a very extensive establishment. The freestone quarries in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of men. Some years ago baths were erected by a public company, at a cost of about £15,000, the floors of which are formed of the solid rock, with a graduated depth of water. The bathing facilities in Nairn are very good, and the special characteristics of the place are those of a fashionable watering resort. There is now a golf course upwards of 3 miles in length, the holes 18 in number; the president is Earl Cawdor. At the western extremity of the town, adjoining what was formerly the parish school, a monument was erected some years since to Mr. John Strath, who was forty years schoolmaster. A bronze monument on a granite pedestal was recently (1895) erected, facing High street, at the cost of about £1,000, to John Grigor M.D. who left several legacies for the benefit of the people of the neighbourhood. Approaching the town from the west is the Nairn Hospital, a building erected by subscription in 1846. In 1896, in digging the foundation of new kennels at the Kebbock Stone, near Delnies, a skeleton of a man apparently over six feet was discovered; the teeth in both jaws were perfectly preserved; the grave had been cut about two and a half feet from the surface, and a number of stones, about a foot square, forming an arch, placed over the body. Earl Cawdor; Major James Rose, of Kilravock Castle, lord lieutenant of the county; Ian Ashley M. Brodie esq. D.L. of Brodie; Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen; Sir Alexander James Dunbar bart. D.L. of Boath House; Lady Gordon Cathcart, of Kinsteary; John Mackintosh-Walker esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. of Geddes, and Robert Anderson esq. of Lochdhu, are the principal landowners. The area is 8,827 acres; rateable value, £15,136, including railways, £15,544 6s. 2d.; rateable value of Nairn parish landward, £8,062; the population of the parish was in 1881, 5,368, and in 1891, 5,222, the parliamentary burgh containing 4,014 of this number, and the royal burgh, 4,640.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, High street; H. C. Brown, postmaster. Deliveries, 8 & 11 a.m. & 3.50 p.m.; dispatches, 7.10 & 10 a.m. & 1, 2.50, 4.55, 7.50 & 10 p.m

PETTY, a large parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," added to the county of Inverness.

URQUHART and LOGIE-WESTER form a parish, formerly part of this county, but has been transferred to Ross and Cromarty by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889."

THE ORKNEY ISLES.

THESE islands, which form a county, were known to the ancients by the name of "Orcades," and are situated in the North Sea, separated from Caithness-shire by the Pentland Firth, and lying between the parallels of 58 deg. 44 min. and 59 deg. 25 min. north latitude, and 2 deg. and 3 deg. 30 min. west longitude; from the mainland they are distant four leagues, and from the Shetland Isles about 15. The form of the islands is extremely irregular; and from these circumstances the dimensions of some of them are ascertained with difficulty. They are separated from one another by portions of the sea denominated "sounds," "firths," or "ferries," some of which are only a mile broad, whilst others are more than 5. The whole area covered is of considerable extent, for from south-west to the north-east they extend about 55 miles, and upwards of 30 in another direction. The aggregate area is 375 square miles, or 240,476 acres. According to a survey taken by Dr. Murdo Mackenzie in 1750, the whole number of the islands under the denomination of the Orkneys amounted to sixty-seven, of which the following twenty-nine only are inhabited: Mainland (or Pomona), Græm-say, Hoy, Waas, Raasay, Faray, Cavay, Flotay, South Ronaldshay, Swaney, Pentland, Skerry, Burray Lambholm, Copinsay, Shapinsay, Stronsay, Papa-Stronsay, Edey, Fairey, Sanday, North Ronaldshay, Westray, Papa-Westray, Egilshay, Rousay, Weir, Enhallow, Gairsay and Damsay; the remaining thirty-eight, which, in the primitive language of the country, are termed "holms," are much inferior in size, and solely appropriated to pasturage. The population in 1891 was 14,298 males and 16,155 females, total, 30,453, against 32,044 in 1881; and the inhabited houses 6,409 in 1891, and 6,378 in 1881.

Early History &c.—The earliest inhabitants appear to have been Celtic, who, at an unknown period before the Christian era established themselves in Scotland. Diodurus Siculus mentions Cape Orkas as one of the extremities of Britain; and the Orcades are first named in the 2nd century by Pomponius Mela, who states their number at 30; Pliny augments them to 40; but Ptolemy makes them only 30. Tacitus asserts that the Orcades were discovered and subdued by Agricola, which seems to be corroborated by discoveries in the Orkneys of Roman coins belonging to the first century. The origin of the name is believed to be Celtic, and is probably derived from Orkin, a large marine animal—a term that has been applied to both whales and seals. Orkney therefore appears to mean "the land of whales," or of "seals." The Orcades seem to have been esteemed of some importance in the time of Constantine, as they are especially mentioned, with Gaul and Britain, as the patrimony of his youngest son. Little is known of the Orcades from that time until the convulsions in Norway, which ended in the elevation of Harold, "the Fair-Haired," to the undivided sovereignty of that country. About the middle of the 9th century Kenneth Macalpin obtained possession of the islands, and they continued with the Scottish throne until the end of the 11th century, when they were assigned by King Donald Bain to the King of Norway, to whom they were subject until the middle of the 13th century, when they were again transferred by Magnus, King of Norway, to Alexander, King of Scotland. But, although the islands were thus ceded, the Norwegians still asserted their right to them until the year 1468, when James III. of Scotland married Margaret, daughter of the King of Denmark, with whom they again passed, in lieu of her dowry, to the Crown of Scotland; and upon the birth of her son, James IV., they were finally ceded, which cession was confirmed when James IV. of Scotland married Ann, daughter of the King of Denmark. From the middle of the 16th to the beginning of the 17th century the islands were possessed successively by Earls Robert and Patrick Stewart—Robert being a natural son of James V. and half-brother to Queen Mary. Subsequent to this period the islands passed into the possession of the English Crown, and were bestowed by Charles I., and afterwards by Charles II., on the Morton family. In 1776 Lord Morton sold them to Sir Lawrence Dundas, and they have since remained in the family of his descendants. Having been so long and so repeatedly in the possession of the Norwegians, many names of persons, as well as of places, are derived from the Scandinavian language. It will be comprehended that the Orcadians bear no resemblance whatever to the Celtic Highlanders in language, dress, appearance, or customs. Orkney has given birth to some individuals who have attained to eminence in science, literature and the arts. Of these we may mention Malcolm Laing (1762-1818), author of a well-known "History of Scotland;" Mrs. Brunton (1778-1818), authoress; Samuel Laing (b. 1810), author of a "Tour in Norway;" his son, Samuel Laing, Finance Minister of India (1860-5) and M.P. Orkney, 1873-85; William Balfour Baikie M.D. the African traveller (1820-1864); Dr. Rae, the Arctic traveller; Thomas Stewart Traill (1781-1862), an eminent professor of medical jurisprudence in the University of Edinburgh; and Murdoch M'Kenzie, author of a "Survey of the Orkney and Lewis Islands." The grandfather of Washington Irving, the American writer, was born in the island of Shapinsay, and the eminent engraver of the last century, Sir Thomas Strange, was born in Kirkwall 1721, and died 1792.

Soil, Produce, Climate &c.—Compared with the sterile wilds in some of the sister islands of the Shetlands, or even with the lofty hills and bleak marshy plains of the mainland to the south, these islands gain in appearance that to the eye the surface presents a rich and pleasing variety. The hills composing the ridge that skirts the Western Ocean, as well as those that intersect the mainland, and occupy some of the other islands, for the most part are formed into ridges of some extent, with small intervening valleys; and their tops are generally either flat or rounded. Some few of them are almost entirely covered with verdure; at the base of many are cornfields, interspersed with patches of rich grass, affording excellent feeding for cattle; the soil is sandy or clay loam, and peat moss is found over a considerable portion of these islands. Much of the land under tillage is not regularly fenced, nor divided into separate fields. Numbers of cattle and sheep are raised, for the pasture of which this county is peculiarly well suited. The chief crops are oats, 33,834 acres; turnips, 14,312; hay, 10,304; barley, 4,848; potatoes, 2,916; total corn crop being 38,725 acres; green crops, 17,589 acres; land under grass, 38,494 acres; permanent pasture, 16,341; total acreage of land and water, 249,565 acres, of which 59,785 are mountain and heath land and only 12 of woods and plantations. The live stock for 1894 comprised: horses, 6,229; cattle, 26,256; sheep, 30,864; and pigs, 3,493. The herring fishery is considerable; the principal "stations" are Papa-Stronsay, Deersound, Holm, Burray and South Ronaldshay. The markets are Ireland, Scotland and England, a few only being sent abroad from Orkney, except the produce of the early fishery, which is carried on in the neighbourhood of Stromness, and from that place the herrings are dispatched direct to Hamburg. The cod and ling fisheries are also prosecuted from almost all the islands, and in the curing of the fish many persons are engaged. Lobster catching is pursued with fair success, as is also oyster dredging. The number of fishing boats registered in 1894 at Kirkwall, under the "Sea Fisheries Act, 1868," was 391; aggregate tonnage, 2,857 and employing 1,080 men and boys, besides 650 extra hands; also 8 sailing vessels, total tonnage, 232. The manufacture of kelp was at one time the staple of Orkney, but in consequence of the reduction of the duty on barilla, this trade suddenly collapsed, but latterly has shown signs of reviving, as it is now used in the making of iodine and other chemical substances. The distillation of whisky has long been established, there being two distilleries, one near Kirkwall and another at Stromness. Throughout the whole of the islands rain falls in considerable quantity, especially on the western coasts; and it is supposed that the annual amount falling in these islands averages 36.95 inches. Snows are neither so frequent nor so heavy, but they come with comparative violence, and generally from the north-west and south-east; but though what falls in the course of the year may not be much short of the quantity in other northern latitudes, it continues only a few days at a time on the surface of the earth. A peculiarity of the climate with respect to the season of snow and hail merits some attention. Some part of the month of June, which in Britain is well known to be of a pleasant and genial warmth, is here not only colder than the preceding months, but also as much so as any month of winter; for two weeks, and even sometimes more, about the middle of June, the wind blows from the north, strong and piercing, accompanied with snow and hail showers.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The Orkneys comprise 18 entire parishes; the only two towns are Kirkwall, which is the capital and a royal burgh, and Stromness, a burgh of barony. The isles of Orkney and Shetland form one sheriffdom or stewartry, under a sheriff depute, whose authority extends over all; but he has a substitute resident in Orkney, and another in Shetland, by whom the duties are principally performed. Combined they form one parliamentary district, under the title of the county of Orkney and Shetland, which returns one member to Parliament. Kirkwall, the capital of the Orkneys, is a representative burgh, joining with Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in sending another member. The parliamentary constituency of the county in 1894-5 was 3,705. The valuation of the county (exclusive of the royal burgh) for 1894-5 was £62,377.

HOY and GRÆMSAY are two islands in Stromness small debt court district. The civil parish is formed of Græmsay Island and part of Hoy Island; the remaining part of the latter being included in Walls and Flotta parish. The island of Hoy, which is separated from Mainland of Orkney by Hoy Sound and Græmsay Island, is the most interesting of the Orkney group; it is about 11 miles long and from 3½ to 5 miles in breadth, and consists chiefly of three hills, the highest, Ward Hill, being 1,564 feet. In Hoy are to be found many objects of interest, chief of which are the Dwarfie Stone, Hoy Head and the Old Man. The latter, on the north-west coast, is a stack or column of red sandstone, 450 feet in height. Rackwick is a small village in the island, on the west coast. There is communication with Stromness by steamer three times weekly. The area of the entire parish is 15,183 acres; rateable value, £809; the population of the entire parish in 1881 was 603, and in 1891, 537, viz.: Græmsay, 223 and part of Hoy, 314; the population of Hoy Island in Walls and Flotta parish in 1891 was 21.

KIRKWALL.

KIRKWALL, the capital of the Orkney Islands and of the united parishes of Kirkwall and St. Ola, is a town of great antiquity, a royal burgh, and the seat of a synod and presbytery. It is 353 miles from Edinburgh by land and ferry, but considerably less by water; 58 north from Wick, 54 north-by-east from Thurso, 41 north from John o' Groats, Caithness-shire and 14¾ east from Stromness, situate about the centre of the island, called by way of pre-eminence, Mainland, or Pomona, and on the south-east of the bay of Kirkwall. The town bears strong characteristics of antiquity; the principal street is exceedingly narrow, being in some places barely wide enough to afford passage for a cart; the houses are generally arranged with their gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular appearance. Many of these houses, both externally and internally, present striking features of old age—the doors and windows are small, the walls of great thickness, and the apartments narrow and gloomy. The modern dwellings are, however, an exception. The harbour of Kirkwall is safe and commodious, having two excellent piers, one, a massive and substantial structure, erected in 1885, at a cost of about £20,000, which enables steamers and other vessels to come to the pier head at all times of the tide; the outer bay affords good anchorage. Two miles to the south is Scapa pier, erected in 1878, at a cost of £12,000, and where the mail steamer to and from Scrabster (Thurso) and Stromness calls daily. Altogether, the situation of the place is well adapted for the resort of shipping. Fishing and fish curing occupy many persons, and the trade in timber is of some consequence. Kirkwall was created a royal burgh, in the first instance, by James III. and its charter was renewed by James V.; its government is confided to a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and seven councillors; it is a representative burgh, and unites with Wick, Tain, Dornoch, Dingwall and Cromarty, in returning one member. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October; the sheriff and small debts courts are held every Tuesday, except during the vacations. The Cathedral Church of St. Magnus, a Norwegian jarl or earl, canonised in 1135, was the seat of the see of Orkney, said to have been founded by St. Servanus in the 5th century, although the list of bishops does not begin till the reign of David I. (1124-53). After the revolution of 1688, the see was abolished, but was revived in 1733 under the title of Orkney and Caithness; in 1769 it was united to Moray and Ross, and is now held with Aberdeen. The cathedral, as originally built during the period 1137-60, consisted of apsidal choir with aisles, transepts, nave of seven bays with aisles and a central tower with spire; it was afterwards largely rebuilt and considerably extended, both eastwards and westwards, at different periods, and now consists of a choir of six bays with aisles, triforium and clerestory, transepts with eastern chapel, nave of eight bays, also with triforium and clerestory, and a central tower of two stages with a modern parapet and pinnacles, and a low pyramidal spire, the whole reaching a height of 123 feet; in the tower are four bells, rescued from the fire which partially destroyed the original steeple in 1671. The transepts, three bays of the choir and two of the nave, and the interior of the south doorway belong to the Norman church of 1137-60; during the Transition period (1160-1200) the piers and arches of the crossing were rebuilt and eastern chapels added to the transepts; during the period 1200-50, most of the nave piers and part of the walls of the aisles were rebuilt, and the entire nave and the centre of the choir vaulted in stone; the nave at this time appears to have consisted of six bays only, but after 1250 it was determined to lengthen the church, and the choir and its aisles were thereupon extended three bays, and a new west front erected, at a distance of about 30 feet from the then existing front, and somewhat obliquely to the axis of the nave, but this new front, probably from want of funds, was not united to the earlier structure, and the arcades completed, till the latter half of the 15th century, and the new part was never vaulted till 1850, when some plaster vaulting was put up. There were once many tombs in the church, but only one or two now exist, and include a mural tomb in the south aisle of the nave to Malise, Earl Palatine of Stratherne and Earl of Orkney (d. c. 1330), and various inscribed floor slabs of the 17th and 18th centuries, but both the tombs and woodwork within the building were either destroyed or greatly injured in 1848, when the fabric underwent a considerable renovation; only the choir, shut off from the crossing by a glass screen, is now used; it is filled with pews, and has a gallery over the north aisle; a number of carved fragments, both of wood and stone, and including some figures and shields of arms, are preserved in a vaulted chamber above the south chapel. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 232 feet; width across the nave, 56 feet, or through the transepts, 100 feet; the height is generally 71 feet. A monument to Dr. John Rae, the Arctic explorer, best known as having been in charge of two expeditions (1848-1851 and 1853-1854) in search of Sir John Franklin, and having on his return in 1854 brought back many relics of that ill-fated explorer, was in December, 1895, placed in the cathedral, and comprises a figure of Portland stone on a pedestal of granite, provided with an inscription giving the dates of the explorer's expeditions and his age; opposite to this is a monument to William B. Baikie M.D. the African traveller. To the south of the cathedral are the remains of the ancient palace of the Bishops of Orkney, in which King Haco, of Norway, died after his defeat at Largs (3rd October, 1263), and James V. slept here in 1540; almost adjoining to these are the ruins of the Earl's Palace, built by Patrick Stewart, second Earl of Orkney of that name, beheaded at Edinburgh in 1614; the buildings have richly decorated turrets, mullioned windows and cross loops; they are built of grey freestone and as ruins have a fine effect. The ancient church of St. Ola, which is believed to have existed prior to the foundation of that of St. Magnus, and was then the only religious establishment, stood near the shore of the road, or bay, of Kirkwall, and from its situation the town originally obtained the appellation of Kirkjiovauger, or the "Kirk on the bay," subsequently corrupted to Kirkwall. A short distance from the cathedral is a church belonging to the United Presbyterians, and near it is the Free church. There are also places of worship for the Episcopalians, Independents and Roman Catholics. Kirkwall sustains several educational establishments, including an academy, or grammar school, which is now under the control of the Burgh School Board. The Municipal Buildings have been erected at a cost of nearly £6,000, the foundation stone having been laid by the late Earl of Mar and Kellie, on August 20th, 1884; they are three storeys in height, and are built in the Scottish baronial style, the principal entrance being emphasised by a fine semi-classic doorway, surmounted by two statues of the ancient halberdiers of the burgh in full uniform; on the ground floor is the Post Office, office of burgh surveyor and town clerk, and three other suites of offices, also Free Library, which contains 3,310 volumes; on the first floor, at the back, is the Town Hall, the front being occupied as town council chamber, immediately behind which, and between it and the Town Hall, is a room for the Commissioners of Supply. The County Buildings, mid-way between the ruins of the Earl's and Bishop's palaces, are of an elaborate description, and were erected in 1877, at a cost of about £5,000, and built principally of the freestone of the district; they contain accommodation for the local courts, county officials, and committee rooms &c. and are connected with the gaol. Here are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and several hotels. Three newspapers are published here weekly, viz. "The Northman," on Saturday; the "Orcadian," on Thursday, and the "Orkney Herald," on Wednesday. The Poor House, built at a cost of about £3,000, is for the poor of the whole county. The Balfour Hospital was founded by John Balfour esq. of Trenabie, for the relief of the sick and as an asylum for a certain number of aged, infirm persons, who are attended gratuitously by the faculty of Kirkwall; it contains 12 beds. A Fever Hospital was added in 1890, and contains 10 beds. The Kirkwall fair was at one time famed for the extent of its business, and the number of merchants and others attending from various distant places, and it has been compared to the famous Leipsic fair on a smaller scale. It is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of August, and continues during that week and the one succeeding; but the business is now comparatively trifling. There is also a horse and cattle market held on the first Monday in every month. Opposite to the cathedral, on the west side of the street, were the ruins of a fortress called the "King's Castle," which time and the havoc of war had nearly levelled. It was a place of considerable strength in 1581, when, or soon after, it was occupied by the Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. The remains were cleared away during the latter part of 1865, and a new street formed, called Castle street, leading to Harbour street. The area is 11,088 acres; rateable value, St. Ola, £4,670; burgh of Kirkwall, £13,082; the population of Kirkwall and St. Ola in 1881 numbered 4,777, and in 1891, 4,755, of which number 3,926 belonged to the burgh of Kirkwall; St. Ola, 829.

SOUTH RONALDSHAY is an island and parish, the latter comprising in addition the islands of Burra, Hunda, Pentland Skerries and Swona, in Orkney poor combination; it is the largest of the South Isles, and contains the flourishing village of St. Margaret's Hope, about 12 miles south from Kirkwall. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held here on the second Thursday of April, June and September. The steamer from Stromness and Scapa (Kirkwall) call off St. Margaret's Hope daily on the outward journey to Scrabster (Thurso), and three times weekly in summer and twice in winter on the return journey. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch in the village. A fair for horses and cattle is held on the first Wednesday after 11th November. The area of the entire civil parish is 15,062 acres; rateable value, £3,886; the population in 1891 was 3,059 in the civil, and 2,455 in the ecclesiastical parish.

St. Mary's, or South Parish, is a quoad sacra parish in the island and civil parish of South Ronaldshay. The population in 1891 was 604.

Burra Island lies to the north of South Ronaldshay, in Holm sound. The population in 1891 was 681. Hunda is a very small island adjoining it on the north-west, with 7 inhabitants.

Pentland Skerries Island is the most southerly of the Orkney group, on which is a lighthouse, and separated from Caithnesshire by the Pentland Firth. The population is 14.

Swona is on the west coast of South Ronaldshay, in Pentland Firth. The population in 1891 was 42.

STROMNESS is a burgh of barony and seaport, also a parish, 14¾ miles west from Kirkwall, and situated on Mainland (or Pomona) Island, opposite to and north of Hoy Island, from which it is divided by the Sound of Hoy, in which, covering the mouth of Stromness harbour, lies the island of Græmsay and Holm Island, which latter forms part of the parish. Stromness harbour is a fine natural basin, extending from south to north more than a mile, and is sheltered from the Atlantic on the west by a high ridge, the southern extremity of which forms the north side of Hoy Sound; while its entrance is protected partly by the island of Græmsay, which lies midway in the sound, and partly by a ness or point of land which streches from the westward. On the east side it is shielded by two small islands or holms, and even beyond these, in a kind of outer harbour or roadstead, there is excellent anchorage for shipping. It was formerly no uncommon thing in the spring months to see in these havens upwards of 50 large vessels on their way to the whale fishery in Davis Straits and Greenland calling here for the purpose of completing their complement of men, generally about 20 for each ship. In some years there were upwards of 700 men furnished from this port to Davis Straits, besides 150 apprentices, but the numbers have for some years been gradually diminishing. There are two patent slips and formerly ship building was carried on, but the business now consists chiefly of repairing vessels. The pier, a substantial erection, was built in 1878, and extended in 1894, and cost upwards of £8,000, and large steamers can enter at any state of the tide. Lobster and cod fishing is carried on to some extent; during the last few years an extensive herring fishery has sprung up, which commences early in May and continues about eight weeks, in which from four to six hundred boats are engaged, coming from all the ports of the north and east coasts of Scotland; this causes a large influx of people to the town, when for the time being the population is increased by about 5,000; the bulk of the herrings are cured and sent to the English and continental markets. Stromness was created an independent burgh of barony by a charter held from the Crown, granted in 1817, when the government was vested in two bailies and nine councillors; it is now a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," the government consisting of a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the third Thursday of March, June and September and on the first Thursday of December. Stromness is a very irregularly built town, the habitations having been erected without any regard to uniformity of arrangement, and generally as near the sea as possible; some are even within flood mark, and protected by bulwarks, quays, and jetties, which each individual appears to have constructed as suited his own convenience. The streets are paved and there are gas works in the town. A public library is supported by annual subscriptions. The market days are first Wednesday of each month. An annual fair is held on the first Tuesday in September. Branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited are established here, and there are two hotels. The Orkney Natural History Society's Museum contains Hugh Miller's celebrated Asterolepis, and many other specimens of much interest, and has been further enriched by assortments from the collection of the late Dr. Baikie. The area of the parish comprises 7,618 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £3 995 and of the remainder of the parish, £2,575; the population in 1891 was 2,383, including 1,698 in the town, and in 1881, 2,410, with 1,705 in the town; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 1,633.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Orkney added); Mrs. Elizabeth Ross, postmistress. STRONSAY and EDAY, formerly a united civil parish, but under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," are now two separate parishes, in Orkney poor combination and Kirkwall small debt court district, comprising the islands of Auskerry, Eday, Papa-Stronsay, Pharey and Stronsay.

separated from other islands of the group by Stronsay Firth. Stronsay Island is about 22 miles north-east from Kirkwall. Communication with Kirkwall by steamer, three times weekly in summer, and twice in winter. The area of Stronsay is 9,000 acres; rateable value, £3,663; population in 1891, 1,251.

Pharay, an adjoining island, is in the parish, and contained a population in 1881 of 72, and in 1891, 58.

Auskerry is a small island south of Stronsay, on which is a lighthouse. The population in 1891 was 7.

Papa-Stronsay is a small island to the north of Stronsay. The population in 1891 was 27.

Eday is an island lying west-by-north of Stronsay, from which it is separated by Eday Sound, and is in the Orkney poor combination and the small debt court district of Kirkwall. There are several Pictish remains on the island. Communication with Kirkwall by steamer, three times weekly in summer, and twice in winter. The rateable value is £1,440; the population of the island in 1881 was 730, and in 1891, 647, and of the parish, 705.

PEEBLES-SHIRE.

THIS county, otherwise Tweeddale, in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire, on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfries-shire, and by the county of Lanark for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures fully 30 miles; from east to west its breadth varies from 20 to 10 miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and it comprehends an area of 354 square miles, or 226,899 acres. In 1881 the population was 13,822, and in 1891 comprised 6,913 males and 7,848 females, total, 14,761; the inhabited houses in 1881 were 2,696, and in 1891, 2,989. In size Peebles ranks the twenty-fourth, and in population the thirty-first of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—The shire derives its present name from the county town, and Tweeddale from being the district in which the Tweed has its source, and the vale through which it pursues its course to the east. The Gadeni tribe of Britons, who inhabited this secluded territory on the Tweed, have left innumerable traces of their occupation demonstrated in the names of places, Druidic and warlike remains, and sepulchral tumuli. About 80 A.D. the Romans subdued the British aborigines in the district. After the abdication of the Roman power in 410, the Gadeni associated with the kindred Britons of Strathclyde, and the descendants of those early settlers continued here throughout the Pictish period; about 530 the Picts were defeated by King Arthur at Cademuir, near Peebles. Kenneth III. King of the Scots, obtained possession of the district about 974. From the epoch of the migration of the Strathclyde Britons, in the 9th century, the Scoto-Irish intermingled with the remaining Britons on the upper Tweed. The next and last class of intruders on the district were the Anglo-Saxons, from Lothian, who finally established a settlement in the shire. One of the chiefs of this people, called Eadulph, settled in the vale of Edleston water; in this manner those of Saxon lineage founded the families of rank in Peebles-shire. At different times the county suffered in a small degree from the inroads of marauders from the English side of the border, but these generally passed to the east, up the coast, or through Dumfries and Lanark. At the defeat of Montrose, 13 September, 1645, at Philiphaugh, some of the heads of the best families fell, or were taken prisoners, fighting on the side of royalty, and Montrose retired to Traquair, in this county; but in the insurrection of 1679, in the west of Scotland, ended by the battle of Bothwell Bridge, there were few natives of Tweeddale; the troops in 1715 and 1745 also passed clear of this county. Since these stirring events the county has not been prominent in the scenes of history. When Scotland began to be divided into sheriffdoms, about the 12th century, Tweeddale was put under the jurisdiction of two sheriffs, one of whom was settled at Traquair, the other at Peebles. Peebles-shire, from its connection with the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde, became a part of the diocese of Glasgow, in which it continued till the abolition of episcopacy.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—The county is an uninterrupted series of hill and mountain ranges, so close upon each other that there is scarcely to be found a plain of moderate dimensions in the district, and not one of any kind unless upon the margin of the Tweed, or its tributaries. The elevations for so small a county are very numerous, and some of them of considerable altitude. The following are among the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea:—Hartfield, 2,916 feet; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gume Cleugh, 2,200; Dundroich, Pykestane, and Hell's Cleugh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800; Broughton Heights, 1,483; and Meigle, 1,480. Notwithstanding the attempts made by several individuals to encourage better modes of agriculture, till within the present century the management of arable farms was in a deplorably low condition; but in later years particularly, draining, ploughing and planting have been carried out effectually, and the general features of the country highly improved. The sides and summits of the hills are at the present time here and there clothed with plantations; and the great vale of the Tweed and its minor valleys are well cultivated, inclosed and divided; arable fields have taken the place of unproductive swamps, and are advancing up the sides of the hills. Oats is the chief corn crop; turnips are also raised largely, the soil being admirably adapted for the growing of this root, upon which large numbers of sheep of the Cheviot and black-faced breeds are fed. The chief crops are oats, 8,587 acres; turnips, 4,353 acres, and barley, 517 acres, while hay of all kinds occupied in 1894 3,657 acres; total corn crops being 9,145 acres, and green crops, 5,124 acres; land under grass, 17,481 acres and permanent pasture, 15,061; total area of land and water, 223,295; mountain and heath land being 149,229 acres. The live stock in 1894 comprised 1,146 horses, 6,981 cattle, 189,143 sheep, and 811 pigs. Little can be said of the minerals of the county. At the north-east extremity of the shire coal is found, but the production in 1894 was only 904 tons, value £293; freestone is only found at one end of the county, and the houses are nearly all built of blue whinstone. At Stobo there is a valuable quarry of blue slate; limestone and marl are plentiful, and ironstone is found in some parts. The shire is almost devoid of manufactures, except at Peebles and Innerleithen, where there are several mills for the production of tweeds and shawls. The district possesses in the purity and fall of its waters a superiority which make it altogether advantageous for the establishment of paper and spinning mills, as well as general factories

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams. The upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedsmuir, in this county; it is fed by many tributaries, and, after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the German Ocean. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manow, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed, and the Leggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are salmon and trout, and a lake, called the West Water Loch, is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. The North British railway enters the north of the county at Leadburn, and sending a branch via Broomlee (for West Linton) and Dolphinton, runs due south to Peebles, where it turns eastward to Innerleithen and Galashiels, while a branch of the Caledonian railway runs from Peebles westward, through the centre of the county to Biggar.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The shire comprises 12 parishes and 4 parts of parishes, and 13 ecclesiastical parishes with parts of 4 others; it contains one royal burgh, Peebles, but possesses no representative burgh; the county, in conjunction with that of Selkirk, however, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament; the parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 was 3,504. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 (including the burgh of Peebles, but exclusive of railways, £21,190) was £116,255.

DRUMELZIER (pronounced Drumellyer) is a parish on the east bank of the Tweed, in the south-western part of the county, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, 3 miles south-east from Broughton station on the Carstairs and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south-west from Peebles. The parish church stands on the Powsail rivulet, a little way above its junction with the Tweed. Drumelzier Castle, formerly a seat of the once powerful family of Tweedie, stands in beautiful grounds, and is the last of a chain of fortresses placed every two or three miles on the banks of the Tweed. Dalwick House is the seat of Sir James Naesmyth bart. D.L., J.P. of Posso. Mrs. Jane A. White, of Netherurd, is the principal landowner. The area is 17,948 acres; rateable value, £3,569; the population in 1881 was 208, and in 1891, 187.

EDDLESTON (or EDDLESTONE) is a parish and village in Peebles poor combination and small debts court district, 4 miles north from Peebles, with a station on the North British railway. The Eddleston water, which takes its rise from various springs on the north and north-east boundaries of the parish, divides the village into two parts, and at Cowie's Lynn forms a cascade thirty-five feet high. The South Esk also has its source in a small lake within two miles of the village. Anciently the kirk and its small hamlet stood among the hills to the east, where some vestiges of them still survive the depreciation of time. Lord Elibank D.L., J.P. of Darn Hall; the trustees of the late C. J. Mackenzie esq. J.P. of Portmore (d. April 10, 1896), and James Wolfe Murray esq. of Cringletie, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 18,490; rateable value, £11,726; population in 1881, 711, and in 1891, 571.

INNERLEITHEN (or INVERLEITHEN) is a police burgh, in the small debt court district of Peebles, and a parish, near the mouth of the Leithen, within a quarter of a mile of the left bank of the Tweed, and environed on the east and west by high and partly wooded hills; a bridge across the Tweed connects the town with Traquair; here is a station on the North British railway, and is 28 miles south from Edinburgh, 16 north-west from Selkirk, 12 west from Galashiels and 6 east-south-east from Peebles. The burgh is governed by a provost and two bailies, and is lighted with gas. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the portion of Innerleithen formerly in Selkirk county has been transferred to Peebles-shire. The Roman Catholic church was built by benefactions left by Lady Louisa Stuart, of Traquair, the last of the direct line of that family, d. 1875. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland, and a savings bank here. Upon the banks of the Leithen are several large woollen factories, the machinery of which is partly propelled by the stream, and the works employ a considerable number of hands. Tweed and other woollen goods are made here. Some of the prosperity of the village is derived from the number of visitors who resort hither to the mineral springs, which possess properties similar to the waters of Harrogate and Strathpeffer, and are found beneficial in cases of scrofulous disorders, inflammation of the eye, and various diseases originating in impurity of the blood, and also for dyspepsia and stomach disorders. Additional celebrity has been imparted to this place by Sir Walter Scott, in his novel called "St. Ronan's Well," of which this spot is supposed to be the scene. The springs are frequented in the summer and there are a number of substantial houses, forming a street along the public road, with a variety of houses behind, let as private furnished lodgings, and there are likewise three hotels. A well-house was erected in 1826, which is now the property of the St. Ronan's Wells & Mineral Water Co. Limited, and a new pump-house is now (1896) being erected. About 1840 an association was instituted styled the "St. Ronan's Border Club;" it was composed of a number of gentlemen, under whose auspices was held an annual festival for the exhibition of Olympian and border games and gymnastic exercises. Though the club is extinct, the exhibition still takes place, the day of competition being usually in August. About 3 miles west, situated on a knoll, way be seen the ruins of Horsbrugh Castle one of the range of the ancient border peel towers; it is spoken of by Armstrong as being habitable in 1775. Between Innerleithen and Walkerburn are Purves Hill Terraces, which are planted with ash trees, but their contour may be easily made out; they vary from about 50 feet to about 120 feet in breadth, and the second in the ascent is over 900 feet in length; the depth between each terrace is about 14 feet. At one end of these terraces stood Purves Hill Tower, but a few stones only remain to attest its site. Glenormiston House is the residence of Michael G. Thorburn esq. J.P. George Miller-Cunningham esq. D.L., J.P. of Leithen Lodge, Major James Llewellyn Evans J.P. of Holylee, M. G. Thorburn esq. and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. D.L., J.P. of Traquair House, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 23,981 acres; rateable value, £22,282; the population in 1881 was 3,661, and in 1891, 4,161 in the civil parish, 2,775 in the ecclesiastical and 2,512 in the burgh.

KILBUCHO, see BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM AND KILBUCHO.

KIRKURD parish is in Peebles poor combination, and lies on the western confines of the county and is bounded on the north by the Tarth, a tributary of the Tweed. The Broughton brook, a tributary of the latter, flows through the parish. From the first-named river the land rises in cultivated and enclosed grounds, and then becomes hilly, with eminences covered with plantations; it is about 5 miles south from Dolphinton station on the Leadburn to Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and on the Carstairs and Dolphinton branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 north-west from Peebles. The ancient church of Kirkurd belonged at an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Solta, and it remained the property of that charitable institution until transferred to the hospital of Trinity Church, Edinburgh. Castlecraig is the seat of Sir Thos. David Gibson Carmichael bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. Acreage, 5,698; population in 1881, 282, and in 1891, 265.

WEST LINTON is a parish, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, with two stations, one at Broomlee, 1 mile south-east from the village, and another at Macbie Hill, 3 miles east, on the Leaburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway. The village is irregularly built, and is on the banks of the Lyne water. Besides this stream, the parish is watered by the North Esk, Tarth and West water, and although the greater part of the district is hilly, it is fertile, and famed for its excellent sheep pasturage; it is 10 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 14 north-west from Peebles, and about 11 north-north-east from Biggar. Linton confers the title of baron upon the family of Traquair. A branch of the Bank of Scotland and a savings bank are established in the village. Macbie Hill lies partly in this and partly in Newlands parish, and was inherited by Amelia, third daughter of Sir William Montgomery, up to 1830, when it passed by marriage to the family of the Beresfords. Medwyn is the seat of John Houblon Forbes esq. J.P. and the Hon. Alexandra C. M. Forbes. J. H. Forbes esq. and Sir James R. Fergusson bart. of Spital Haugh House, are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 25,256 acres; rateable value, £13,509; population in 1881 was 1,117, and in 1891, 1,005; of this number 359 were returned for the village.

Carlops, in West Linton parish, is a small village, on the northern verge of the county, about 3 miles north-east from West Linton. It originated in the year 1784, and takes its name from some localities in the neighbourhood called "Carling loups." It is a great summer retreat for visitors, and stands 1,000 feet above sea level. The falls of the North Esk at Patres Mill are of special interest.

LYNE is a parish, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, on the left bank of the stream of that name, and has a station on the Carstairs and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway. The Earl of Wemyss is the principal landowner. The area of the original parish of Lyne and Megget is 17,227 acres; rateable value of Lyne only, £1,753; the population of Lyne in 1891 was 104.

Megget, formerly with Lyne, a united civil parish, and still ecclesiastically annexed, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 56, transferred to Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire.

MANOR is a parish, bounded by Peebles on the north and Megget on the south, and its northern extremity abuts on the Tweed. The district is the vale of the Manor water, which rises in its southern hilly quarter, and falls into the Tweed about two miles west of Peebles, and from which the water supply for Peebles is taken. The parish, 3 miles south-west from Peebles station on the Caledonian and North British railway, is in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district; it formerly belonged to the rector of Peebles, and is supposed to derive its name from being the manor of that churchman. Here are the remains of a Roman camp, likewise a tower raised on an eminence, supposed to have been erected as a watch tower in early troublous times, and a huge upright stone, of great age, perforated with many holes. But the greatest attraction is, perhaps, the cottage once inhabited by the late David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom it is said Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the "Black Dwarf," in his novel of that name. The cottage stands in the vale near the public road at the farm steading called Woodhouse. Sir James Naesmyth bart. of Posso; James Tweedie esq. of Quarter; the Earl of Wemyss and the tutors of Sir Duncan Edwyn Hay are the principal landowners. Acreage, 16,622; rateable value, £5,019; population in 1881, 277, and in 1891, 249.

NEWLANDS is a parish, in Peebles poor combination, lying between West Linton and Eddleston parishes, watered by the Lyne and the Polintarf, and is bounded on the north-east by the North Esk, and on the north-west by the Medwyn, all of which are good trouting streams. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the hills are mostly green, without heath. Trees thrive in most parts of the parish, and the greater part is enclosed by hedgerows and fences. Newlands church is about 4 miles south from Broomlee station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and about 12 north-west from Peebles. There are two stations in the extreme northern part of the parish on the same branch, one at Lamancha, 5 miles north-east from the church, and another at Leadburn, 8 miles north-east. At the confluence of the Lyne water with the Tarth, stand the ruins of Drochil Castle, once a large structure, partly erected by the Regent Morton, and left unfinished when he was put to death on the scaffold. Lamancha was a seat of the Earls of Dundonald up to the beginning of the present century, and after several changes became the property of James Mackintosh esq. Whim House, in this parish, a massive, gloomy and unpicturesque edifice resembling an hospital, once the property of the Argyle family, and afterwards that of Sir James Montgomery, baron of the Exchequer, is now the seat of J. Maitland Thompson esq. Acreage of the parish, 12,518; population in 1881, 819, and in 1891, 715.

Noblehouse, in this parish, was formerly known by an inn at which the trustees of the turnpike roads used to assemble, but these meetings are now transferred to the County hall, Peebles. The seat Romanno, in the parish, was at the end of the 17th century the property and residence of Dr. Alexander Pennycuick, the author of some clever poems and a poetical "Description of Tweeddale," a district of which he was a native.

PEEBLES.

PEEBLES is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of its county and parish, the seat of a presbytery, and the head of a poor combination, 22 miles south from Edinburgh, 22 west-by-north from Selkirk, 54 north-north-east from Dumfries and 47 east-by-south from Glasgow, situated in the centre of the parish, on a beautiful and large plain, having the Tweed running along its southern side and the Peebles (or Eddleston) water along its northern limit, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills; the neighbourhood is adorned by numerous plantations and mansions. Among the latter, Kingsmeadows, Kerfield, Venlaw and Rosetta are the most conspicuous. For a long period Peebles has consisted of two towns, respectively called New and Old; the former occupies the ridge of a peninsula projecting westward, along the northern side of which flows the Eddleston, over which is a bridge forming a communication with the Old Town, which lies on the face of sloping ground. The Eddleston water, by a bend round the head of the peninsula, falls into the Tweed, over which there is another bridge of five arches, which has been widened and improved. The streets and principal shops in the town are lighted with gas by a joint-stock company. Since the opening of the railway between here and Edinburgh, and the Caledonian Company's branch from Symington, a vast number of visitors from thence and more distant places have made this place their residence in summer. There is a golf course near the town. It is not satisfactorily ascertained at what period Peebles was erected a royal burgh; Alexander III. was a munificent patron of it, and its original charter is supposed to have been bestowed by that monarch. Succeeding kings recognised its right to the distinction, among whom was James VI. whose charter granted to the burgesses an extensive range of landed property and right of common in different parts, nearly the whole of which has been lost. The government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, seven councillors and town clerk. A sheriff court is held on Tuesday and Thursday, and a sheriff small debt court every other Friday; general meetings of the County Council take place here in the months of May, October and December, and the meetings of lieutenancy as occasion requires. The Established church, erected on the site of the former edifice, was opened March 24th, 1887, and cost about £10,000, the architect being William Young, of London; it is built of stone, of the 13th century period of Gothic architecture of the Scottish type, and contains upwards of 1,200 sittings; the east front faces the High street, and the south front the bridge over the Tweed, and stands at a considerable height above it. The Episcopal church has a beautiful window of stained glass. The Leckie Memorial United Presbyterian church was erected in 1877 by the surviving sons and daughters of the Rev. Thomas Leckie, the first pastor of the Associate Burgher Congregation, and presented by them to the congregation in memory of their father: it is adjacent to the Episcopal church, and has a stained glass window. A United Presbyterian church, for the west congregation, has been erected at a cost of £4,000; it will seat 650 persons, and has a hall adjacent, to hold 300. The Baptist church is built of red sandstone, and has only recently(1895) been opened. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1858 by the exertions of the Rev. J. Chapperton, aided by numerous friends. Of the public buildings, in which assemblies and other meetings are held, are the Town and County Halls. The Hydropathic Establishment (Venlaw Towers) is built of red sandstone, on the face of a hill overlooking the town. The Chambers' Institution is a fine building in High street, containing a library of 16,000 volumes, a reading room, museum, or gallery of art. Within the edifice is also a large hall for lectures and exhibitions, and a county museum. This valuable property was presented to the burgh by the late William Chambers LL.D. founder, with his brother Robert, of the publishing firm of W. & R. Chambers, Edinburgh. He was born here in 1800, and in 1832 began publishing "Chambers' Edinburgh Journal," and subsequently numerous works for the popularisation of knowledge; in 1865 he was elected Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and died in 1883. The old Market Cross, which was in existence in 1320, was, by a resolution of the Council in 1807, ordered for sale as being ruinous. The shaft was secured by the late Sir John Hay, and was preserved in his grounds at Kingsmeadows till 1858, when he handed it over to the burgh. The late Dr. William Chambers then had it placed in the quadrangle of the Chambers' institution, in 1859, and there it remained till Major Thorburn, in 1895, restored it to its original position at the junction of High street, Northgate, and Eastgate. The Unionist club, in High street, was opened in October, 1895. There are four woollen mills, which give employment to a large number of hands, and several good hotels. The Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Co. Bank have each a branch here. Two newspapers are published here weekly, which have a good circulation. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March (for hiring servants) and the second Tuesday in October. The Royal Company of Archers, or Queen's Body Guard for Scotland, come to Peebles from Edinburgh occasionally, attired in the ancient dress of the bowmen of Scotia to shoot for the old-established prize of a silver arrow, given by the burgh to the most successful marksman. A poorhouse has been erected on the Rosetta road. An Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected by the local authorities of the county and the burghs of Peebles and Innerleithen, on the Kirklands, just opposite the poorhouse, and opened at the end of the year 1895; the building is a wood and iron one, and has 12 beds. The ruins of the two ancient churches are still extant, one of which was dedicated to St. Andrew, the other built by Alexander III. in the middle of the 13th century, and dedicated to the Holy Cross and St. Nicholas; the same monarch erected likewise a house contiguous, for himself, which continued a royal residence until the accession of James VI. to the throne of England. Neidpath Castle, a noble ruin, stands in a romantic glen, about a mile distant. This locality is much resorted to in summer for its excellent trout and salmon fishing. Half a mile to the east of the town, on a hill called Janet's Brae, may be discerned the traces of two ancient British camps. The parish of Peebles has an area of 16,597 acres; the population in 1881 was 4,059, and 1891, parish 5,261, town 4,704, burgh 3,059.

SKIRLING is a parish and small village, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district; in the village stands the parish church, which is on the road from Biggar to Peebles, about 2 miles east from Biggar station on the Carstairs and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, and, although belonging to Peebles-shire, it is within the presbytery of Biggar; the parish, which is about 3 miles long by 2½ in width, is bounded on the south by Biggar water, and west by Spittal brook, which separates it from Lanarkshire. The general features of the district are of the same hilly and undulating character noticeable throughout the surrounding country, but in a more advanced state of cultivation. The whole of the land in the parish belongs to Sir Thomas Carmichael bart. The area is 3,423 acres; rateable value, £2,937; population in 1881, 274, and in 1891, 216.

Post Office; John Laurie, sub-postmaster. Delivery, 8.30 a.m.; dispatch, 12.45 p.m. Letters received through Biggar, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office STOBO is a generally well cultivated and planted parish in the western part of the county, about 6 miles in length and 4 in breadth, lying for the most part on the left bank of the Tweed, and bounded on the north-east by the Lyne water; it is in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, and has a station on the Carstairs and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway. The greater part of the parish is hilly and of a pastoral character; but adjacent to the Tweed and the Lyne the land is well cultivated, and some of it finely planted—the latter character of improvement especially in the grounds surrounding Stobo Castle, a modern and beautiful edifice, a short distance from the parish church, within view of the Tweed, is the seat of Sir Graham Graham-Montgomery bart. of Stanhope. Sir G. Graham-Montgomery bart.; Sir James Naesmyth bart. D.L., J.P. of Posso, and the Earl of Wemyss are the principal landowners. Acreage, 10,302; rateable value, £7,075; population in 1881, 467, and in 1891, 433.

Post & Telegraph Office (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Peebles-shire added); Gabriel Anderson, postmaster. Delivery, 9.40 a.m.; dispatch, 4.20 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. Peebles is the nearest money order office

TRAQUAIR is a parish in the small debt court district of Peebles, and is on the south bank of the Tweed, and watered also by the river Quair; it lies opposite to Innerleithen, with which place it is connected by a modern girder bridge over the Tweed, and erected at a cost of about £3,500. The Traquair, Fingland and Newhall brooks and the Bold burn, all tributaries of the Tweed, flow through the parish. The general appearance of the parish is mountainous; in it are Gumscleugh and Minchmoor, lofty eminences lying on the old road to Selkirk, and over which Montrose retreated after his defeat at the battle of Philiphaugh. The church is 3½ miles south from Innerleithen station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, and 9 south-east from Peebles; there is also a station at Cardrona in this parish, on the same branch, 6 miles north from the church. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 59, a portion of Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire, has been transferred to Traquair. Traquair House has a tower at the north-east corner, believed to have been erected before the year 900, and large additions were made to this by the first Earl of Traquair; the title became extinct in 1861. The charterlary of the family contains many ancient and important family and historical documents, some of which are dated as far back as the 9th century, and bear the signature of Malcolm III. This old mansion-house, now the seat of the present descendant Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. D.L., J.P. who acquired the property through Lady Louisa Stuart, the last of that line (ob. 1875), is delightfully situated on the banks of the Tweed, where that river and the Quair unite; and about a quarter of a mile to the west of the mansion-house is the "Bush aboon Traquair" (the subject of the celebrated ballad), pointed out by a few birch trees, the remains of a thicket or arbour. The Glen, the seat of Sir Charles Tennant bart. D.L. is also in this parish. Cardrona House is the seat of Lord Watson. The area is 15,327 acres; the population in 1881 was 754, and in 1891, 700.

TWEEDSMUIR about the middle of the 17th century formed part of the parish of Drumelzier, when it was erected into a separate parish. It is in the Peebles poor combination and is in the south-western corner of the county, with Lanarkshire on its western and Dumfries-shire on its southern border. Within the bounds of the parish the river Tweed is augmented by the Fruid, Talla and Cor waters and several brooks. The water scheme (1895) of the Edinburgh and District Water Trust comprises the formation of a reservoir in the valley of the Talla, with pipes to convey 24,000,000 gallons daily, a bridge of granite and steel in place of the old narrow bridge at Tweedsmuir and a road to the reservoir. The church is 7 miles south from Broughton station on the Carstairs and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway, and about 16 south-west from Peebles. There are several ancient and rude strongholds in the parish, some of them dignified by the name of "Castles," but having few features of the fortress character. Earl of Wemyss and Walter Thorburn esq. M.P. of Badlieu are the principal landowners: Acreage, 23,469; population in 1881, 215, and in 1891, 207.
